The whole attack was thereupon carried out exactly on the minute planned. The men advanced from their shell-hole positions under cover of a pitch-black night and slid and wallowed through the slime and mud to their expected victory.

Through all the gale, night and day, the British airmen battled in the air like taunted eagles.

BRITISH CASUALTIES FOR THE WEEK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 10.—British casualties reported during the week ending yesterday totalled 17,505.

Officers killed or died of wounds 311, men 2,965; officers wounded or missing 862, men 13,367.

EDUCATION UP TO 18.

Features of New Education Bill Introduced in Britain.

The new Education Bill introduced in the British Commons, introduces important and far-reaching reforms in elementary school life. Summarized briefly, they are:

Age for leaving school raised to 14.

"Half-time" to end with the war.

Full-time education up to 16 or attendance at continuation schools (in the employers' time) compulsory up to 18.

Physical training in continuation schools.

It Seems a Pity to Let These Babies Starve!

TRUE, this is another Belgian appeal, and you are a little tired of Belgium's trouble. But, remember, while it is your problem how to plan variety in three meals a day, most of the Belgian population is standing in line hours every day for a bowl of soup and a slice of bread!

No child can thrive on this ration. Tens of thousands of Belgian children (under 12) are becoming victims of tuberculosis, rickets and other ailments due to the pitifully inadequate food.

The Belgian Children's Health Fund enables the Dutch authorities to take some of the starving little ones to Holland for care and treatment for six weeks. Then what? They must go back to Belgium to make way for other of the 15,000 odd in the waiting list. More could be done if you will listen to the appeal of these babies.

The Belgian Orphan's Fund takes care of fatherless, motherless, friendless waifs. Think how they lost their fathers. $4.70 of your money feeds, clothes and educates an orphan for a whole month. Can you hear the call?

Whatever you contribute goes entire to the Dutch authorities, through the Belgian Minister of the Interior (at Le Havre, France). Not a penny is deducted for administrative expenses, even for this advertising. It is absolutely guaranteed, too, that the Germans derive no benefit whatsoever.

Huns Swallow Surging Grief, "Knowing That It Had To Be"

German Chancellor Also Suggests That Every Teuton "Gladly" Makes Sacrifice of Blood Demanded

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 9.—Chancellor Michaelis in an address to the Reichstag main committee, as reported in Berlin despatches, replied to the charge that officials had undertaken propaganda for the new Fatherland party, which is carrying on a movement in favour of a German peace. The Chancellor laid down the principle, which applies to Prussian officials as well as those connected with the Imperial Government, that all are free in their present opinion and are permitted to belong to any party so long as the Empire is not endangered thereby.

To force or induce subordinates to adopt an attitude in favour of any party, the Chancellor continued, would be to abuse official positions. This will not be permitted, the Chancellor said, and obedience to this principle will be enforced in cases brought to his attention.

"The Governments of the Federal States are endeavouring to regard all political leanings with complete objectiveness and to do full justice to every political opinion," said the Chancellor. "I adopt this attitude because I am convinced that every political party honestly desires to do its best for the common weal. It is to be greatly regretted that this mutual faith should have been pushed into the background in the course of the controversy in the last few weeks and that mutually antagonistic forms of propaganda should have been the result.

"Every German readily and gladly makes the sacrifice of blood or measures demanded from him.

"Among us is hardly anyone who, remembering what he has had to give up, does not gulp down his upsurging grief with the reflection that it had to be."

The Chancellor pointed out that Germany's opponents also are compelled to make sacrifices, and said that if this were kept in mind the agitation which had made its appearance should become impossible.

Lieut.-Gen. Von Stein, Prussian War Minister, said there was no intention of putting politics into the army, but that, on the other hand, it was intended to prevent this, and that any attempt at propaganda on behalf of any party had been prohibited.

Cash Prices Hold Firm

Corn Market is Easier as Result of Bearish Report

The settlement of the elevator strike at Fort William is welcomed by the trade generally, as a prolonged strike would soon have brought disastrous conditions. Already stocks in store at Fort William began to show heavy decreases. Now that the situation has been relieved there is a more comfortable feeling all round. Although there is a strong demand for oats, the cash price is fractionally easier. The corn market is also easier as a result of the bearish government report issued yesterday, showing much larger yield than had been expected.

Manitoba wheat— No. 1 northern, $2.23; No. 2 northern, $2.20, store; No. 3, $2.17; No. 4, $2.09; including 2-cent tax, in store, Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 67 3-8c; No. 3, 64 3-8c; extra No. 1 feed, 64 3-8c; No. 1 feed, 63 5-8c; in store, Fort William.

Barley—New, $1.18 to $1.20.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.75.

Manitoba flour—First patents, in jute bags, $11.50; second patents, $11; strong bakers', $10.60.

Ontario flour — Winter, according to sample in bags, prompt shipment, $9.80 Montreal, $9.60 Toronto.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal; shorts, $42; bran, $35; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings, $45 to $46.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $12 to $13; No. 2, $11 to $11.50; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, car lots, per ton, $7 to $7.50.

Cattle Market.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 27 cars, with 236 head of cattle, 33 calves, 306 hogs, and 989 sheep and lambs, very light weight, but as there were about 1,200 head of cattle left over from Monday's market, there was no scarcity of supplies. The demand for stale and filled cattle, however, was not very keen, and the market was slow and inclined to drag, though at the close everything was pretty well cleaned up. Prices held fairly steady, quality considered, the bulk of the offerings being common to medium.

Choice stockers and feeders in good steady demand and firm.

Good demand milkers and springers.

Calves steady.

Sheep and lambs about 25c easier.

The father of a certain charming girl is well known in this town as, "a very tight old gentleman." When dad recently received a young man, who for some time had been "paying attention" to the daughter, it was the old gentleman who made the first observation:

"Huh! So you want to marry my daughter, eh?"

"Yes, sir; very much indeed."

"Um—Let me see. Can you support her in the style in which she has been accustomed?"

"I can, sir," said the young man, "but I am not mean enough to do it."

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"
By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

CHAPTER VI.

Portugese Joe, after his quick encounter with Barton in the road below the house, had spent some while in searching for his rapier. The twist of the Puritan's forearm had whirled it far into the underbrush; it was full ten minutes before he recovered it and by this time Barton had mounted to the crest of the hill.

The group of figures by the roadside, being now joined by certain of their companions who had remained behind to beach and secure the boat, began a noisy ascent toward the house. They did not, however, proceed by way of the brush-tangled hillside, as the Puritan had done, but took the winding path.

A motley crowd they were, splashing the moonlit road with strange and fantastic shadows; Tench, bleak and grim, his squat figure with its projecting weapons silhouetted against the white sand like a huge spider; Long Rodgers, bulking tower-like beside his companions; De Rocheville, a late addition to Ormiston's forces, showing his French blood in a costume of blue velvet slashed with orange; half a score of others, fighting men all, from their kerchief-bound heads to their jack boots or leather-thonged sandals, as brazen and forthright a lot of swashbucklers as the moon had shone on in many a night. With them were several women, wearing on their backs the loot of many a sunken galleon, vulture-faced, striving with the manners of the courtesan to ape the graces of those delicately bred women in whose costumes they now so gaily masqueraded. Fine birds, if fine feathers might make them so, with dead men's jewels clacking horribly about their necks, matching the hard brilliance of their faces. Half a score of negro slaves, with torches, brought up the rear of the straggling group; they had been the rowers in the boat, now they had other duties; Ormiston's seachest was to be taken aboard, if the expedition became a fact. A splendidly muscled lot they were, stripped to the waist, their bodiees like polished ebony in the flare of the torches.

Portugese Joe had gone on ahead. A swift suspicion of the reason for the Puritan's presence in the neighbourhood of Ramon'a house caused a grin of satisfaction to wrinkle his mouth. His desire for her had not diminished by repression; here, perhaps, was a weapon, forged and ready for his hand. He reflected, however, that it might prove a two edged sword, and proceeded with caution.

Now that he stood within the garden, doubts assailed his first enthusiasm. The girl seemed undisturbed. Was it then possible that he had been wrong, or, being right, had his shot so taken effect that the fellow even now lay dead among the tangled shrubbery of the hillside? He searched her face with narrowed eyes, but she met his gaze bravely enough.

"Whom do you seek, Portugese?" she asked again, smiling.

"That psalm-singing rascal who struck me—three days gone."

"Why should you think to find him here?"

"He ran this way, after I'd winged him, in the road. Have you seen him?"

The girl rose with lazy indifference.

"No Portugee," she said. "I have not seen him. Still, you might ask the Firebrand. He is within. Shall I call him?" There was a prodigious threat behind her quiet smile. "Then I can also tell him why you seek the fellow—how he defended me from your insults." She paused, her glances playing swiftly from the man before her to the open door of the house. In every cadence of her voice the Portugee sensed a challenge. He also looked toward the open door, a cringing terror in his eyes.

"You'd not do that," he whispered. "Then trouble me no more with your street bawls. I have seen no one. Sufficiende!" The final word, in her native tongue, smote him like the crack of a whip. He raised his rapier, and with an exclamation drove it back into its scabbard.

"Carramba!" he cried. "Let the rascal go. 'Tis greater joy, sweet mistress, to be here—alone—with you." He went toward the girl, a smile creasing his bronzed face. "You know," he whispered, with a furtive glance over his shoulder, "I've sworn to have you, some day, for my own. The Firebrand is a lucky man."

"Luckier than you, you Portugal dog!" she flung at him, "if he should hear you!"

Again the Portuguese glanced toward the house, then turned and went to the gate. The approaching party was close at hand; a lively crackle of laughter, a shrill buzz of conversation mingled with the notes of the chanty.

"Say nothing of the matter," he whispered to Ramona, "and no more will I. Here come Master Tench and the rest." The noisy party crowded into the garden.

Life had dealt hardly with Ramona de Lara, during the years that she spent in Port Royal, and more than once it had seemed to her that she could not face it unafraid, but at no time had a situation confronted her so cruel in its possibilities, so grim in its suggestion of tragedy as this. All the fears to which these possibilities gave rise moved unsteadily about in her brain. Would the Portugee remain silent? She knew that he more than half-suspected the truth. Would Barton recover consciousness, and by calling to her, let loose the terrors of Ormiston's wrath? Or, should he recover his senses, and yet keep still, would the things that he must hear tell him that he spent his love upon a light woman? Would—and this was perhaps the most imminent possibility—would some member of the company that now thronged the garden discover, through inopportune chance, the silent figure among the bushes? The place was not of great extent; the chances of escape small. The night was the only circumstance in her favour. Torn, battered as she had been, throughout the earlier moments of the evening, she found that only by the exercise of all the powers of her will was she able to face with a smile the entering party. She swept them with a trembling glance. God be praised, Mistress Devereux was not among them. The suspicions that the woman had endeavoured to implant in Ormiston's mind had happily brought forth no fruit; it seemed that she did not dare go further, at least not now. With a quick nod to the Portugee, Ramona turned to the others.

The negro slaves had grouped themselves along the rear wall of the garden, their torches giving to the scene a smoky brilliance. The other members of the party flung themselves into the chairs, the benches beside the fountain, the hammock, or assembled in a noisy group, about the table. Susannah, one of the vulture-eyed women, whose diamonds had been paid for with some of the noblest blood of Spain, perched herself upon the low tabouret beside the hammock. Thus seated, she was scarce ten feet from the point where Barton lay. Was he dying, Ramona wondered? Was he indeed already dead? Love, too, might have died, in that hour of horror, the girl thought, knowing that not even to check the ebbing life of the man she loved could she move one step toward him. The sword of Damocles trembled beneath its gossamer thread. Would she be able to speak, and have her words not shriek out to these people the agony of her heart.

"Welcome, my friends," she said with dry lips. "It warms my heart to see so brave a company. A pleasant evening to you, Master Tench."

The latter nodded, regarding her sourly, puffing the while upon his short clay pipe. Women he regarded as creatures of the devil; he would have none of them.

JOFFRE'S MAIL BAG HEAVIEST IN FRANCE

PARIS, Oct. 6.—The heaviest mail bag of any person of France is probably that of Marshall Joffre.

The Marshal is between two fires. He still receives an enormous number of letters from women and children in America, who assure him of their admiration. On the other hand, French soldiers at the front, both officers and poilus, keep up a running fire of correspondence with the Marshal on various subjects. Numerous secretaries carry out the Marshal's order that all letters must be answered.

All of Marshal Joffre's correspondence leaving the Ecole Militaire, where he has his office, is carried in French and International mails without postage. In lieu of stamps a small red seal—a circle in which are two crossed Marshal's batons with the words "Republique Francaise, Marshal Joffre"—carries the mail of the Marshal anywhere in the world.

MR. MORGAN'S FAITH IN STEEL

The experience of an old fisherman with Steel common purchased on recommendation of the late J. P. Morgan serves to illustrate the faith the eminent financier had in the big Corporation and its future.

The man was employed on Mr. Morgan's yacht. But there came a time when sailoring had lost its charm for him, and he pined for a home on the Jersey coast, there to end his days fishing. He explained his plans to Mr. Morgan, adding: "My wife and myself bought a little place down near Barnegat. After paying for everything, we have $1,000 left. What shall we do with it?"

That was back in 1903, when Steel touched 8 3-8. The fisherman bought 100 shares at 9. Since then he has been bombarded with advices from the brokerage house through which he purchased the stock, urging him to sell. Recently he wrote them:

"Please do not send me any more letters, no matter how high Steel goes. Mr. Morgan tol dme to hold on, no matter what happened, and that's good enough for me. I'll keep Steel until I die."—Wall Street Journal.

"Have you done anything to help your country?" "Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, "though largely in a negative way. I have kept silent a number of times when I was tempted to jump in and complicate the debate."—Washington Star.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Women Once Invalids

Now in Good Health Through Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Say it is Household Necessity. Doctor Called it a Miracle.

All women ought to know the wonderful effects of taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound even on those who seem hopelessly ill. Here are three actual cases:

Harrisburg, Penn.—"When I was single I suffered a great deal from female weakness because my work compelled me to stand all day. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for that and was made stronger by its use. After I was married I took the Compound again for a female trouble and after three months I passed what the doctor called a growth. He said it was a miracle that it came away as one generally goes under the knife to have them removed. I never want to be without your Compound in the house."—Mrs. Frank Knobl, 1642 Fulton St., Harrisburg, Penn.

Hardly Able to Move.

Albert Lea, Minn.—"For about a year I had sharp pains across my back and hips and was hardly able to move around the house. My head would ache and I was dizzy and had no appetite. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, I am feeling stronger than for years. I have a little boy eight months old and am doing my work all alone. I would not be without your remedies in the house as there are none like them."—Mrs. F. E. Yost, 611 Water St., Albert Lea, Minn.

Three Doctors Gave Her Up.

Pittsburg, Penn.—"Your medicine has helped me wonderfully. When I was a girl 18 years old I was always sickly and delicate and suffered from irregularities. Three doctors gave me up and said I would go into consumption. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and with the third bottle began to feel better. I soon became regular and I got strong and shortly after I was married. Now I have two nice stout healthy children and am able to work hard every day."—Mrs. Clementina Duerring, 34 Gardner St., Troy Hill, Pittsburg, Penn.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice,—it will be confidential.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Chester Inn

It Proved a Fitting Place For a Wedding

By ETHEL HOLMES

John Overaker, a member of the national guard of the state of New York, was engaged to be married to Helen Withers, who lived in Chicago. John was called to the colors with the expectation of being sent to the war at an early date. Most young men who are called upon to fight for their country and have sweethearts seem to prefer to go forth as married rather than as bachelors. At any rate, John Overaker proposed a wedding to his fiancee, and his proposition was acceded to by the lady.

Since Miss Withers lived a thousand miles from Mr. Overaker and he could not get a leave to be absent long enough to go to Chicago, be married and return, an agreement was made between the lovers that she should come to him instead of his going to her for the wedding. Miss Withers did not like the idea of a wedding in Mr. Overaker's home instead of her own, or in a hotel, or in the office of a justice of the peace. Just as she was about to start east she received a letter from a Mrs. Chester, an intimate friend living near New York, to whom she had written of her quandary, inviting her to be married from her house. Not having time before starting to write fully on the subject, Miss Withers scratched off a brief note to her lover asking him to meet her on a certain date at the location in which her friend lived, adding, "Come to the Chester."

It is unfortunate to be obliged to write hurried instructions for a meeting. Miss Withers' ink gave out as she finished the word "Chester," and there was none left for the "s." When Overaker read the note he inferred that the Chester was an inn. He was too busy with his military duties to read the missive over a second time. Indeed, it was difficult for him to do all he had to do before leaving to keep the appointment.

Overaker concluded to make the journey in civilian dress, though he took with him a uniform in which to be married. After spending an hour on a train he alighted at his station. A taxi chauffeur stepped up to him, and Overaker told him that he wished to go to "the Chester." The man knew of no such hotel; but, preferring not to confess his ignorance and having often seen a handsome residence which was known as the Chester place, he concluded to take the chances of its being the house his fare meant. The consequence was that Overaker was driven to the house where he was to meet his bride, thinking that he was going to a hotel.

A maid in black and white uniform opened the door for him, and in a few minutes a lady came in to receive him.

"I would like a room, if you please," he said. "I am to meet a lady from Chicago here, Miss Withers. Has she arrived?"

Now, the lady was Miss Withers' friend, Mrs. Chester. She had expected Miss Withers a few hours before Overaker arrived, but had received a telegram from some one—doubtless traveling with Miss Withers—stating that there had been a railway accident and consequent delay. The fact that the telegram made no mention of Miss Withers having escaped injury looked ominous. It occurred to Mrs. Chester that it would be better for the present to keep the matter from Mr. Overaker. His having mistaken her house for an inn facilitated her doing so.

"The lady has not yet arrived," she said, "but I have been advised of her coming."

"I am Lieutenant John Overaker. I am to meet Miss Withers here to be married to her. Did she mention this fact?"

"She did. She is to be married in this house."

"Do you know if she expects me to make the necessary preparations for the wedding?"

"I will do that for her."

"Indeed. Have you had any previous acquaintance with her?"

"Oh, yes; Miss Withers has been here a number of times."

"Very well. I suppose there is nothing for me to do, so with your permission I will go to my room. I have been so busy lately that I have had very little sleep. I may get a nap before my fiancee's arrival. It will freshen me."

This suited Mrs. Chester exactly, since she hoped to get news of Miss Withers while her fiance was resting. She led the way upstairs to a chamber, Overaker following. It did not look like a hotel bedroom, there being pictures on the walls and various articles that one does not find except in a private house, but Overaker was too much absorbed in his approaching nuptials, to say nothing of his military situation, to dwell upon the condition of his room, and after getting the dust off him he threw himself on the bed, closed his eyes and in a few minutes dropped asleep.

The next news Mrs. Chester received of Miss Withers was brought by the lady herself. She had not been injured in the railroad accident and was perfectly well. Mrs. Chester informed her of the arrival of her fiance; that he had mistaken the house for an inn; that she had permitted him to remain in error that she might better save him from anxiety concerning his expected bride.

Miss Withers went to Overaker's room, knocked gently at the door and, receiving no other reply than a snore, pushed the door open sufficiently to enable her to look in at her slumbering fiance. He seemed so dead tired and was resting so comfortably that she had not the heart to awaken him. Going downstairs to her friend, she said:

"I don't know but that we had better permit him to remain in ignorance of the fact that he is in a private house. He is very sensitive as to his treatment of others, and to know that he had spoken to my friend and hostess as a landlady would dampen his spirits for the wedding so soon to follow."

"I have been thinking of the same thing and quite agree with you," replied Mrs. Chester. "There will be no necessity to make an explanation. You can tell him about it at some future time."

At the end of two hours after Miss Withers' arrival the time appointed for the wedding arrived, and the butler was sent to Overaker's room to awaken him and announce Miss Withers' arrival. The announcement tended to arouse the lieutenant, who completed his toilet and, going down into the drawing room, embraced the girl who was soon to be his bride. She explained the delay in her arrival, and her presence uninjured did away with the shock that might otherwise have been expected.

"I think we need some refreshment," said Overaker and, stepping to an electric button, pushed it. The butler entered, and Overaker said:

"Bring us in a bite of anything you may have in the larder and let me have a wine card."

The butler had been coached and retired with a simple "Yes, sir." The bride to be was about to inform her lover that he was making a mistake, but changed her mind, concluding to let the matter take its course. There being some delay in serving the refreshment, Overaker rang the bell again, intending to give the butler a piece of his mind for being so long. But the man brought with him a tray, on which were a dainty luncheon and a bottle of wine.

"All right," said Overaker. "Where's the wine card?"

"The landlady says that it will be in the bill," was the reply.

Lieutenant Overaker and his bride to be enjoyed a very delicious luncheon together. Overaker, it must be admitted, was more in a condition to make merry than his fiancee, who was beginning to feel somewhat concerned as to the treatment the friend who was permitting the use of her house for the bridal was receiving at the hands of her lover. This belief that Mrs. Chester was a landlady and was to receive pay for what she was giving was becoming embarrassing. Something must be done to change the status.

"Don't you think," said Miss Withers, "that since Mrs. Chester has been so kind as to make the arrangements for our wedding we should invite her to lunch with us?"

"Certainly. Bring her in."

Miss Withers went out and returned with Mrs. Chester, who played her part as landlady admirably and treated the bride and groom with the respect due them from one of her station. Overaker drew the line between his landlady and an equal, much to her amusement, while his fiancee was a trifle embarrassed at the situation.

The wedding was set for 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Overaker was to leave to rejoin his regiment at 5, while the bride was to remain for a brief visit. When the parson arrived the household entered a room that had been properly decorated and awaited the coming of the bride and groom. The latter was somewhat surprised at the richness of the decorations and voted the landlady who had prepared them a trump. But what surprised him more was to find her gowned and jeweled in a manner not befitting the landlady of the Chester inn. There was still another surprise—a necklace that only a person of wealth could afford, which Mrs. Chester gave the bride for a wedding present.

By this time Overaker began to suspect that something was wrong. But he did not communicate his suspicions to his bride. Shortly before leaving the house he said to her:

"I suppose I am in for some expense in this matter."

"Not at all," was the reply. "Since we could not be married in Chicago, where all the expense would have fallen on my father, the bills here are all paid, the same as if the wedding had taken place at my home."

"But"— began the groom and paused.

"But what?"

"How about the luncheon and wine I ordered?" stammered the lieutenant.

The bride broke into a laugh, called her friend, "the landlady," and all was explained to the groom.

"I am delighted," said Mrs. Chester, "with the outcome of this affair. When this morning I received the telegram announcing the accident I was filled with terror lest we should have something very different from a wedding. I had no idea in permitting Lieutenant Overaker to remain in error, turning the affair into a bit of fun. He should certainly thank me for saving him from several hours' bitter anxiety."

"And he has also to thank you," replied the lieutenant, "for a luncheon and a bottle of wine."

When Lieutenant Overaker returned from the bridal trip, which lasted but a few days, they went to Mrs. Chester's house. Since Overaker could not atone for mistaking her for a landlady by a gift he declared that he would name his first girl child for her.

OUR MUNITION GIRLS

The following verse written by one of the munition girls in England, was furnished The Examiner by Mr. C. E. Coleman:

The mainsprings of our nation
Are the workers of to-day,
Who are standing at their benches
Making fuses for the fray.

What would we do without them—
The girls of British grit—
Who help to fill the places
Of the men we know are fit?

It is quite a treat to see them,
As they stand there side by side,
Filling Shells with powder
For the lads across the tide.

They run the risk quite bravely
Of the dangers everywhere,
And, unlike the Huns, will never Give up in despair.

We keep up great traditions,
The grandest in the world;
But who do we depend upon?
Our brave Munition Girls.

There are girls of all descriptions,
Young and old as well,
From all parts of the Empire,
Who help to make the shells.

They all show great examples
To the shirkers in the rear,
Who object to fight for England,
As they meet them with a sneer.

They pack with consolation
The bullets one by one,
As they see how they are helping
To crush the murderous Hun.

Some folks say with anger,
"Why give them such a wage?"
They only are the folks that read
The outside of the page.

But turn the cover of the book,
And scan the leaves inside;
And read of Deadly Poisons
And dangers they've defied.

Among the deadly Mercury,
That takes away the bloom
Of all the happy faces
You see in many a room.

So surely, when you think awhile,
And reason matters out,
Just put yourself into the place
Of those you talk about.

You will come to this conclusion,
If you turn another page—
The Hours, the Risk—you'll find they earn
Each penny of their wage.

So when you feel inclined to slight
Munition Girls again,
Remember you are tampering with
The Steam Power of the train.

So, "Three cheers for Munition Girls!"—
The girls of England's pride,
Who risk their lives to help our lads
Win victory o'er the tide.

When you are in your cosy bed,
These girls are hard at work;
As hours and hours pass swiftly by,
You never see them shirk.

So when to-night before you lay
Your weary head to rest,
Just send a prayer to thank the Lord
That with these girls we're blest.

Good-night, my brave Munition Girls,
God bless you night and day,
And keep you safe from danger
While the Lads are far away.

A. LANKENAU.

JUST LIKE A HOUSECLEANING

Every room needs an occasional "Cleaning up", no matter how carefully the regular sweeping and dusting is done. Especially is this true after any unusual event, a party, a wedding or a quilting bee.

So it is with your body. No matter how regular your habits or well cooked your food, there comes a time when you don't feel just right. You may recall an unusually hearty meal or two, irregular hours, or eating something that "didn't agree with you", or it may be just the "dust-gathering".

In any case a few doses of a really good carthartic is all you need to put you right. For this purpose nothing is quite so suitable as

Chamberlain's Tablets

Two or three after supper the first night, and one each night for two or three days, and your digestive apparatus is just like the well-cleaned room. Every part of your body is more vigorous, you go about your work with a new feeling and begin again to enjoy life. Are these benefits not worth getting? You know they are.

And you need have no hesitation about beginning them for fear you must "keep it up". The effect is just the opposite.

WHEN you call a telephone number from memory or when you guess at it you are apt to be wrong.

¶ The mind has a trick of transposing figures—instead of "1263" you are quite likely to say "1623."

¶ Also, telephone numbers, firm names, etc., are frequently changed.

¶ And when you thus ask for the wrong number, you waste your own time, the operator's, and the time of the person called through your error.

HOW TO DRY PEARS.

Pare, core and cut into eights.

Or core and slice in rings, using fruit or vegetable slicer.

Do not let stand long before drying.

To prevent discoloration, dip fruit, as it is prepared, for one minute, in a cold salt bath (1 ounce of salt to a gallon of water.)

Place in colander and set in container and steam for 10 minutes.

Remove the surplus moisture by placing fruit between towels or by exposing to the sun and air.

Spread thinly on trays or earthenware plates.

Dry in sun, in oven, over the kitchen stove or before an electric fan until the pears are tough and somewhat leathery.

Stir from time to time. The finished product will not look like fresh fruit, but it's good to eat.

Praises Garlic In Therapeutics

It Proved to Be the Best of 56 Remedies for Tuberculosis Tried on Blackwell's Island

The Medical Record devotes a page of editorial comment to the therapeutic uses of garlic, reflecting somewhat bitterly on the former dependence of the United States upon German patented chemicals. A realization of this dependence, the writer says, is responsible for an awakened desire to return to nature's products when possible. Hence, vegetable drugs are coming into their own again; and, it seems, garlic plays a role by itself. Here is what is said about it:

"Among these garlic, Allium sativum seems to be swinging into therapeutic favour. It comes with no surname time harmless to the tissues, of the vegetable drugs and long tried in the hands of both the profession and the laity. While its popularity with physicians declined in favour of the newer treatments, old women in out-of-the-way villages have gone quietly on applying the juice of garlic and onions in the home treatment of whooping cough, typhoid fever, pneumonia, and diphtheria with marked success.

"Probably few vegetable remedies have been credited with a wider range of therapeutic value. William Charles Minchin, writing in The Medical Press and Circular for June 13, 1917, gives the results of years of special study of the therapeutic action of oil of garlic. This oil is composed of allyl sulphide with volatile terpenes, and would appear to be nature's antiseptic for internal use, destroying many pathogenic germs within the body, and being at the body tissues may be saturated with In his respect it seems to differ from every other known antiseptic of any great value.

"Its germicidal power outside the body, compared with that of carbolic acid or other toxic substance, does not seem to be very great, but the so volatile that it may be beneficially oil of garlic for a considerable period of time, even continually, without injury to them. The oil appears to be so volile that it may be beneficially used by inhalation in pulmonary conditions, and when applied locally to any part of the skin it readily penetrates to the deepest issues in the region of the application, reaching even the bones and finds its way into the blood current, so that its odor can be detected in the breath in from ten to fifteen minutes after the application to the skin. According to Minchin, it destroys the germs of many infectious diseases as typhus, typhoid, and diphtheria.

"When typhus or typhoid fever has become established in the body, he recommends the use of one dram of succus allii sativi every four to six hours, in beef tea or with syrup. In typhoid, if given early, he says it has a definite abortive action, but is beneficial at any stage of the disease.

"In diphtheria garlic is to be applied with but little dilution. It is necessary to keep it in the mouth constantly for several hours so that it may act as a local application to the throat and surrounding tissues. The exact amount used is no so important as is the constant application of it to the tissues where it is needed. The simplest way, Minchin says, is to have the patient keep a clove of garlic in the mouth and occasionally crush it between the teeth, thus expressing the juice. This may be kept up indefinitely. In three or four hours, from one to two ounces may be used in this way. At the expiration of this time one not infrequently finds that all membrane has been removed from the tonsils, and the temperature has fallen even to normal. This treatment is also beneficial according to Minchin, in those cases which have been too late for serum to be of use. A continuation of this method of treatment carries on the beneficial action, and while one or two ounces a day is sufficient, an overdose cannot be taken. The patient suffering from diphtheria neither smells nor tastes garlic, but merely finds it hot.

"In the treatment of whooping cough Minchin has found garlic to be most efficacious. In the cases of adults an inhalation of the fresh succus allii sativi rapidly relieves the distressing symptoms. It must be used, however, continuously from three to five hours for two or three days in order to produce the best results. In the case of infants and young children twenty minims to half a dram of the juice of the garlic taken internally every four hours in a little syrup gives speedy relief in the early stages. The author lays special emphasis upon the beneficial effects of garlic in the treatment of tuberculosis, and he quotes the results obtained by the staff of the Metropolitan Hospital, New York, in the treatment of 1,082 cases of tuberculosis according to fifty-six different methods, out of which garlic gave the best results.

"These are only a few of the conditions in which Minchin says garlic has been used with strikingly beneficial results; it has been recommended as a stimulating antispasmodic, and as an effective detergent of foul ulcers and sloughing wounds---indeed so nearly a panacea does it seem to be that one's skepticism is necessarily aroused. Nevertheless it is worthy of a trial, and perhaps if its virtues should prove to be real some pharmaceutical chemist may devise a method, in the interests of the bystander, of oppressing the odour without weakening the therapeutic efficacy.

"One interesting observation is alluded to by Minchin, who says that some years ago the health officer of Croatia ventured the opinion that the well-known longevity of the non-combatant portion of Bulgaria's population was due to their ingestion of large quantities of garlic, and not, as Metchnikoff assumed, to their use of sour milk and its products. Against this however, is the fact that other alliophagists, who know not the Bulgarian bacillus, Spaniards, for example, attain to no unusual length of years."

Use Newbro's Herpicide

IN TIME AND YOU WILL NEVER NEED FALSE HAIR

Wearing false hair is a harmless deceit of which many ladies are guilty. These women are all objects for sympathy rather than criticism.

Early neglect in the care of the scalp has caused the loss of so much hair that their personal appearance is sadly marred. To correct this defect they resort to artificial hair hoping by so doing to hide the results of their earlier inattention to the details of their toilet. These unfortunates are deceiving no one but themselves as no artificial hair no matter how costly, ever has the snap and luster nor can it be made to look as pretty and attractive as natural hair.

Most ladies would resent any imputation of personal carelessness and neglect. And yet very many permit their natural hair to become so dull, brittle and lusterless that it looks no better than that bought at the store.

All this is as unfortunate as it is unnecessary. Hair that is unsightly or thin may usually be attributed to the destroying effects of Dandruff. This destructive formation shortly robs the hair of life, with the result that it finally loosens and drops out.

There is a preparation, sold and guaranteed by all dealers, the intelligent use of which will kill the dandruff germ. It cleanses the scalp of all accumulations and makes the hair shine with the luster of life and beauty. That remedy is Newbro's Herpicide, the Original Germ-Remedy for Dandruff. In no way can you add more to your personal charm and attractiveness than by the use of this remarkable and well known scalp prophylactic.

On account of its astonishing merit and its delightful and exquisite odor, Herpicide finds users everywhere among all classes. It may be purchased in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes at all drug stores and toilet goods counters. Applications may be obtained at the better barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Upon receipt of 10 cents in postage or silver to cover cost of packing and mailing, The Herpicide Co., Dept. S, Detroit, Mich., will send to any address a nice sample bottle of Herpicide and an interesting booklet on the care of the hair.

FIND OUT WHY HE CRIES.

To discover the obscure pain in baby's ear is not always a simple matter, even for the alert and observant specialist. True enough, the little hands find their way at times to the neighborhood of the sensitive area, but this is by no means as common a signal of earache as one might expect. It is only when the baby's cries, as well as the presence of fever, cannot be laid to other portions of the infant's anatomy, that the ear falls under suspicion. Then the nurse or parent, by gently pressing in front over and behind the baby's ear will discover a tender point by the increased tendency of the child's cries or by some other overt act of pain. Once convinced that the trouble is in the ear, temporary expedients of relief and comfort should be followed as soon as possible by consulting with the family doctor. In this way much subsequent disturbance of hearing may be prevented.

OPEN NOSTRILS! END A COLD OR CATARRH

How To Get Relief When Head and Nose are Stuffed Up.

Count fifty! Your cold in head or catarrh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more snuffling, hawking, mucous discharge, dryness or headache; no strangling for breat st night.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothing and healing the swollen or inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable. Relief is sure.

CURRENT COMMENT

New York "Sun"—Nothing should be done in future to emphasize or even to recognize any distinction between the men who volunteer for service and those who entered the national army by way of the selective draft. The word conscript with all its implications should be blotted out. The hardships and perils of the service are to be sustained equally by all types of efficiency and valor are equally open.

Philadelphia "Evening Ledger"—Sweden has been deceitful, but she is not mad. She has seen, as Germany has never seen that the chief disadvantage of violating the law of nations is the burden of hatred that such violation invites as a heritage for future years and she is trying to make amends. The unhappiest men in the world after the war will be the German trade agents. Imagine trying to sell "Made-in-Germany" articles to the families of Zeppelin victims!

I.O.F.

Chicago "Tribune"—France keeps on financing her weaker allies. The Bank of France, let alone other financial institutions, has advanced $550,000,000. Voila! Before the war Germans admitted a dread of French fury which, though it could not last, was terrific at the outset. What they may well dread now is French thrift, French determination, French coolness and French staying power.

Troy "Times"—Several prizes have been offered for war songs. In one of the contests 4,691 persons submitted verses, and a Rochester woman was pronounced the winner and was awarded $500. Doubtless the contests give great impetus to verse-making. Yet it is indisputably true that great poems and songs are not often evolved in that fashion. One cannot conceive of 'The Star Spangled Banner' or 'America' as the result of a prize contest.

BRITON A BETTER FIGHTER.

That the fighting qualities of the British soldier are superior to those of the German abundant proof is to be found in the records (published in a recent Gazette) of officers and men who have been awarded decorations. There are many instances where two or three of our men by the display of bulldog courage and amazing audacity have compelled parties varying in number from 15 to 150 to surrender. Some of the finest exploits are credited to n.c.o.s and men.

HUNS WILL SOON HAVE TO RETREAT IN FLANDERS

Effect of the Success of Allied Drive is Becoming Apparent---Australians Capture Celtic Farm East of Broodseinde in Desperate Hand-to-Hand Battle This Afternoon---British Guns Dominate Roulers, Menin and Other Centres and Have Range of Important Railways.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

NEW YORK, October 10.—The Associated Press war expert says: Field Marshal Haig with the help of the French has struck another successful blow in the Ypres salient, and the German tenancy of the dominent ridge east of Ypres is nearing an end. The British yesterday captured further sections of the ridge in the direction of Passchendaele, and British guns now dominate that part still in German hands as well as the railway centres of Staden, Roulers and Menin, and the railroad between Roulers and Menin. One more stroke, perhaps two, and the Germans must bow before the superior power of the Allies in Flanders and retreat. Should the Germans retire to the line of Bruges-Thielt-Courtrai-Lille, they would relinquish their hold on the greater part of the Belgian coast now used by them for a submarine base. Their retirement to this line also would make a sharp salient north of Lille unless they choose to give up that stronghold and retreat to Tournai.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, October 10.—After a desperate hand-to-hand battle, the Australians this afternoon captured Celtic Wood, southeast of Broodseinde, from the Germans.

PETROGRAD, October 10.—Foreign Minister M. I. Tereschenko will head the Russian delegation to the forthcoming Inter-Allied Conference in Paris, called at the request of Russia for a revision of the Allied peace terms.

Premier Kerensky, Minister of War Versovsky, and Minister Verdervsky, have left Petrograd for the front, where they will confer with Allied military attaches.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, October 10.—A secret conference of the German Empire Council is being held at Grand German Headquarters, the Matin announced today. The Kaiser himself was said to be presiding with Field Marshal Hindenburg, Quartermaster-General Ludendorff, Chancellor Michaelis, and Foreign Secretary Kuselmann, in attendance, and with former Chancellors Prince Von Buelow and Von Bethmann-Hollweg also present.

PLOT DISCOVERED IN GERMAN NAVY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, October 10.—Vice-Admiral Von Capelle, the German Minister of Marine, announced in the Reichstag to-day that a plot had been discovered in the navy to form a committee of delegates on the Russian model and to paralyze the fleet so as to force the Government to make peace. The guilty parties were arrested and received their just desserts, the Minister added.

Admiral Von Capelle attempted to link Radical Socialists with the plot. He said the ringleader had discussed the plot with Deputies Haase and Vogtherr in the Radical Socialist conference room in the Reichstag Building. The deputies had called attention to the dangerous nature of the plot, and had advised the greatest caution, but had agreed to furnish propaganda material.

Socialist deputies interrupted the speaker with cries of dissent. Deputy David of the Majority Socialists, demanded that the Government produce proof and that the Reichstag should suspend judgment in the meantime.

Chancellor Michaelis earlier in the session had referred to the affair, rumours of which evidently had gained public circulation. He declared he could not co-operate with, nor recognize a party which put itself outside the pale by activities directed against the Fatherland.

The disclosures in connection with Radical Socialists, if they are true, came most opportunely to help the Government out of its embarrassment over interpellation regarding Pan-German propaganda.

Admiral Von Capelle hammered home his statement with a declaration of the necessity for a proper enlightenment of the military forces.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 10.—A further advance has been made by the French troops which took the offensive yesterday in Belgium in co-operation with the British. Papegoet Farm has been captured, the War Office announced, and more prisoners taken.

EXCLUSIVE WAR NEWS IN THE EXAMINER

You have only to read the special cables in to-day's issue to know why The Examiner is different, and to realize that you must read this paper if you want to keep thoroughly in touch with the developments of the world war. The special cable from Henry Wood, the United Press correspondent with the French armies in the field, published to-day, is one of the most vivid word pictures that has come from the battle front, while equally noteworthy is the despatch from William Philip Simms, describing conditions on the British front. These cables appear exclusively in The Examiner as far as Peterborough is concerned, and are published here nearly five hours before the Toronto evening papers are available. Thanks to this paper's connection with the Toronto Star, The Examiner is able to give its readers the benefit of the services of such famous correspondents as Lowell Mellett at London, Wm. G. Shepherd in Russia, John P. Hearly at Rome, Chas. P. Stewart at Buenos Aires, Carl Groats at Washington, Henry Wood with the French armies, and William Philip Simms with the British armies. Not only does The Examiner receive this complete war and foreign service exclusively, but in addition the telegraph service of this paper is now so complete that Canadian news not covered by the other local paper is given daily. On top of this The Examiner also receives the fine Canadian Press service, so that readers of this paper can be certain that any important news either Canadian or foreign may be found in The Examiner.

Coal May Be Pro-rated

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The possibility of a coal shortage this winter was admitted by Fuel Commissioner Garfield to-day for the first time. To cope with the situation he announced a plan for prorating the country's fuel supply among the States, including Canada's import from this country on the same basis. Emergency shortages now flooding the fuel administration will be met from 3,000,000,000 tons or uncontracted "free" coal located by Garfield.

GIANTS TOOK THE LEAD IN FOURTH INNINGS TO-DAY

Giants Held Their Lead Throughout While White Sox Failed to Score.

CICOTTE VS. BENTON

Canadian Press Despatch:

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Uncertainty as to whether the third game of the World Championship Series would be played to-day owing to rain and foggy ground was not dissipated until after one o'clock this afternoon, when the managers brought their teams on to the Polo Grounds to warm up. The Chicago Americans continue favourites and the betting is two to one and three to one that they will take the series, though it is considered quite within the range of possibility that McGraw's Giants may take to-day's game or to-morrow's.

The White Sox put in a stiff batting practice and tested the range of the field against the right-hander Wolfgang, and Williams, the left-hander. It was announced that Umpire Klem would give the decisions on balls and strikes, while Umpire O'Loughlin would be at first base, Evans at second base and Rigler at third base. Manager McGraw upset predictions by warming up Rube Benton, a left-hander, while Rowland sent out Cicotte to get into condition.

The line-up:

Chicago— J. Collins l.f., McMullen 3b., E. Collins 2b., Jackson r.f., Flesh c.f., Gandil 1b., Weaver s.s., Schalk c., Cicotte p.

The batteries announced were Cicotte and Schalk for Chicago, Benton and Rariden for New York.

GREAT WIN FOR FRENCH

Poilus Had to Work Modern Miracle to Push Through "No Man's Water" and Reclaim Belgian Land Held by the Foe Since 1914

SURPRISED THE ENEMY

(By Henry Wood.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, Oct. 10.—Charging over flooded fields "bridged" by great chunks of cork held together by barbed wire, fighting amid a roar of wind, rain and gun fire, the men of France reclaimed Belgian ground held by the Germans since 1914.

France worked a modern miracle to make her soldiers literally walk on the sea in achieving the great victory in this battle of the inundation. Feverishly working in a deluge of rain, the French engineers carpeted the great barrier of water which was "No man's land" in Flanders, with great islands of cork. They built miles of trestles and countless bridges. It was over this "No man's water" that the French swept on to victory.

To-day the desperation of the German counter attacks told of the enemy's realization of what the French and British victories mean. The Teutonic command threw fresh divisions into the Flanders maelstrom with unparalleled prodigality. That Germany should sacrifice so many thousands of her troops, when her high command is now faced with a steadily waning man power, is proof of the immense importance in which the enemy holds the Franco-British success.

SUB. BASES THREATENED.

The Germans know they cannot retreat without abandoning the Flanders coast. That means abandonment of the great submarine bases, and a curtailment of the submarine campaign. Every yard they are compelled to yield in Flanders makes the relinquishment of these bases much nearer. Moreover the British victory took from the enemy dominating heights and observatories controlling all the Flanders plains. The French contribution was the restoration to the Allies of land heretofore securely held by the Germans behind the inundated section flooded by Belgium in 1914. Fleeing before the invaders at the start of the war the Belgians invoked nature's waters to flood the plains. They stopped the enemy, but the flooded land also has since constituted the greatest obstacle to the liberation of Flanders. Tuesday morning's attack had long been planned.

A FIGHT AGAINST NATURE.

The French, however, had not prepared to fight nature as they were forced to fight. At the moment of the attack, it seemed as though nature herself had joined against the French. Torrential rains sent down a deluge of water which linked the whole semi-inundated wilderness of shell holes, streams, valleys, canals, marshes and rivers into a veritable sea. Whether the French soldiers waiting all night for the advance, or the Germans awaiting the attack suffered the most from the torrents, having no shelter either above or below the ground, it is impossible to imagine. It was certain, however, that the French artillery superiority wiped out any equality which nature condescended to give the Germans.

TERRIBLE ARTILLERY FIRE.

I saw this battle of the elements, fire, earth, water and air, Monday night, just before "zero," the moment for the attack. At one spot the most dense artillery concentration of the war, caused the entire Flanders plains as far as the eye could reach, to vomit up endless and uninterruptedly a sheet of fire and sparks and flames. Giant explosions of shells seemingly mingled with nature's own rumbles of the storm. The driving, blinding rain increased every moment as if uselessly seeking to extinguish the fire of the artillery. For every increase in the whipping rain, it seemed the French artillery reached a triumphant crescendo as it spat forth a rolling barrage. Behind this the French infantry leaped from its half inundated positions to the marsh covered plains before it, leaped from the island to the attack.

SURPRISED THE ENEMY.

The assault came before the Germans expected it. The enemy was caught while a first line division was being changed. The new defenders, a fresh division rushed from the Russian front, were caught and decimated by the tremendous barrage fire. The French attacked their objectives with minimum losses. The victory was won.

This great drive is the third one since August 1. Since the beginning of the Allied Flanders offensive, while the British were regaining the last observatories dominating and controlling the Flanders plains to the coast, the French have been steadily driving back the Germans from the protection of the great water barrier. In each of the three great French attacks the Poilus have wrested fresh portions of this back to the Allied hands.

$40,000 WILL BE OBJECTIVE OF WAR VETERANS' BIG DRIVE

SHOWER KINDNESS UPON THEM
Flowers and cigarette for a disabled prisoner just arrived in England from Germany.

Executive of the Peterboro' Branch of the G. W. V. A. Decide That That Amount Will Be Necessary to Establish Suitable Headquarters Here.

A MEETING TO-NIGHT

A campaign for $40,000 to provide a suitable building as permanent headquarters for Peterborough's Great War Veterans and as a fitting memorial for the many brave officers and men from this city who have died for the Empire, was the programme decided upon at a meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association last night.

A committee composed of President H. J. Staunton, Vice-President G. Toone and Secretary S. Whatley, will meet the committee chosen at the public meeting last Thursday at the City Buildings, to-night and will discuss the details of the proposition.

The veterans considered the proposal that the Peterborough Club building might be used as temporary headquarters, but the general feeling of the executive last night was that now is the proper time to conduct the big drive for a permanent building. In thirty-one cities and towns of the Dominion the local branches of the G. W.V.A. have been provided with suitable headquarters through the generosity of the citizens. The Peterborough veterans, with one of the first branches organized and with one of the most flourishing organizations in the Dominion, feel that they should be entitled to the same consideration from their fellow citizens as has been given in other cities. They are asking this not only for themselves, but for their hundreds of comrades at the front who will return and they are confident that Peterborough will respond to the call.

$40,000 was decided upon as the objective for the campaign, and it is the desire of the Veterans that the big offensive shall start as soon as possible. The City and County Councils will be asked for grants, and a house to house canvass of the city will be organized. It is planned to open the campaign with a big mass meeting in the Opera House in the near future, at which Comrade N. F. R. Knight, the Dominion Secretary, whose eloquent address the other night is still fresh in the minds of those who heard him, and W. E. Turley, the Secretary of the Toronto Branch, will be asked to give addresses.

A Letter of Condolence.

It was decided to send a letter of condolence to the family of Capt. W. H. Blanchard, who died in the Military Hospital in Toronto on Monday.

The executive also decided to write to the Minister of Justice asking as to the exact status under the Military Service Act of the men who have been on active service in France, and who have been honourably discharged. It is understood that they are exempt as far as any further service is concerned, but the Veterans desire to know definitely whether they are also exempt from appearing for medical examination.

TOTAL RESULTS SO FAR.

Total examined	323
Fit for the trenches	178
Fit for non-combatant service overseas	19
Fit for service in Canada	33
Unfit for any service	93

Twenty-three men were examined by the Doctors this morning, the largest number to be tested at one sitting of the Board. The majority were employees of the Henry Hope Company, although there were several young men from Hastings and Norwood examined. A couple from Fenelon Falls will go before the doctors this afternoon. The percentage of A Category men have been on the increase yesterday and to-day. This morning fifteen out of twenty-three were pronounced physically fit for the trenches.

To clear up confusion with regard to the age limits of Clase 1, which is to be called out by proclamation for service under the military service act on the 13th inst., the following announcement is made by the Militia Service Council:

For convenience, Class 1 is frequently spoken of as comprising unmarried men and widowers without children between the ages of 20 and 34. It is to be noted, however, that under the provisions of the statute, the method of fixing these two limits is different. So far as concerns the age of 20, the date of the proclamation governs. Any man, who, on that date, has reached the age of 20 years is within the class. With regard to the limit of 34 years, however, this is fixed by reference to the 1st of January, 1917. Any man who had not reached the age of 34 years before that date is with the class. It is to be noted also that, for the purpose of the act, any man married after the 6th of July, 1917, is to be deemed to be unmarried."

The local Medical Board established a new record for the number of men examined yesterday, when they tested no fewer than fifty-two candidates. Eighteen passed through the mill in the morning, twenty-two in the afternoon and twelve at night. The three sessions yielded thirty-three men fit for the trenches, a percentage of 63, which is higher than the average. Two-thirds of those examined in the morning and five-sixths of those who came before the doctors at night were put in A category.

In a letter to his father, Mr. Patrick Burke, 263 Townsend street, Gunner F. P. Burke, formerly of the 33rd Battery, and now with a 2nd Division Trench Mortar Battery, says: "Just a few lines to let you know I am well and in the best of health. I am in London at the time of writing. I got ten days' leave, and don't think it too much after twenty-three months in the trenches. I must say I had some very close calls, but one gets used to it. Just before I left France I got your parcel, and the French money, and am sure it came in all right. Poor John is in England, used up with rheumatic pains. He is in Haylewood Red Cross Hospital, Isle of Wight, and is very badly crippled."

Among the recruits attested by Capt. G. H. Potts for the Railway Construction and Forestry Depot are Ptes. C. Collins, J. Hunter, Wm. Crowley and Joseph Phillips. With the issuing of the proclamation only a few days off there will likely be a rush of men to join Capt. Potts' unit. He will be at the Armouries daily, and will give any necessary information.

In a report of an evening paper concerning the high percentage of men rejected by the Medical Board on Monday it was stated that five of the men examined were post office clerks. In justice to the men of the post office staff who may have considered this a reflection on their physical qualifications, it is stated that three of the five men were returned soldiers.

LOCAL MAN GASSED.

Gunner J. G. Embury, a Peterborough member of the Canadian Artillery, is officially reported gassed, according to to-day's official casualty list.

Word has been received that Sergt. Major Tom Miller of the 93rd Battalion, is returning home for duty in Canada.

NOTICE.

Until further notice Dr. Greer's office hours will be from 1 to 3 p.m., and 6.30 to 7.30 p.m. Otherwise he will attend to his practice as usual.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10. — Jeremiah O'Leary, editor of Bull, to-day made the following statement in reply to the revelations of the State Department in which his name appears in connection with the German Foreign Office's plan to inaugurate a reign of terrorism and sabotage in the United States and Canada. "All I can say is that I have never been approached by any German agent or military representative on such a matter. My fight has been an open one. I have been using reason instead of dynamite. I am sending a telegram to Mr. Lansing challenging him to submit any proof that I have been connected in any way with anything except legitimate undertakings."

OUR RESOURCES.

This war has hit us pretty hard, pretty well all round, but there are a few oases in the desert. It has brought us out, it has showed us that we can do things we would not have thought ourselves capable of doing if we hadn't been put to the test. We didn't think we could furnish nearly four hundred thousand soldiers, by spontaneous enlistment, and we didn't think that they would be such splendid fighters as they have shown themselves. It has brought us out in other ways, it has taught us to utilize resources. We didn't smelt zinc in Canada till Sir Sam Hughes, finding we couldn't get it elsewhere to help make munitions, developed zinc smelting in British Columbia. The war brought our nickel, of whose ore Canada has a virtual monopoly, to the fore, and we are to have—now in course of erection—two great provincial refineries—one to cost five millions, in Ontario.

Though not directly due to the war, the war has indirectly impressed the fact that Canada has another virtual mineral monopoly. The world's supply of cobalt formerly came from Germany, and New Caledonia, but with the discovery of the rich silver-cobalt ores of Ontario, this province has produced almost the whole world supply. Cobalt was formerly chiefly valuable for its colouring properties. Now its importance is greatly increased. It is better than nickel for electroplating, and it is capable of being very profitably used in conjunction with chromium and tungsten in the manufacture of high speed steel tools, which increase the cutting capacity of lathes from 25 to 50 per cent. Canada's resources, as we are learning every day in the matter of minerals, are almost infinite; and our potential wealth, in agricultural and other production, is in the same class. In the material sense alone, Canada is a country worth fighting for; worth saving for; worth lending for, something we should remember when the new loan—the "Victory Loan"—floats into grasp.

Good Tory Toronto is shocked over finding a flag in a garbage tin. The flag came into contact with a good deal of political garbage in 1911.

MARGARINE.

What does butter at 48 cents and 50 cents per pound mean? It certainly means that hundreds in this prosperous city will have, and do have, to eat dry bread. They certainly cannot find means to buy butter at such prices. Such persons, however, might be able to afford margarine at 25 cents per pound, but they can't do it because the government prohibits the importation to, or sale in, Canada, of margarine. It is admitted and is a fact that margarine is a perfectly pure, clean, wholesome and palatable substitute for butter, made of materials as clean as milk. In the border towns of Canada margarine is eaten by many families, who cannot afford to pay high prices for butter. They have to smuggle it in, however.

Why should not the government permit the importation, or manufacture in Canada of margarine? One reason is that the dairy interests claim that doing so would bring down the price of butter. If it had that effect, it would reduce the profits of dairying. But would it have that effect? Margarine would only be used by those who cannot afford to buy butter at prevailing prices. People who could afford to use butter would still use it; and the demand for butter would not probably decrease enough to affect the price to any appreciable extent. The permitted importation of margarine might bring down butter a few cents, but not probably below a fair profit. If any sacrifice of profits resulted it would not be of any great account. It would not be as great a sacrifice as many are compelled to make who have, themselves and their children, to eat dry bread because they cannot afford to buy butter. In this war, anyway, we are all called upon to make some sacrifice. If war conditions demand sacrifice, that sacrifice should be fairly distributed. The burden should not be put upon a few and others allowed to grow fat on excessive profits at the expense of others.

Bacon at 38 cents a pound in Detroit and 53 cents in Toronto, suggests a little explaining which Mr. Hanna or Sir Joseph Flavelle might furnish.

THE COMING "VICTORY LOAN."

We are called upon to save food and to confine our diet to certain articles of food in order that we may have more of certain staple articles—beef, bacon and wheat—to export to our fellow subjects in Britain, to feed and keep fit British and Canadian soldiers and the soldiers of our allies, the central idea of this and a multiplicity of other considerations being to win the war.

Saving food is not all. We must save money, too, in order that we may lend to the government, to finance the purcases of the food which we save for export. We were told that Great Britain thought of reducing, or withholding Canadian orders for food and munitions, chiefly because Canada cannot finance the purchases required. Canada proposes to remedy this condition. Next month there will be launched a new Canadian loan of 150 million dollars.

We have done pretty well in the way of financing British and allied purchases. Up to the first of July last, Canada had advanced to the allies the enormous sum—for a country of seven and a half million people—of 385 millions for the purchase of munitions, and not long ago the goverinment of Canada advanced fifty millions—40 million for cheese and 10 million for flour, oats and hay. In consequence Canada is a little hard up and an appeal is to be made to the people for another proof of their patriotism, to subscribe—both small and great, both poor and rich—to the new loan, to be known as the "Victory Loan"—150 million dollars.

All our other loans have been very largely subscribed by the wealthy. Now everybody is asked to turn in his little "pils." In order to do this there must be saving— economical use of money which in this era of high wages and plentiful employment, can be easily done, to the good of the country as well as the saver. The loan will give an opportunity to everybody to become a capitalist, if invested money constitutes a capitalist.

In saving to lend the government there is no sacrifice. The mere act of saving is "a means of grace," and the loan is a good investment—the interest will probably be around six per cent., a good figure for gilt-edged investment—with absolute security — Canada is the creditor; Canada with its inexhaustible resources, of which the lid has hardly yet been lifted; Canada with a magnificent future; if our help is adequately given to help assure that future by winning the war.

By investing in the war loan we shall be helping reap the advantage of the food saving sacrifices, we are all trying to make by regulating our diet so that we shall have beef, bacon and bread to export. In the cycle of conditions we stand to gain a threefold advantage—by subscribing to the victory loan we get a good return by way of interest; we get the commercial value of an increased export of food articles, and what is the most important, we get the greatest advantage in the consciousness that we have done our best in helping win the war.

Those who don't know much about the "Victory Loan" yet, will do so later. The machinery of bringing the loan in the way of appeal and conditions to unversal public attention, is being "assembled"; a thorough advertising scheme is to be applied, and wherever there is a dollar to be lent it will be got after. In fact a universal, nation-wide war loan tag day will be applied.

When Major Maude was in Canada in Lord Minto's regime, he was considered a carpet knight—an ornamental arbiter elegantium. Become General Maude he is still a carpet knight—a Turkey carpet knight.

Union Printers Invest $1,215,000 In Liberty Bonds

Through its Executive Council, the International Union was one of the first trade unions to subscribe for the first issue of Liberty bonds. In the allotment of these bonds the International Typographical Union's subscription was cut from $50,000 to $30,000. Subordinate local typographical unions subscribed to the amount of $54,855, while the subscriptions of individual members and the purchases made through chapel organizations amounted to $1,130,300, bringing the total subscriptions made by members of the International Typographical Union up to $1,215,000. In order that the organization may obtain bonds to the full extent of its subscription on the second Liberty Loan, the Executive Council of the International Typographical Union contemplates dividing its second subscription between a number of cities.

The Death Of Major Bonnycastle

On Sunday last the death occurred in Campbellford of Major Richard Henry Bonnycastle, M.D. The deceased, who was thirty-six years of age, went overseas with Dr. McPherson and Dr. Frederick of this city. Upon his return to Canada Major Bonnycastle served in a military capacity in Montreal. He was a prominent Mason and was well known throughout this district.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon. Interment was made in Christ church cemetery, Campbellford.

PTE. FRED BUDD WELCOMED HOME

Millbrook Honours a Returned Soldier

MILLBROOK, Oct. 10.— Pte. Fred Budd, who enlisted with the 21st Battalion, and had taken part in several big engagements, returned home Monday night. On account of illness he was compelled to go to the hospital several months ago and was subsequently invalided home. A large crowd met him at the station, where he was given three rousing, welcoming cheers.

On Tuesday afternoon Pte. Budd was tendered a reception by the citizens. At 2 o'clock a procession was formed, headed by Mr. J. W. Hamilton, as director of ceremonies, and the Citizens' Band, under the leadership of Mr. G. A. Duncan, followed by the Cadet Corps and several automobiles, prettily decorated. Mr. W. I. Collins' automobile was especially attractive. It was draped with large Union Jacks.

The procession wended its way to the residence of Pte. Budd, who with his parents and brothers, entered Mr. Collins' automobile and were conveyed down to the Town Hall, in front of which was assembled hundreds of the citizens, and all gave three hearty cheers and a tiger for Pte. Budd. The band played several patriotic selections in fine style. A good programme was then given.

AUSTRIANS' WAR COUNCIL

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10. —Having lost a million men on the Italian front a third of the entire Austrian strength there, the Austrian high command held a council of war to plan protective measures for the threatened Lubinia road, the highway to Vienna. Rome cables to the Italian Embassy to-day, which made this claim, stated a heavy German representation at the conference indicated the Austrians are pleading for Prussia's aid.

Record Prizes For Peterboro's Plowing Match

Peterborough County had set the lead to the Province in the liberality of the prize money it offered each year in its county plowing match. In other counties the local management had accepted gifts of articles to be donated as prizes. The Government grant is distributed, however, to the county associations in proportion to the amount they pay in cash prizes. Thus local associations who give articles as prizes do not get credit for them in their returns to the Government.

In Peterborough County, the local Plowman's Association has pointed this fact out to those who have been so generous in conributing to the prize list, with the result that they have received cash prizes. This has enabled the local association to receive larger government grants than it otherwise would and thus has made possible the giving of the very generous prizes which are a striking feature of the county match. Among those who have made cash donations to the prize lists this year, most of whom have given he same amounts in previous years, are: Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., $20; G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., De Laval Separator Co., and Farm and Dairy, $15 each; The Peter Hamilton Co., $12; Mr. Vincent Eastwood and Mr. E. A. Peck, $5 each. These prizes are greatly appreciated by the directors of the County Plowman's Association, as well as by the competitors.

SOCIALISTS TO SUPPORT WAR MEASURE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BORDEAUX, Oct. 10.—The Socialist Congress now convening here voted 1,552 to 1,234 in favour of continuing supporting the war budgets in parliament. The convention also voted favourably on the resolution demanding a revision of the allied war aims.

Editor, Examiner:

Re Mr. Frickers organ recital, I am afraid there is some misunderstanding. Five members of the Peterborough Choral Society are bringing Mr. Fricker to this city, paying all expenses, and donating his services to the Red Cross Society of St. Andrew's church, and the only expense the Red Cross Society will have, will be the tickets and programmes. The recital is entirely undenominational, and the only desire of the gentlemen is to give the city a recital by one of the very best artists in the world.

Mr. Fricker was organist at Canterbury Cathedral at 18 years of age. At 21 years of age, he was one of 100 applicants for the position of city organist at Leeds. He was accepted, and he has given 100 recitals per year for 26 years in that city, besides giving special recitals all over the country. A few months ago he gave recitals in Paris for one week.

Dr. Vogt spent some time in England early in 1914 selecting a gentleman for the position of conductor for the Mendelssohn choir, and also organist to the Metropolitan church, Toronto. He very wisely selected Mr. Fricker. Mr. Fricker assumed his new position last month.

Peterborough is very fortunate in being able to hear this great artist so early in the season. The proceeds will be devoted to a great national cause.

Date, Monday, Oct. 15th. Tickets, 25c.

I trust St. Andrew's church will be crowded.

Yours very truly,
WALTER STOCKER.

She was pretty and he was handsome, and they were very devoted to each other as they sat and held hands and watched the Reds play at the Cincinnati ball park.

"There's Hal Chase on first," observed the youth. "He's a bird. And there's Toney, the pitcher. He'll be our best man before long—"

The sweet young thing gasped. "Well, I guess he'll be all right—but, Arthur, this is so sudden!"—Everybody's Magazine.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PROTESTANT HOME

Encouraging Reports Presented and Management is Congratulated Upon the Excellent Manner in Which the Affairs of the institution Have Been Handled.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

At the annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Peterborough Protestant Home, held yesterday, the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. Walter Roger.
Hon.-President—Mrs. Hazlitt.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Neill.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Walker.
Secretary—Miss Davidson.
Treasurer—Miss S. Robinson.
Hon. Vice-Presidents—Mrs. Birdsall, Miss Nicholls.
Three-year Directors — Miss Dickson, Mrs. Suckling, Mr. Aylmer, Mr. Mason.
Two-year Directors—Mrs. Montgomery and Mrs. (Dr.) Harvey.

Mss Lancaster's Report.

Mss Lancaster's report was a brief description of her life as matron of the institution. "Life," she said, "is not monotonous. Each day is a new adventure here, as in any walk of life. Each day brings about its duty in settling childlike disputes among the inamtes interested in the out-'Why Limitations at the Table must be made,' sometimes in holding an aged and work-worn hand as a spirit enters into the beyond. I try to keep the inmates intererested in the outside world, with details of meetings I have attended and in mentioning this I would quote a pathetic little result. I had attended a meeting where arrangements were made for a tag day. In relating this I cautioned the old people to save what they could for this, with the result I was touched by the hoarded pieces they offered, which included a dollar bill from a hopeless cripple. I am delighted by the growing spirit of unselfishness in the home. The old people knit, one 17, another 27 pairs of socks. Each day has its disputes. At times I am discouraged, but any appeal in settling differences to the Board has never failed to bring me comfort.

Mr. Aylmer.

Mr. Aylmer, who is an enthusiast in gardening, had viewed the vegetable plot in connection with the Home, of which he said he had made an estimate that $500 worth of vegetables must have been grown, besides which the cow had been pastured. He suggested keeping an itemized account of the garden, that some idea might be given on the undoubted profit made. Mr. Aylmer also congratulated the management of the Home, whereby the inmates were kept at an expediture of 59c per day.

Alderman Dobbin.

Alderman Dobbin, who attended the meeting, said that on hearing the Secretary's report that the management had escaped a deficit or overdraft, he said he would like to see the city grant increased. He referred to a previous grant, when a deputation, which filled the Council Chamber, the Council carried away by enthusiasm, had voted $1,000 to the Home Guard. "All we have left," said Ald. Dobbin. "are 29 second-hand rifles and pleasant memories." He congratulated the management on what $6,000 had done for the home.

Mr. E. F. Mason.

Mr. Mason objected to Ald. Dobbin's caustic summary of the Home Guard, saying that that organization had sent as many members as any other in Peterborough.

Ald. Stratton.

Ald. Stratton congratulated the Management on the reports, and Miss Lancaster, who, he said the Board was fortunate in having, being a lady of sympathetic nature and possessing the happy knack of handling the old people. He said he felt that should the finances prove at any time insufficient the Council would gladly give any amount needed to such a worthy and proven object. In closing, Mr. Stratton made a personal donation of ten dollars.

Mrs. Roger.

The President, Mrs. Roger, who occupied the chair, said she was proud of the growth of the Home. She recalled a meeting fifty-three years ago, which she attended, in Mr. Haultain's office. Since then the Home has grown to an institution of great importance. She also expressed her regret in the fact that Miss Nicholls, a member for thirty-five years, and Mrs. Birdsall, twenty years, were unable, through illness, to attend. Mrs. Roger spoke of the courteous treatment the Board had always received from the gentlemen interested.

The Secretary's Report.

Miss Davidson, Secretary, presented the following report:

The year 1916-1917 that has just closed has been uneventful as far as running the Home is concerned. There have been thirty-eight inmates —21 men, 17 women, with a total number of days, 11,142; nine have been discharged for various reasons, and three have died. At the close of the year there were 26 remaining in the Home, 15 men and 11 women. The Board has had twenty-three meetings. The usual Sunday services have been held by the different clergymen of the city. The thanks of the Board is gratefully extended to them; also to Mr. Robinson, who has made it possible by providing the conveyance. In November, 1916, a jam and linen shower was held, a very hearty response being made to the appeal. The Christmas season brought with it many generous donations from the public, in the shape of money, turkeys, fruit, candy and other good things. At the entertainment for the old people Rev. Canon Cornish made a very suitable address, while Mr. Allan, Miss Allan, and other members of St. Paul's choir made the evening bright and happy with delightful music. A few of the different young peoples' societies came up during the winter months, on Friday evening, to cheer and entertain the old people.

Dr. Helen McMurchy, having inspected the Home in October, 1916, returned a most favourable report on conditions as she found them. It was published in the daily papers.

During the year the Board has received notice of two small bequests being left to the Home, which will be most acceptable, owing to expenses being unusually high. The garden has been most successful in both vegetables and flowers, owing to the untiring efforts of Miss Lancaster and Mr. Hamilton. They assure us of plenty of everything in the vegetable line for the winter.

We have made few repairs this year, but find it necessary to build a larger root house. The thanks of the Board are extended to the Doctors of the staff, who give so freely of their time and skill to ease the old people of pain and suffering, the gentlemen who act as Auditors, the Press, who are always so courteous, and all friends who have given donations or by some act of kindness shown their interest in the Home.

I cannot close this report without presenting the assurance of the Board's sympathy with Mrs. Birdsall, our First Vice-President, and Miss Nicholls, our Second Vice-President, in view of the fact that they are both at present laid aside from their former activities. The Board appreciates most sincerely the services which for years they have so freely rendered, the remembrance of which will long remain in the Home.

MEMORIAL SERVICE IN HONOUR OF FALLEN HEROES WAS HELD IN MILLBROOK

Service Was Very Impressive—Stirring Address by Bishop Sweeney —Special Music Provided by the Choir

The first part of the service, consisting of prayers for the soldiers who were overseas in the fighting line, for the wounded, and for peace, were read by the Rev. James A. Elliott, Rector of St. John's Church, Port Hope, (formerly chaplain of the 136th Batt.). The second part of the service, which related chiefly to those who had made the supreme sacrifice, was taken by the Rev. Dr. Orchard, the Head Master of Trinity College School, Port Hope.

In an eloquent address, Bishop Sweeney said:

Millbrook, October 10. — The memorial service here last evening was very impressive. The clergy robed in their surplices, marched in procession from the vestry to the front door of the church, where they were met by the choir. All united in singing "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," as they returned to the Chancel.

In a Bible gathering of Holy Writ we come across four combination pictures, which were painted by inspired writers of the Holy Gospel, two belonging to fathers and two belonging two mothers, and the predominating personality of all four is God in man made manifest. The nobleman coming to Christ and beseeching him to heal his son in a distant city; another coming to Christ and beseeching him to drive out the evil spirit in her daughter over on the distant coast; the widow whose son is being carried out for burial. They all represent parental concern, anguish and sorrow, brought into close touch with infinite love.

These things are written for our benefit. Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day and forever. So these canvasses can never perish. They are immortal, because they are part of the history of God himself. Don't you think we ought to linger long before these great paintings of Holy Writ? Four years ago did you ever think that you would become so familiar with death as you have become now? Yet so it is. Morning after morning we pick up our paper, and unless we find some name that touches us very near, we pass it over as the fortune of war. We have grown so accustomed to the carnage that death has grown to us a familiar thing. To this war our Canadian men have gone forth. They have swelled the ranks of those who have made the supreme sacrifice. Splendidly have they wrought and fought — magnificently have they done.

I dare say you have been reading the British Campaign in France and Flanders, by Sir Arthur Doyle. He says that no soldiers in the world can do better than the Canadian volunteers. As I go up and down through this diocese to speak about this great and terrible struggle, I see the sacrifices that parents, wives and sisters are making. I see the aching hearts; and yet there is a feeling of pride. There is such splendour of action on the part of the one who lays down his life, and so I have come for this beautiful service. There has been a note of in the hymns that you have been singing and there is a feeling among the friends that they would not have it otherwise, considering the cause they went for. We are here to-night to commemorate these seven who have laid down their lives. We have come to sympathize with the Rector and his good wife in this great struggle, and with the friends of the others. We have come to make them feel that there is a splendour in the sacrifice their son has made. He was a student of Trinity College School, Port Hope, and a graduate of Osgoode Hall, Toronto. He had a brilliant future ahead of him, but he heard the call of his country and sprang to arms and went overseas, and made the supreme sacrifice: and we are here to-night to express our heartfelt sympathy to his parents, and to the friends of those others.

You have heard those wonderful words of the Book of Wisdom telling us that the souls of the righteous are with God. After all, they are at peace. They have not ceased to be. They still have the recognition of those who are in the great beyond. There is a note of certainty that they are concerned in our interest and welfare. They are at rest; and yet they rest not day or night in perfect service for their master. Would we bring them back? No; there they are at rest, therefore at peace. They are in the enjoyment of a beatific Bishop, so we must comfort one another.

Will you again stand before these great word paintings of the Gospel? Will you see the face of the father as he speaks to the Master asking him to heal his son. He goes back home leisurely. So the friends of these heroes sorrow not as those who have no hope. They know it is well with the young men over whom they mourn.

At the close of his sermon, which was listened to with rapt attention by the large congregation, the Bishop pronounced the benediction and the whole service concluded with the hymn "For all the Saints who from their Labours Rest," sung by the choir and clergy on their return to the church porch. The National Anthem was sung during the service.

Church Warden, Mr. A. A. Smith read the honor roll containing the names of those who had enlisted from the various congregations of the parish of Cavan and who were in the firing line, wounded, or who had made the supreme sacrifice.

Rev. Mr. Morgan of Perrytown, Rural Dean Kidd of Cartwright, and Rev. Dr. G. E. Westmacott, took part in the services. Mr. Ford Gould, B.A., presided at the organ.

A Bad Fire At Campbellford

Local Fire Department Sends Assistance to Quell Blaze in Paper Mills

Campbellford was threatened with a serious conflagration this morning when fire broke out in the store room of the big Paper Mills. For a time it was feared that the whole plant would be swept by the flames. So alarming was the situation that shortly after 9 o'clock this morning the Campbellford authorities telephoned to Peterborough, asking that four or five men from the local fire department be sent down to assist in handling the situation. The necessary permission having been secured, Chief Grange despatched a squad of five firemen in a motor car. Capt. McDonald was in charge and he had with him Firemen Degen, Suddards, McGill and Drummond.

Chief Grange received word early this afternoon that the fire fighters had been successful in confining the blaze to the store room and saving the main building, and that the fire was under control. Eight lines of hose were playing on the fire.

Will Remain In The Battle Until The End

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Oct. 10. — Sir Wilfrid Laurier returns to Ottawa to-night. Large deputations from Hamilton and Central Liberal Association of Toronto waited upon him this morning. One member of this latter deputation, speaking previous to the conference, declared it was his intention to tell Sir Wilfrid plainly that they had no objection to him remaining as leader for the rest of Canada.

"I am going to tell him," he added, "that he can't expect to get the truth from these men who have visited him whose eyes are blinded with admiration. You might as well expect a king to get the truth from his courtiers."

At yesterday's reception to members of the Liberal ward associations Sir Wilfrid made a quarter hour speech, in which he stated that the issues before the country were so great that "whether as captain or private, I shall remain in the battle to the end."

DEATH FOILED GIFT OF $42,000 NECKLACE

HUGO REISINGER INTENDED IT FOR WIFE ON ANNIVERSARY—JEWELLER SUES FOR COST.

NEW YORK.—Death intervened before Hugo Reisinger, son-in-law of the late Adalphus Busch, brewer, could fulfill his desire to present to his wife on their silver wedding anniversary a pearl necklace costing $42,000 which he had ordered from a jeweller in Frankfort-on-Main, was the interesting disclosure of papers filed in the Surrogates' Court by Richard May, an attorney, of No. 15 William street, who presented a claim against Mr. Reisinger's estate on behalf of Robert Koch, jeweller.

The gift was to be made in January, 1915, but Mr. Reisinger died on September 27, 1914. After ordering the string of pearls, the importer, according to the attorney, requested that they be kept by the jeweller until the date of the anniversary, when it was to be delivered to him in New York and paid for.

When Mr. Reisinger died the jeweller tendered the gems to Frederick Dessin and Kuno Francke, executors of the estate, but they refused to pay for them. Mr. May was then retained by the jeweller to collect the price of the pearls.

All Diphtheria And Scarlet Fever Cases Must Be Treated At The Queen Mary Hospital

Decision of the Local Board of Health Last Night—Statement of the Milk Tests for October Show Some High Percentages of Butter Fat.

THE HOSPITAL REPORT

All local cases of scarlet fever and diphtheria must be treated hereafter at the Queen Mary Isolation Hospital. This new regulation was embodied in a resolution which passed unanimously at last night's meeting of the Board of Health. Dr. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, stated that the change would have little effect beyond strengthening his hand. Most cases in the past have been treated at the Queen Mary Hospital, but in a few instances the orders of Dr. Amys have been ignored, and he was unable to enforce his instructions through the lack of sufficient authority. In those instances of diphtheria and scarlet fever patients were quarantined in their homes. Dr. Amys stated that in this method there was frequently the danger of spreading the diseases, and moreover, the patients would receive better and more constant attention at the Isolation Hospital.

Ald. Duncan stated that the Medical Officer of Health would have to use his best judgment in some particular cases. Ald. Saunders hesitated a little at the drastic element of the new regulation, and he had the layman's appreciation of home treatment, but supported the resolution from the viewpoint of the general welfare of the city.

The motion was as follows:

Moved by Dr. Amys, seconded by Mayor Duffus—

Whereas, the Public Health Act provides that where any communicable disease is found to exist in any municipality, the Medical Officer of Health and the Local Board of Health shall use all possible care to prevent the spread of infection and contagion by such means as in their judgment is most effective for public safety.

And whereas, scarlet fever is a communicable disease and steps require to be taken for the public safety,

Be it resolved by the Board of Health of this city as follows:

1—That in all cases of scarlet fever and diphtheria within the municipality such persons suffering from said diseases shall at once be required by the M.O.H. to enter the Isolation Hospital and be there treated until all danger of further communicating the said disease by such person has been eliminated.—Carried.

SERGT. COOPER HOME FROM SOUTH

Ill Health Compelled Him to Leave War Veterans' Trench Exhibit Party

Sergt. T. R. Cooper, one of the party of Peterborough War Veterans who have been touring the United States with the Canadian Returned Soldiers' Trench exhibit, has returned from the South, finding the work too exhausing in view of his physical condition. Fred Long, another member of the party, has also been compelled to sever his connection with the party. The work of being on duty with the exhibit for many hours each day was too much for the two, and they were reluctantly forced to come home. The trench exhibit has attracted great attention in Uncle Sam's land. Big crowds passed through the trench at Trenton, N.J., where the attraction opened, and at Danbury, Conn., where the veterans were last week. This week they are at Richmond, Va. Sergeant Cooper reports that the American soldiers have been taking a keen interest in the exhibit, and many of them visited the Canadian veterans. Sergeant Cooper visited an American training camp near Trenton, and as the local soldier was in uniform he was given a warm reception by the Sammies. Naturally they all wanted to know "what its like over there."

Argument Over Money Found On The Four Alleged Pick Pockets

Magistrate Dumble Reserves Judgment in the Case of Searting the Only One of the Quartette to Appear For Trial—Six Men Claim the Rolls Found on Prisoners

Judgment was reserved by Magistrate Dumble yesterday afternoon after all the evidence for the prosecution had been presented in the case of Sammy Searting, the Russian youth who alone remains of the four suspected pickpockets arrested on Fair Day.

The $1,800 taken from the prisoners, and its prospective disposal formed the basis of an argument that was left undecided in this first round.

Mr. J. A. O'Brien, of Gordon and Widdifield, argued that the prisoners had neither elected nor pleaded, and in their absence a conviction could not be made against them.

Mr. Hatton—They have no status here. I doubt if we can obtain a conviction in their absence.

Six men who claim to have identified rolls of the $1,300 as theirs, wished to know if they could secure the money.

Magistrate Dumble — These men must get their money if we are satisfied it is theirs.

Chief Thompson—If the prisoners have skipped bail they forfeit everything.

Mr. O'Brien objected to this, but the Chief replied: "You'll have a nice time getting it."

Mr. O'Brien stated that the money had been assigned to the firm he represented. "We'll get it all right," he added.

Were Lined With Money.

As an example of how the prisoners sought the crowds about the ticket offices, Detective Newhall stated that Frank Davis had paid three admissions at the northeast gate. Each time he would work his way out, and again filter through the crowd before the ticket windows.

Mr. O'Brien—What did you see Searting doing outside the George Street gate?

Detective Newhall—Nothing. He was with Foley.

It was mainly because of his associations that you arrested him?

Detective Newhall replied that it was because of Detective Meagher's report, and of Searting's actions at the C.P.R. station and his unsatisfactory statement.

How much money had he?

Twelve dollars and forty-three cents, composed of an American five and seven Canadian ones.

Detective Newhall said that Flynn had $90 in his trouser pockets when searched. "That's all the money I have on me," he said.

"In the top of his left sock I found $58 under the left leg of his undergarment. In a special pocket in the crotch of the drawers was $68, under his left garter $258 in one wad. His waist band held $23, his vest pocket, right-hand side, $25; and $2.70 in his left-hand trousers pocket. The total found on him was $525.70."

When Flynn had been examined a man named Isbister came in and reported the loss of $58 in the trenches at the Fair Grounds. He identified Flynn, Foley and Davis as three men who had jostled him.

"We found on Davis $413.40 altogether. It was hidden all over him."

He said—"You've got me in wrong. I'm not with those fellows, I'm over here on a vacation."

Pte. Tom Connor In The Lens Battles

The Waupun, Wis., Leader, has the following reference to a former Peterboro boy:

"Word has been received by his relatives in the city that Private Tom Connor of the 10th Canadian Battalion, has been doing scout duty for some time and that he has been in and out of Lens many times for the re-taking of which by the allies severe fighting is now going on. In his last letter home Pte. Connor said that he was due for a ten days furlough, having completed a year of duty in the trenches of Belgium and in France."

Pte. Connor is the son of Mr. T. P. Connor for a number of years was superintendent of the Canadian Cordage Works in Peterboro.

DISCARDED HIS LIMP IN A HURRY

And as a Result One Local Young Man Was Placed in "A" Category By Medical Board

The local Medical Board have found very few attempts on the part of the men coming under Class One of the Military Service Act to deceive the doctors. The other day, however, one healthy-looking young man tried to get away with something but failed. He came into the examination room with a perceptible limp. The doctors were unable to find any cause for the same and decided to reserve judgment in the case. The man dressed and left the Armouries, still limping. However, when he got around the Y.M.C.A. corner he had a miraculous recovery. The limp disappeared and he merrily stepped out in the direction of down town. Unfortunately for him the news of his speedy cure reached the Armouries and when he returned later on for his papers he found that he had been assigned in Category A 2—fit for the firing line.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

City Has Delivered 400 Tons Of Coal Already And Has Orders For 875 Tons More

Has Not Touched the $35,000 Provided to Finance the Scheme—Operating on the Money Paid With Orders—Supplies Bought From Independent Dealers—Great Demand From All Over Continent.

(By Ald. F. H. Dobbin, Chairman of Fire, Water and Light Committee)

At the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, held on Friday evening of last week, a statement was presented of the working of the city coal supply, up to the end of the month. This covers the operations for a little over three weeks, of September, at which time the coal began to arrive. The results show that so far as the receiving of the coal and distribution are concerned, in fact in all details, the scheme is working, and has worked as smoothly as if it had been running for two or three seasons. The system adopted, or rather devised, while simple, has been efficient. Free from errors and the service all around has been markedly efficient. Both the foreman, Mr. Donoghue, and the men in charge of the work at the sheds and cars have been careful and prompt, and the delivery by Mr. W. Lytle has been entirely satisfactory. The details going through the office of the City Treasurer, Mr. Adams, have been looked after in the most thorough way, as was to be expected.

The net results, so far, have been that this city has a good, fair quantity of coal ahead of what might have been the case had the venture not been instituted. On the other hand it is well to consider that the local dealers, could, and possibly might have brought in Independent coal, and served it to the city, though their profit would have been a matter of conjecture, in the state of the market and with the complications that have been and are apparent The city having undertaken to fetch such coal, there was no encouragement for the local men to do likewise. This in fairness to the dealers. Nothing is to be gained by being unfair, or by ascribing wrong conditions. The coal business is one, that from start to finish,—as far as experience has shown—in which the coal merchant has about as little control over all conditions as the man who runs a fruit and fish stand. Both are entirely at the mercy of the base of supplies.

No Price Breaking.

It was freely expected that something would be done in the way of what people call 'breaking the price.' There is only one way. Buy a mine and add a railroad from the mine to this city. Short of controlling the source of supply and the means of transportation, little can be done. That's settled. The coal that has been sold by the city costs the city fully one dollar or one dollar and twenty-five cents more than the coal supplied by the dealer, that is Line Company Coal. The Line Companies won't sell to the city. Why should they, to the disadvantage of the local dealer who has been a customer for years? So the city finds its coal, pays what it must and delivers it as near to the ruling price as it can. The statement, as shown below, tells the story. Of course the comment is freely made, though probably not well founded, that coal might have been dearer than it now is if the city had not gone into the proposition.

Forty Cars Ordered.

Forty cars more are on the tracks between the mines and the city. It is hoped that the cars will arrive this week. If the cars come on in fair number men will be set to work to deliver into the bins as well as to the houses. It is intended to have in stock as much as one million pounds. This is about 500 tons, and only enough to give 500 families one ton each. The average burning, in Peterborough will reach about one-and-a-quarter ton for each head of population. Without counting supplies for schools, public buildings, etc. But the prospects are now that a decent supply will be in the city from all sources that will serve the winter's wants.

No Expenditure Yet.

One thing the people will be interested in. The City Council, following the permission and order from the Ontario Railway Board, provided as much as $35,000.000 to finance the scheme. So far not a cent of the money has been touched or even needed. The thing is run on the money the people have paid. All payments for coal, freight, labour, delivery, etc., have been met, and the balance from day to day is drawing interest in the bank. It looks as if the interest will about meet the expenses of printing, telephones, shovels and some supplies. The capital account for bags and rental of sheds will not be accounted for until it is seen how much coal, as a whole, has been delivered.

Citizens may carefully look over the statement. It will be seen how close the cost of coal and expenses comes to the selling price. Could the coal be bought for less money the gain would be greater. But as the monthly price each successive month is 10 cents advance on the previous month, any small margin will likely be wiped out altogether. However, no one is getting anything out of the operation. All is at cost.

Summary of the Operations.

Following is a statement of coal received to date at beginning of October, and cost of the same:

Total amount of orders to date	$8,751.50
Less refunds	45.00
	$8,706.50

For the following:
534,200 lbs. stove coal.
1,151,000 lbs. nut coal.
10,000 lbs. egg coal.
58,000 lbs. pea coal.
Total, 1,753,200 lbs., or 875 1200-2000 tons of coal.

Coal received to date:
76,700 lbs. pea coal.
479,200 lbs. nut coal.
243,800 lbs. stove coal.
Total, 799,700 lbs. or 399 1700-2000 tons of coal.

Costing:

For coal	$2,190.16
For freight	1,210.72
For cartage	295.20
For wages	195.00
For printing, etc.	40.00
	$3,930.58

Approximate cost of coal, delivered, per ton, $9.85.

When the cost of the sheds, scale, etc., is added to the coal as delivered the cost per ton will be just about $10.00. It is hoped that this price can be maintained.

The committee is giving the matter very careful attention, and will do whatever is to be done to better the situation. Last week over thirty letters were sent to firms in the coal and mining centres. Out of the thirty only three gave hopes of sending forward coal. The demand is practically unlimited and the same all over the country. The supposition that fixing the prices at the mines would help has only proved to be a boomerang, and has shut off production, largely in the soft coal mines. The price for hard coal was not definitely fixed, but such mines participated in the general scare. As navigation on the upper lakes is due to close, and as insurance on cargoes will be at an end the diversion of the traffic to the railroads will help to ensure a supply for the regular dealers. These have been assured by their supply sources of an ample tonnage commencing early in November. It is hoped that the assurances given will be filled.

As showing the extremity to which the mines are put to make a supply, one firm has installed a washery, to run through a mountain of coal debris, accumulated in past years, and for all that time deemed worthless. The pile is to be first sifted, then the finer parts crushed to a powder and sold for steam purposes. The larger particles, about the size of a pea and nut coal will be washed and sold. Some was offered to the city, but the coal was not favoured.

One small mine has been opened in a district heretofore thought not productive. This mine asked an extra $1.40 per ton for carting the product to the railroad, and proposed that the city should pay the cartage charge. That coal would have to sell here a $12.00 the ton. The offer was not entertained.

Supplying Soldiers' Wives.

As a side issue, in the local coal situation it may be stated that early in May the proposition was made to the women on the Patriotic Fund, that if they would bring in the money, to pay for coal, that it would be banked and used to supply. Beginning to save, as it were. Very many availed themselves of the offer. Over $4,000.00 was brought in and held, and nearly 400 tons of coal, in addition to what is in the city, was brought in and distributed to the families of the men on service, lessening the anxiety and to that extent lessening the demand on the local stores and supply. The enterprise has thus been of real practical benefit, and that only is what counts.

The Gillete Razor Company

Dividend of Canadian Company Increased to 8 Per Cent.

The increase of business of the Gillette Safety Razor Co., of Canada, Limited, for nine months of the year 1917, has warranted the declaration of an annual dividend of 8 per cent., payable October 15th, to shareholders of record October 1st. This is an increase over previous dividends of 2 per cent.

J. E. Aldred, of Aldred & Co. New York, who is well known in Montreal financial circles, has been elected a director, succeeding Maurice J. Currant, resigned. The other officers of the directorate are: King C. Gillette, president; F. J. Fahey, treasurer; A. A. Bittues, managing director; T. W. Pelham, secretary."

The net earnings of the parent company in Boston for the year ending December 31 1, 1916, were $3,192-646. Both the Canadian company and the parent company are classed among the most prosperous industrials in the United States and Canada, and the efficiency of the individual plants has been highly commended by experts. The product has been so standardized and become so well known throughout the world that offices and agencies are necessary in Montreal, London, Paris, Milan, Lisbon, Barcelona, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Petrograd, Tokio, Shanghai, Melbourne, Havana, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro and Valparaiso..

Recently a recapitalization of the parent company has taken place in Boston, shares being placed on the market at $80 and it is proposed that dividends at the rate of $7 per share per annum will be paid on the stock forthwith, at which figure it will yield $8.75 per cent.

The present company and its predecessors have conducted the business for the past thirteen years, and net earnings have increased from $498,000 in 1906, to $3,193,000 in 1916.

A broader policy for the expansion of the company's business is contemplated, and the officers and directors of the new company are as follows: King C. Gillette, president, Boston; Frank J. Fahey, vice-president and treasurer, Boston; J. E. Aldred, Aldred & Co., New York; M. J. Curran, capitalist, Boston; H. J. Fuller, vice president Fairbanks, Morse, & Co., New York; W. A. Gaston, president National Shawmut Bank, Boston; R. C. Morse, Jackson & Curtis, Boston; W. E. Nickerson, Gillette Company, Boston; Bradley W. Palmer, Storey, Thorndike, Palmer & Dodge, Boston; T. W. Phelam, Gillette Company, Boston; Philip Stockton, president Old Colony Trust Co., Boston.

Windsor Man Has Gained 20 Pounds

I Now Know What a Wonderful Thing Tanlac Is Says Pickell

I have gained twenty pounds by actual weight and now I know for myself that Tanlac is something wonderful," William S. Pickell who made this remarkable statement is a well-known paint controller and resides at 51 Windsor ave., Windsor.

"About a year ago," continued Mr. Pickell, I began suffering from stomach trouble and going down hill. My appetite went square back on me and I always had to be careful about what I ate, I was very easy to take cold and was annoyed a great deal by a hacking cough caused by the irritated condition of my throat. I fell off to one hundred and thirty-eight pounds and felt run-down and tired all the time. My sleep was broken, I was very nervous and just felt worse than I can describe. Many days I simply felt like giving up entirely and it was by more force of will that I kept at my work.

I had read so much about Tanlac that I concluded to see if it was good for me and what it had done in my case proves its value in building up people who are all run down like I was. I have a fine appetite now and eat just anything I want with no bad after effects. My sleep is sound and restful and I don't have that tired feeling any more. I now weight one hundred and fifty-eight pounds, have made an actual gain of twenty pounds already and have just finished my second bottle of Tanlac. I really feel like a different man, and two bottles of the medicine have done my daughter a world of good, too. I expect to take a few more bottles and I am telling all my friends how fine it is."

Union Still Is Hanging In Balance

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 10.—The great Canadian guessing contest goes merrily on at Ottawa. Union government is still hanging in the balance. Of the men with whom the Premier and his Secretary of State have been negotiating only one man is fairly certain to come into the Cabinet. That is Hon. A. L. Sifton, of Alberta. Yesterday he was not included in the conference. Premier Brewster of British Columbia, arrived here this morning but Premier Brewster has nothing to do with the negotiations. He was not invited here by Premier Borden. Still he is watching from the side lines.

Equal representation of Liberals and Conservatives in the Cabinet appears to be the crux of the whole situation, at present. It was upon a fifty-fifty assumption that Western Liberals undertook to re-open negotiations. On that basis they would be entitled to secure eight portfolios for Liberals. This does not include the Solicitor-Generalship, which is balanced against two under secretaryships. Should the three Western Liberals come in and General Mewburn secure the position of Minister of Militia Liberal representation would number five and would be still three short of equality. Upon whether the Prime Minister decides to make the division equal, pretty well depends the success of the present negotiations.

Children's Aid Society Meets

Thanks Extended to Doctors Who Have Performed Operations Free of Charge

The regular monthly meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers, Oct. 9th. The members present were Rev. Fr. Phalen, Mr. J. Edgar, Jos. Wearing, Adjt. McElhiney, Mrs. W. Stocker, Mrs. W. A. Sanderson, Mrs. W. H. Gibbs and Agent Powell. In the absence of Mr. Peck, the Rev. Fr. Phelan took the chair.

A report from Mrs. W. A. Sanderson on the annual tag day, showed it to have been a success. Next year the Society will want more girl taggers to help. As usual there were some fault-finders, one hinted that the Society was only helping country children; the fact is that out of twenty-five children made wards in the last year and four months, ten were from the city and fifteen from the country.

After reports from the Agent and passing the accounts, the following resolution was passed:

That the thanks of the Society are due, and are hereby given, to the following Doctors, who assisted in different operations at the Shelter with out any charge to the Society—Doctors Buchanan, Scott, Morgan and King.

NORTH MONAGHAN TO CONSIDER GRANT TO RED CROSS SOCIETY

At a meeting of the North Monaghan Council, held on Monday, October 8th, in the Court House, Peterborough, at which Reeve Rye, Deputy Reeve Bell, Councillors Henry and Williams were present, an appeal was read from the British Red Cross Society for another grant from the Township of North Monaghan.

On motion of Councillor Henry and Deputy Reeve Bell the Reeve was instructed to notify the chairman of the School Board, Mr. A. G. Wilber, that a Red Cross meeting will be held in May's School House on Thursday, October 18th, 1917, at 8 p.m., for the purpose of discussing the advisability of giving another grant to the British Red Cross.

By-laws were introduced fixing the Township, County and School rates. These by-laws were read, passed and authorized to be sealed.

An application was read from Mr. Alex. Gordon, asking for the position of Tax Collector at a salary of $200.

Bills Ordered Paid.

The following bills were presented and ordered paid:

Pay Sheets Presented.

Pay sheet, September and October, Monaghan Road Boundry, $797.57.

Pay sheet, July and September, Road Division No. 6, $199.88.

Moved by Mr. Henry, seconded by Mr. Bell, that the above pay sheets be passed and paid.

Park Street Bridge.

It was moved by Mr. Williams, seconded by Reeve Bell, that the contract for the Park Street bridge as awarded to Fred T. Mahood, for $275 for bridge, and $15 for railing, as let by the Council, be hereby confirmed.—Carried.

Next Meeting.

The next meeting of the Council will be held at the call of the Reeve.

Congregation Of Murray St. Church Called Together

Will Meet For a Two-fold Purpose, To Hold Autumn Reunion and to Secure Red Cross Funds

The worst shirker of all is the one who is in no sense "at the front." There are those who have never heard the sound of cannon or have had a sight of the battlefield blood who are nevertheless "at the front." They are in the front line of sacrificing citizens, they are "at the front" when the call comes for war-time service. They are "at the front" and ungrudgingly give when the request is made for funds. There is no complaint from them when the demands multiply, but they do their best remembering that "angels can do no more."

On Friday evening of this week the entire congregation of Murray street Baptist church is called together for a two-fold purpose—first to have an autumn re-union and to welcome the newcomers of recent months, and in the second place to contribute the modest sum of twenty-five cents each for the purpose of purchasing material for the Red Cross Society of the church. A programme of music, etc., will be rendered and refreshments will be served. Four Red Cross girls will have copies of the congregational roll, and will place the Red Cross opposite each name as the contribution is made. It is confidently hoped that no member of the congregation will be absent.

THE WEST END KNITTING CLUB

The West End Patriotic Knitting Club held their first meeting of this season last Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. C. J. Rutherford, London street. Last year the ladies knit 310 pairs of socks, all of which were sent direct to our boys in the trenches, and have been gratefully acknowledged. The gentlemen, as usual, kindly supplied funds sufficient to provide yarn enough to keep the ladies busy for the winter. The members intend keeping up the good work as long as the war lasts.

Simple Home Remedy For Wrinkled Faces

Thousands are spending fortunes in frantic efforts to remove the signs of premature age from their faces. Such women willingly pay almost any amount to money for worthless wrinkle removers, of which there are many.

If they only knew it, the most effective remedy imaginable is a simple, harmless face wash which can be made up at home in less than a minute. They have only to get an ounce of powdered saxolite and half a pint of witch hazel at the drug store and mix the two. Apply this daily for a while as a refreshing lotion. The effect is almost magical. Even after the first treatment a marked improvement is noticed and the face has a smug, firm feeling that is most pleasing.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Further exposition of Ambassador Bernstorff's activities in the United States including the destruction of the Canadian Pacific railway at several points was given to-day by Secretary of State Lansing who publisher three telegrams which passed between the Ambassador and the German Foreign Office in January, 1916. One was as follows:

"Jan. 3.—The secret general staff desires energetic action in regard to the proposed destruction of the Canadian Pacific Railway at several points with a view to complete and protracted interruption of traffic. Captain Boehm, who is known on your side, and is shortly returning, has been given instructions. Inform military attache and provide necessary funds.

Predicts Coldest Winter In Years

Prof. A. L. Snider, an American weather prophet and maker of Almanacs and who is popularly known as Cyclone Snider, warns the American continent to prepare now for the coming winter which, he says, will be one of the severest ever experienced. He says:

"Get out your muffs and bearskin wraps, for the coming winter will be the coldest one we have had for many years. It will be so cold that somebody will think that Robert E. Perry has left open the door to the north pole.

The coming winter will be a long hard, cold one, for driving sleet storms and heavy snowstorms will occur over various sections of the country, followed by great cold waves turning into severe blizzards that will reach far into the South. December will be a cold, wet, stormy month. December will be known as the sharp-shooter month, for the cold waves will be so piercing. The coming Christmas will be a white one, for many snowstorms will occur, all to be followed by a sweeping cold wave that wil make man and beast take notice.

Charged With Bigamy And Perjury As Well

Frederick Oaks Appears in Police Court To-day on Two Serious Charges

Two related charges of bigamy and perjury were read against Frederick Oaks in police court this morning. Through his solicitor, Mr. J. A. O'Brien, of Gordon & Widdifield, he elected to be tried by jury and pleaded not guilty. Mr. J. Guise Bagley, acting for the Crown, asked for a remand which was fixed at one week. Bail of $1,000 in two sureties was granted by the Magistrate.

It is alleged that Oaks married Ida McClennan on September 4th, 1916, at St. Augustine's church, Toronto, while his wife, Ella Oaks, was then, and is still alive. The perjury charge alleges that Oaks, in a certain affidavit made for the purpose of procuring a marriage license wherein he said he was an unmarried man, the fact being that he then had a wife living, thereby committed perjury.

FUNERAL OF MRS. D. BELLEGHAM

The funeral of Mrs. Daniel Belleghem took place this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the family residence, Hunter street, to Little Lake cemetery and was largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Thomas of George Street Church, assisted by Rev. J. P. Wilson of Trinity Methodist Church. The pall-bearers were Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, G. W. Powell, Adam Hall, Dr. W. T. Scott, John Crane, T. W. Robinson, Percy Rutherford and James Connal.

CAPTAIN VON RINTELEN NOT IN TRENTON JAIL, BUT IN TOMBS CELL

NEW YORK.—That Captain Franz von Rintelen, of the German navy and reputed relative of the Kaiser, has passed four months in the Tombs at his own request and has not served a day of his sentence to a year's imprisonment in the Mercer County Jail at Trenton, N. J., became known when he was taken before Judge Hough in United States Court by order of Harold A Content, United States Attorney, who asked that a date be set for his trial on three indictments accusing him of forgery, perjury and conspiracy in obtaining a passport to England in August, 1915.

George Gordon Battel, who appeared for Von Rintelen, announced that he would file a plea in bar on behalf of his client on the ground that a United States court had no jurisdiction over him because he was brought here illegally from England. Von Rintelen waived extradition and returned voluntarily in the custody of a Scotland Yard detective.

Judge Hough directed that Mr vontent file a written plea in opposition to that of Mr. Battle and set next Wednesday for arguments. Mr. Content said the indictment would be pressed for trial at the earliest possible moment.

The maximum penalties are ten years' imprisonment in the federal prison at Atlanta and $1,000 fine for forgery, five years and $2,000 for perjury and two years and $10,000 for conspiracy, or, in all, seventeen years and $13,000.

With von Rintelen were convicted David Lamar and Henry S. Martin They were found guilty under the Sherman law of conspiring to restrain the commerce of the United States by fomenting strikes in munition factories. The maximum penalty for that being one year, they could not be sent to a federal prison. Because von Rintelen objected to going to an ordinary jail he has remained in the Tombs. His high rank in Prussian circles has won for him no special privileges or favours there.

COSTLY CHIME OF BELLS.

The Largest Bell Will Measure 56 Inches at Its Mouth.

What is said will be the most costly chime of bells in America, and one of the most musical sets in existence, is now being made at a foundry in Troy, for the massive tower of Cadet chapel. Rev. H. P. Silver, chaplain, at the United States Military Academy, West Point, as the gift of Mrs. James M. Lawton in memory of her father, the late Major-General Robert Anderson, who was graduated from the academy in 1825, and whose brilliant command of Fort Sumter at the outbreak of the Civil War has thrilled millions of readers of American history. There will be twelve bells in the chime, the largest weighing nearly two tons and measuring fifty-six inches at its mouth.

The Cadet chapel is of stone, quarried from rock found on the military grounds and cost to build about half a million dollars. Its commanding position on the hill back from the Hudson River makes an ideal place for bells, and the patriotic airs from the chime will sound throughout the beautiful highlands, in the midst of which the military academy is situated, and prove a source of inspiration to the future generals of the United States army that will always linger with them pleasantly.— The Watchman Examiner.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

HERE LIES YOUR DANGER

Ready-made spectacles have lenses of equal strength for both eyes. In the majority of cases both eyes are not affected the same, and require different corrections, while sometimes only one eye is defective. It is therefore of great importance that your eyes be tested thoroughly, each eye separately. Dr. Fowler does this and your glasses are guaranteed satisfactory when — fitted by him. —

WARSAW SCHOOL FAIR WAS GREAT SUCCESS

WARSAW, Oct. 9.—The second annual school fair was held in the village on Tuesday, Oct. 2, six schools n this district participating. Throngs of relatives and friends of the children gathered to enjoy the races and admire the splendid products displayed, which had been guarded with jealous care through heat and frost, to maturity.

The entire proceeds of the day, which will be egally divided between the local Red Cross and the fund to provide comforts for Dummer boys in khaki, was eighty dollars. This having been collected by the sale of small flags by the children; a booth on the grounds, tea which was served in the Town Hall, and an excellent concert in the evening.

The programme, which was largely made up of numbers by pupils of the several schools, ran as follows:

Chorus, "The Maple Leaf."
Chairman's address---Mr. Edward Hawthorne.
Recitation---Alice Wason.
Song--Joseph McManus.
Recitation, Alberta Darling.
Chorus, "The Call of the Motherland."
Song, "I Want My Daddy," Verna and Leonard Dunford.

The funeral of the late Pte. Wm. Ernest Bell took place on Sunday, October 7th. The service was conducted by Rev. P. H. Robert, Rev. H. Brown and Rev. J. J. Robbins assisting.

Col. Johnston and many returned soldiers came from Peterborough to pay their last respects to a comrade. Pte. Bell was a member of the 93rd Battalion, and was among the first to be drafted for service in France. Soon after going on active service Pte. Bell began to suffer acutely from rheumatism and trench foot, and was invalided to England. It was a great surprise to his relatives to learn, a few weeks ago, that he was in Kingston Military Hospital, in very poor condition. He was gaining and going on well, however, until the day before his death, and hopes were held out for his recovery. The late Pte. Bell was twenty-six years of age, and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Bell of this place. Pte. Bell was married while in training, his wife, who survives him, residing in Lakefield. Two sisters, Mrs. Roy Brand and Mrs. Jos. Larush, and three brothers, Peter, Henry and Edward, are left to mourn his loss.

Margaret Perdue, Teacher.

The Sunday school teacher was talking to her pupils on patience. She explained her topic carefully, and as an aid to understanding she gave each pupil a card bearing the picture of a boy fishing. Even pleasure, she said, requires the exercise of patience. See the boy fishing; he must sit down and wait. He must be patient. And now, can any little boy tell me what we need most when we go fishing?

Four Italian Steamers Lost

Canadian Press Despatch:

ROME, Oct. 11.—In all seas last week two Italian steamers of more than 1,500 tons, and two of less than 1,500 tons were sunk by mines or submarines. One sailing vessel of more than one hundred tons also was lost.

Sure Way To Get Rid Of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon: apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

French Sub. Losses Light

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Oct. 11. — Three French steamers of more than 1,600 tons were sunk by mines or submarines during the week ending October 7. Two vessels of less than 1,600 tons were lost.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"How be you, girl?" he grunted, with not the slightest relaxation of his grim and crabbed visage.

"A long climb," she gasped. "I'm fair spent with the heat."

"I'll warrant you would all like a cup of wine after your walk," Ramona said. "Lucia—Lucia!" She looked toward the house. 'A dusty road makes a dry throat — eh Master Tench."

"Rum for me. I've no stomach for this villainous Spanish stuff. Sweet to the taste, it is, like women, but bitter in the belly of you. Rum, girl."

"Well, maybe 'tis, Portugee—maybe 'tis, but not being any god myself, I'll stick to good honest rum."

'Ay, and plenty of it," rumbled Long Rodgers, hammering on the table top with the butt of his pistol.

"Where's the Firebrand?" Tench asked, glancing toward the door of the house. "He gave orders we were to meet here."

"Within," Ramona assured him. "Won't you sit, Master Tench?"

"Any news from Captain Morgan?"

"Not yet."

"Bah!" He spat angrily upon the ground. "Another week wasted in taverns with a parcel of women. By the Lord, I'm shoresick!"

"A poor compliment to our sex, Master Tench,' laughed one of the girls. "What have you against women?"

"They're worse than the devil. Harpies they are, cozening our men out of their hard earned pieces of eight with their lying tongues. I see little good in them."

Tench knocked the ashes from his pipe with a crabbed smile.

"'A woman, a dog and a walnut tree,'" he remarked, "'the more you beat 'em, the better they be.' I learned that in good old Devonshire, Portugee, where they breed men."

The retort seemed to please the other women in the party mightily. Between them and Tench went on a constant feud.

'She has you there, old crosspatch,' shrilled Trix, while the others laughed. The old man received their remarks with indifference. Three things in the world, and but three, he considered worth while, the sea, a good fight, and his rum.

The Portugee regarded his companion with a cynical smile. To him, but one thing appeared worthy of effort, and that was a woman, the one, in truth, that for the moment pleased his fancy.

"A neat thrust, Master Tench," he observed. "Right between the ribs."

"Trust a woman for a sharp tongue," the old man grinned, refilling his pipe. "I'll have none of them. A good sword'll do me. Did you get your man, Portugee?"

The sudden question hit like a lash into the raw of Ramona's nerves. She stood quite still, not daring to let her eyes meet those of the man beside her, although she sensed instinctively that he was watching her. With clenched hands, and a prayer in her heart that she might not scream, she awaited his reply.

"Carramba! No! He escaped me!" Then he turned and deliberately peered into her face. The arrival of Lucia with wine and rum distracted the attention of the others. They crowded about the table, with the exception of Tench, and began to fill their cups.

The old man, however, seemed determined to pursue the subject. Ramona could not help wondering what undercurrent of thought was the cause of his persistence. Was it possible that he could suspect?

"Some day, Portugee," he observed dryly, "you'll play the braggart once too often. What quarrel had you with the fellow?"

"That's my affair. You croak worse than a one-eyed crow. What is the matter to you?"

"The man was an Englishman, and I pick no quarrels with loyal subjects of the king. Keep your sword for his enemies."

"He ran this way," Long Rodgers volunteered. "Like as not he's hiding close by."

"To be sure." A hysterical burst of laughter crackled from the girl's dry lips. "I have him hidden here in the garden." Portugee Joe darted a look of amazement at her, but she continued to laugh, wildly, as though possessed with a singular madness. "Do you think I have nothing better to do," she continued, "than bother my head about runaway sailors? Come"—with a quick movement she went up to the table and poured a cup of wine from the great silver flagon. "I give you a toast, my friends. A safe voyage!"

The party gathered about her, laughing, calling responses to her toast. As they raised their cups, a deep voice came from the doorway of the house.

"A safe voyage and a prosperous one! Drink hearty, lads!" Ormiston took the cup of wine that Lucia extended to him, and raised it high above his head.

"Your servant, captain," cried Tench, draining his cup. "No heeltaps!" He beat noisily upon the top of the table with his empty mug. "A song, my hearties, a rousing English song, for a fair start." In an uncultivated but not unmusical baritone he began to sing, the others joining in until the birds roosting in the palms fled screaming before the clamor.

"With a randy—dandy—dandy—O!
With a mug of ale or brandy—O!
With a rumbelow and a westward-ho!
And a heave my mariners all—O!"

A prodigious rattling of empty mugs and pistol butts upon the table marked the conclusion of the song. Ormiston glanced about him, and smiled. The admiration of the noisy crew pleased him, flattered his sense of leadership and power.

"Well, gentlemen," he announced, coming down the garden. "No news from the plate ships."

"Curse the dogs!" Tench muttered. "Why don't they come on?"

Ormiston clapped him soundly across the back.

"How now, old wolf?" he laughed. "Have you not had your fill of Spanish blood?"

"Not yet, Firebrand. Sixty only have I killed, and I've sworn to make it an even hundred. Rum, wench," he extended his cup of Lucia. "I'm as empty as a stock-fish."

A sudden commotion among the slaves about the gate caused everyone to turn. A cadaverous man, very lean and gaunt, with a scrawny red neck and a bullet head, came quickly through the gate. In his hand he carried a folded bit of paper. The others observed it at once.

"The Buzzard!" they chorused. "News! News from Captain Morgan! The plate fleet has sailed!"

The newcomer went up to Ormiston and thrust the bit of paper into his hand.

Ormiston meanwhile had broken the seal upon the heart and was engaged in reading its contents by the light of one of the torches. A smile of satisfaction played over his face.

"Good news, gentlemen!" he cried, wheeling toward the expectant crowd. 'Excellent news! The plate fleet has sailed! Ten great galleons, with enough gold aboard to pave the streets of the new Jerusalem!"

His words were met with shouts of delight.

"Ten!" exclaimed the Portugee. "Sharp work ahead."

"Hell's fire!" cried Tench, turning on him with a scornful laugh. "With twenty good men at my back I'll take any galleon that floats. Come—enough wine and wenches! The tide will ebb within the hour. Let's be off." He started toward the gate.

Ormiston stopped him with a gesture.

"Not so fast, One Eye, Buzzard, take your four men and bring out my sea chest." Then he turned to Ramona who stood ashen pale in the moonlight. "Well, girl!" he cried. "Why do you stand there like a spirit of evil. Time enough for tears when I am gone. A comely wench, One Eye, is she not," he laughed.

"Trust no woman, say I, Firebrand. Treacherous as the devil that made them, every one."

Ormiston gave a deep laugh.

"No woman has deceived me yet, my friend," he said, then went to Ramona, his eyes searching hers almost tenderly.

"Well, sweet mistress—I must leave you."

"Will it be for long, Firebrand?" she replied, trying very hard to hide her agitation.

"A month at least—mayhap two. We'll not come home empty-handed if we have to chase the Spanish devils to the gates of Barcelona." He went to the table and again filled his cup. "Drink, my friends, to the Mistress Ramona. A parting cup!"

Millbrook And Cavan Items

MILLBROOK, Oct. 10.—A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mrs. J. W. Phexton on Friday, Sept. 28th, when a number of friends called and presented Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Morden with a cabinet of silver. The following address was read:

Mr. and Mrs. Marden,—We a few of your friends have gathered at your home to spend a pleasant hour, also to try to show our appreciation of your kindly spirit in responding to any calls for neighbourly assistance during the years you have spent among us. Your being ready to give us a helping hand in any emergency makes us realize your sterling qualities as a faithful friend and neighbour. Although you are leaving us we know that what will be our loss will be others' gain. We therefore take much pleasure in asking you to accept this gift as a token of our love and appreciation, and we offer a prayer that the blessing of God, which maketh rich and addeth no sorrow thereto, may be showered upon you in your new home, which indeed is the foundation of "Church and State."

Wishing you all happiness and prosperity for the future.

Signed on behalf of your friends—Mrs. H. Gardiner, Mrs. J. McAdoo.

After the presentation Mr. and Mrs. Morden made a suitable reply and the evening was spent in games and music, after which the guests departed, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Morden a long and prosperous life.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A SOLDIER'S VISION

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

For a period of three weeks along the front of our brigade a picket had been murdered on his post every night. The front was a mile long, with the posts within ten rods of each other, and a bushwacker had crept up on the lone picket with all the craft of an Apache and stabbed him to death. The one assassin had killed twenty-two men before any great stir was made about it. All that was done when the matter was finally taken hold of was to put two, three and four men on a post in place of one and to send out small parties to look for a needle in a haystack, as it were.

That all these murders had been committed by one single hand no one doubted. A knife had been used in every instance.

On the night that the order was issued to double the men on the posts I was ill in my tent with a sore throat and fever. My tent mates were on guard or detail, and I realized that I was light headed. I could not fall into a sound sleep, but I dozed at intervals, and the noises of the camp were confused with queer dreams. Of a sudden this confusion cleared away, and I had what you call either a dream or a vision. I saw a man in the uniform of a Federal captain, mounted on a dark bay horse, ride up to a farmhouse. The face and form of rider and horse were as plain to me as if I had seen them in my normal state of health at noonday. The captain was a man of about thirty, blue eyed, with brown hair, brown mustache and a front tooth filled with gold. At the corner of the left eye was a small scar from a wound inflicted years before.

As the officer descended from the saddle and hitched his horse to the fence I saw a woman's face at the window for a moment. The same face was seen again for a moment as she opened the door for the captain. She was a tall, dark haired woman, and the face bore a smile.

As suddenly as the vision came it was blotted out, but it returned again. This time the captain was mounted, and it was night. It was the same house, and his horse wanted to speed too fast and was pulled in. I could not make out how I followed on, but follow I did, and we had just descended a hill and were crossing a creek by a plank bridge when there came a red flash, followed by the report of a fire-arm, and the captain threw up his arms and lurched to the right and fell out of the saddle. The horse sprang to the left off the bridge, which had no rail, landed in the creek and went off among the underbrush. I saw that the officer was dragged along with his foot in the stirrup. I also saw the man who had fired the shot. He was tall and gaunt faced, with long black hair and glittering black eyes and dressed in the rough clothes of a farmer.

When one of my tent mates came in I at once related the dream or vision to him, but neither of us attached any importance to it. One with a fever always has queer dreams and fancies.

A week had gone by and I was all right again when I read in a Washington paper of the singular disappearance of a captain in our brigade. This officer, so it was stated, had left camp on a certain afternoon on his horse and had not been heard of since. My vision came back to me so clearly and I was so sure that it furnished a clew that I reported to my captain. He ridiculed the idea, but sent me to the colonel. My statements were received with a smile, but I was given a pass and a note to the brigadier general. He was a gruff old dog, and he called me a fool before I had spoken ten words. When I had given a close description of the missing officer he began to listen, and the result was that I went out with a squad to search. We passed for two miles over a road I had never set foot on before. We came to a farmhouse I had never seen in my waking moments. We found the black haired woman, and she corroborated my story of the captain's arrival. She was a widow, living with her mother, and the captain had been calling for many weeks, and it was a case of love. A horse had gnawed a fence rail; a horse had pawed up the earth; the captain's horse was a bay. When we returned to the bridge we found the marks where the bushwhacker had jumped. We found where the iron shoes of the horse had scraped the stones and where he had clambered out. In the woods, a mile away, we found the horse and the rider.

The captain had been shot through the body. He had been dragged by the stirrup until his body had become tangled among the underbrush. The horse had eaten every bush and limb within reach, but had been without water and was just able to stand. His rider was probably dead within five minutes after being shot. You may have made up your mind to hear that the assassin was also discovered through my dream, but he was not. I have always believed that it was his hand which knifed the pickets, but it is only my belief. No one charged with any of the crimes was ever brought to book so far as I know. I could have identified the bushwhacker among a thousand men, but I never had the opportunity. A week after the finding of the captain's body our brigade was marching and fighting forty miles away, and if the assassin was a farmer living in the neighborhood of his crimes he was safe from discovery.

Reception To A Returned Nursing Sister

Hastings, October 10. — The members of the local Chapter of the I.O.D.E., tendered a reception to Nursing Sister Helen Fowlds on Thursday evening, in the rooms on Front street, which were profusely decorated with flowers for the occasion, and where Miss Fowlds had on display a number of interesting curios which she had collected in different places, chiefly among which was the Royal Red Cross, which His Majesty King George had presented to her for untiring effort to assuage pain and conspicuous courage; and of which she is justly proud. Refreshments were served during the evening, after which Mrs. English, Regent of the Society, expressed the feelings of the gathering in the pleasure it afforded them of doing honor to one so worthy.

Miss Fowlds made a suitable reply in which she thanked each and everyone for their kindnes sand for doing so much to help her in her work.

Mrs. (Dr.) Wilson then arose and presented to her a beautiful bouquet of flowers. The National Anthem was sung and the large gathering dispersed. The committees in charge have every reason to be pleased with the success which attended their efforts.

There passed away at her home in Percy on Wednesday last a highly respected resident in the person of Mrs. Albert Brooks, who died as the result of a paralytic stroke. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon to the Centre Cemetery. There remains to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother the sorrowing husband, one son and five daughters, to whom universal sympathy is extended.

A CONVENTION.

The District Convention of the Asphodel S. S. Association, was held on Monday in the Westwood Methodist church. Interesting addresses were given by the local ministers and the year's work reviewed. Those who attended were well repaid for their effort. Refreshments were served in the town hall.

Rally Day was observed on Sunday morning by the Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday schools. A good programme was rendered while the floral decorations added much to the enjoyment of the services.

In the evening the theme was Thanksgiving, the music being appropriate for the occasion.

Those who braved the elements to attend the Warkworth Fair report a very large attendance and good exhibit.

On Wednesday last Mr. Russel Warner of Percy, disposed of his farm stock and implements by a public auction sale. Mr. Warner is retiring from farming on account of ill-health.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Wilson left during the week to take up residence in Toronto where Mr. Wilson is going into the grocery business. Their many friends wish them prosperity.

Rev. D. A. Thomson has resumed his pastoral duties after an absence of three or four weeks.

Tom Marks and his kiltie band gave the play, "Bringing up Father" in the town hall on Saturday evening to a fair sized audience.

Mrs. Sam Brooks of Peterboro, was in town on Friday attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Albert Brooks.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Staples of Lindsay, spent Thanksgiving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Tate.

Mr. Allan Greenley of Brantford spent the week end in town, the guest of Mrs. C. Plant.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burridge of Peterboro were in town over Sunday, guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. Hatherley.

Mrs. W. Fowlds gave an afternoon tea on Friday in honour of Nursing Sister Helen Fowlds, when a very enjoyable time was spent together.

A number of our Sunday school workers drove over to Westwood on Monday to attend the Township Convention, and report a good attendance and an excellent programme. Lunch was served to the visitors and socially the hour was pleasantly spent.

Mr. Winter Runnels of Toronto, spent Thanksgiving under the parental roof.

Mr. Cecil Doxsee of Toronto, is on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Doxsee.

Mrs. F. Learmouth has returned from a pleasant visit with friends at Hilton.

Recent rains have so much improved the ground for plowing that the farmers are unusually busy.

Mr. Tom Hill of Peterboro was home for the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burridge of Peterboro spent the week end with friends here.

Pte. Charles Breckenridge returned to Westwood on Monday, being invalided home. His friends are giving him a hearty welcome.

Miss Alice Learmouth has returned from a visit in Toronto.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Instant relief — no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, swollen mucous membrane and relief snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Elys Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or comes instantly.

HOME INTERESTS

Our Old Friend the Potato

OF all the vegetable kingdom there is no vegetable more nourishing or more palatable than our old friend the potato. Try some of these dishes with it as the background:

Add to this one quart sweet milk, one tablespoon butter, pinch salt, a little pepper. Reheat and thicken with one tablespoon flour, mixed with cold milk and serve with crisp crackers.

Potato Soup.

One large cup fresh diced potato, one-half cup minced celery, one-half cup minced onion. Boil together until soft in a little salted water and pour through colander.

Potato Scones.

One large cup freshly boiled mashed potato, two small cups sifted flour, with one rounding teaspoon of baking powder, one tablespoonful of lard or other shortening, one egg well beaten, pinch salt, one large teaspoonful sugar.

Mix well together with sweet milk. Turn on a floured board, roll and cut into triangles. Bake in quick oven until nice brown. Split and butter. Serve hot with jelly or jam.

Potatoes au Gratin.

Cut one pint cold boiled potatoes into dice; make cream sauce with two level tablespoonfuls of butter, two level tablespoonfuls of flour, one cup milk, one-half teaspoonful salt and dash of pepper. Add good half cup rich yellow cheese shaved fine and stir over hot water till cheese is dissolved.

Put alternate layers of sauce and potatoes in baking dish and cover top layer of sauce with buttered bread crumbs. Brown in quick oven.

Stuffed Potatoes.

Remove the tops from medium sized, well baked potatoes with a knife. Hull out the inside. Cream with milk. Allow one teaspoonful of grated cheese to each potato. Add to the creamed portion. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Refill the potato with the mixture, cover the top with the grated cheese, place in a baking pan, with the potato standing upright. Return to the oven until piping hot. Garnish with parsley and serve on individual dishes. This is an excellent meat substitute.

Potatoes and Cheese.

Boil six or seven potatoes until mealy, mash very smooth, add two tablespoonfuls butter, pepper and salt to taste and enough hot milk to make quite soft. Beat into potatoes one-half cupful of grated cheese, then grate thin layer of cheese on the top and set in oven until the cheese toasts.

Potato Puffs.

Two cupfuls of mashed potatoes, two eggs whipped lightly, one tablespoonful melted butter, one cupful of milk and one teaspoonful of salt. Beat ingredients together until fluffy and put into greased muffin tins. Sprinkle the top with grated cheese and brown in oven.

SENTIMENT STILL LIVES IN OUR LARGE CITIES, SAYS ELEANOR GATES

TRUE romance, according to the corner store philosophers, becomes anaemic as civilization progresses, and in the larger cities is to be found only in the dictionary—that is, with a few slight reservations.

Give ear to the arguments of these gentry for a time and they may succeed in convincing you that the tall buildings, standing shoulder to shoulder over miles and miles of acreage, hold back the expression of real human sentiment; that the labor necessary to overcome the great distances between dwellings and places of business tends to stifle gentler thoughts and sentiment, and that the everlasting competition and hustle for existence throttles the heart interest in a vast majority of those living in or about the confines of our large cities.

To them no place remains for the love-making and honeymooning of their day dreams but the hamlet sprinkled countryside, and they are loath even to admit that the nation's entry into the great war, a circumstance upon which romance always has thrived to the full, will do much to revive true sentiment, at least as far as this city is concerned.

For the purpose of obtaining a worth while opinion from one who has viewed romance from all angles and has given it years of study, the question of whether romance is a dead letter in the big cities—so dead that even the war cannot revive it—was put before Miss Eleanor Gates for answer.

Miss Gates, author and traveller, whose pronounced opinions on romance of all complexions have found expression in her books and plays, is probably best known and loved because of her wonderful tale of child life, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," afterward dramatized and then enacted for the films, and for her faithful delineation of the modern business woman in her book "Apron Strings."

"Any suggestion that the country and not the city is the ideal place for love-making and honeymooning," she said, "is from my viewpoint a million miles from the truth. I spent nineteen years of my life in the country, and I look back upon these years with a shudder. The city really is private, while the country is the most public place in the world.

"Every living creature craves privacy for its lovemaking and mating. It is God's scheme and nature's effort, and in the city, as nowhere else, the human creatures can find the privacy which they need. In the country, where the people are narrow and prone to exaggerate, every move, every coming and going of all, are watched by eyes on every side. The slightest incidents which in the city would pass unnoticed there are seized upon for gossip, and the snoops delight in nosing into every one's affairs and gossipping about everything they see.

"No, I simply abhor the country and its people for their narrow views and boorishness. It is all very well for the poets to rave for making love in the fields of clover or beneath the shade trees along some babbling brook, while the birds sing and the bees hum, but those flights of fancy are rubbish. Like the brooks, the poets merely babble. There is no privacy in the country. Let a man but speak to a girl and at once some of the busybodies couple their names, and if they should walk half a mile together those who saw them would promptly declare them engaged, and in course of time, through their gossip, probably would make the two marry.

"There are more love tragedies in the country than anywhere on earth, and often those living there who would like to spoon in the good, old fashioned way are driven apart either by gossip or the uncouth attempts at humor by those about them.

"Love is a splendid egotism, but an egotism which shuns publicity. It brings out the best in two human creatures hopeful of mating but desirous of exchanging their sweet confidence beyond the notice of those who would note their every action and comment or jest about them.

"You ask, Will the entry of this nation into the war to crush Europe's greatest madman and his followers tend to increase romance here? Unhesitatingly I answer in the affirmative. War itself is splendid romance—the great, big, mighty romance through which brave men with sentiment, honor and traditions to fulfil have in the past and will in the future thwart the designs of the wicked, the cruel and the avaricious.

"The sight of a soldier's uniform thrills every one, but particularly a woman, for to her it represents bravery and strength and, what has fully as great an appeal, defence. Sometimes the feeling kindled is but admiration, but where the woman is interested in the man it increases the love interest. And isn't it the most natural thing in the world for a woman, loving a man about to go forth to battle, to wish to cement that love with marriage before his leave-taking, perhaps never to return? Is there a woman worth while who does not feel a thrill of satisfaction, even though it be tinged with sorrow, when she realizes that the one man in all the world for her has taken his arms and gone forth, at the risk of his life, to fight for the cause of humanity, for her protection and for his country and its traditions?

War and Marriage.

"I know of a young married lawyer, a man whose income was fully $10,000 a year, who has dropped all business and, with a lieutenant's commission which will bring him about $2,000 a year, has gone to Europe to fight the savage Prussian. But his wife would not have it otherwise, for he has proved that he is a man—every inch of him. She would far rather picture him on the battlefields of Europe, clad in khaki, than to see him daily riding in the street cars in his tweeds.

"And this brings me to another point. Why does the government persist in separating the soldiers and their families? To be sure, there is a theory that this separation makes the final start for the battlefields less keenly felt, but that is not sound reasoning and gets us nowhere. If I had my way there would be homes for the families of the soldiers erected opposite every encampment, and every minute that the men were not actually on duty they would be with their wives and children. Let the men and their wives mingle as in times of peace, and after they are gone let their wives bear children. Those are the kind of children we want—not those of the slackers who sneak out of service and remain behind, to continue to populate the earth with offspring who may grow up as despicable as themselves. It would be a magnificent thing to feel that every man who went to the front would later on be the father of a living monument to his bravery.

"Isn't it a farce that the government will not do what it can that there may be more and more sound, beautiful children of soldier men when these contemptible slackers are permitted to remain behind and continue to breed? And some of these ingrates have managed to make their way back to Europe recently and are striving to hinder in every way possible the efforts of those allied in the war for humanity to crush the most autocratic power that ever strove to wreck civilization."

Preserving Fruit Juices for Jelly

FRUIT juices for use later in jelly making can be sterilized and bottled without sugar and made into jellies at the housewife's convenience.

This enables her to do with fewer jelly glasses and to distribute her purchases of sugar for jelly making through the year. Moreover, with the bottled juice she can make a greater variety of jellies, as juices which will not jell can be put up when the fruit is ripe and combined later with fruits that will jell, or fruits ripening at different seasons can be combined.

For example, the juice of strawberries, cherries or pineapples can be kept without sugar, and later when apples are plentiful can be made into combination jelly.

From the unsugared sterilized juices of currants, apples, cranberries and grapes, kept from nine to eighteen months, the Bureau of Chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, recently made jellies of excellent texture, flavor and color.

To put up unsugared fruit juices for jelly making, proceed exactly as if jelly were to be made at the time. Cook the fruits until they are soft and strain out the juice through a flannel bag. Heat and pour while hot into bottles previously scalded.

Fill the bottles full, leaving no air space between juice and cork or seal. Place the filled sealed bottles on their sides in water near the boiling point and keep them in the bath for about thirty minutes.

Make sure that the corked or sealed end is under the hot water. As soon as the bottles are cool cover the cork with a paraffin seal. Thorough sterilization and sealing are absolutely essential to success.

To make jelly from the sterilized juice test its jelly quality and the proper amount of sugar and proceed as in making jelly from freshly expressed juice.

To make coffee butter icing, stir six ounces of butter with fourteen ounces of fine icing sugar until it is the consistency of cream; add by degrees strong coffee to taste; spread between cakes like jam.

Onions, if large enough, may be stuffed with the same filling used for tomatoes.

Wafers which are not sweet are an agreeable change served with afternoon tea.

Coast to Coast in a Modern Apartment on Wheels

MR AND MRS A W ROBBINS AND AN INTERIOR AND EXTERIOR VIEW OF THEIR HOUSE ON WHEELS

From coast to coast in the world's only "house on wheels" is the feat of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Robins, of San Francisco, now in New York, after an adventurous trip across the continent in an automobile that has all the conveniences of the modern city apartment.

When the trip was decided upon, out in San Francisco, Mrs. Robins declared she would not travel unless she could have all the comforts of home, so Mr. Robins hastened to a garage, where he mapped out plans for the "house on wheels."

The new home of the Robinses has a bedroom, parlor, library, kitchen and conservatory with growing plants all in one. It is a light touring car with a truck body and rides as smoothly as a ship on the sea, Mrs. Robins says. She declares she is the one who should know, for it was she who drove every inch of the big stretch from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

Adventurous Trip.

There was no time limit on the trip and it was filled with so much adventure that the car has been given the name "Adventurer." Once when the car was in the Rocky Mountains the Robinses were attacked by wildcats, but escaped. Again when the car was making a steep hill the brakes collapsed and both Mr. and Mrs. Robins had narrow escapes when it began to crash backward down the steep incline.

Big, cushiony seats used by the driver in day time are transformed at night into a big, comfortable bed. There is a water tank with running water, hot and cold, also a folding sink, portable baths and a gas stove. Electricity and gas for lighting are nothing new for "The Adventurer," and there is a separate oven, where Mrs. Robins bakes her own bread.

The library and conservatory are the prettiest "rooms" in the "house." The library is filled with books in cases and a victrola that boasts of one hundred of the very latest records. Oftentimes when the wolves were howling off in the mountain Mr. and Mrs. Robins were dancing to the tune of a Jazz band piece or a tango. Flowers and ferns adorn the conservatory, the windows of which are dressed in lace curtains.

Closets, drawers, butler's pantry, an ice chest, folding chairs and tables and a writing desk are a few of the other things in the "house on wheels."

Mr. Robins was a printer in San Francisco, where he and his wife were for the last ten years. Mrs. Robins' home is in Chicago, and they stopped off there on their way East. As soon as the weather becomes real cold in the East they will start for Florida, where they expect to remain until spring.

Talks with the Chaperon

"OH, I'm so tired of being homely!" Evelyn burst out.

"And I am just as tired of having every one think that because I'm not cross-eyed or snub-nosed I can't do anything worth while!" Alice grumbled.

"But you are not at all plain to me, Evelyn, nor to those who love you. It seems to me the others do not matter," I said to Evelyn, then glanced up from my book just in time to see a peevish frown make really plain the clever, interesting face of the girl. "And you, Alice," I continued, as my eyes rested on her perfect profile, "are too wholesome, too sensible, to allow such thoughts to disturb you. Pretty is as pretty does, you know. And, girls, people are beginning to realize that the plain girl is not necessarily clever nor the pretty one stupid. It all depends on the girl herself."

"Oh, I know, Miss Dawson!" Evelyn declared, "but the plain girl never gets any attention! No one wants to take her anywhere. It's the pretty girls like Alice who get all the invitations."

"You see, Miss Dawson, the boys never ask me to go out with them as they do the other girls," Evelyn continued. "They rather take a girl they can be proud of—one like Margery."

I knew that Margery was not nearly as clever as Evelyn, not nearly such good company, although she was faultlessly pretty. But men, even big boys, grow tired of a pretty face after a while unless the girl also possesses brains and a kindly heart. Have you ever seen a picture which at first glance seemed beautiful, but which on closer inspection was meaningless? Or a picture which at first did not attract you, but which "grew on you" because of what it came to mean to you? That is just the way it is with girls. You are beautiful or not to those who care for you, according as the beauty of your soul is made evident to them.

I know two sisters so nearly of an age they are frequently taken for twins. One is very pretty, the other plain. One is sure to attract, and at every dance or party she is singled out for much attention, while, at first, the plainer sister seems to be doomed as a wall flower. But aside from beauty of face the kindly heart of the one makes the lot of the other equally happy with her own. After a young man has danced with her she insists he shall dance with her sister, which he invariably does. The sister, knowing she is plain, has become an exquisite dancer so that she may have something to offer her partner, as she laughingly puts it.

There is a lesson in this, dear girls. If you are plain and find yourself a bit neglected, do not sit in a corner and weep, but find out some one thing you can do and then do it a little better than any other girl you know does it. Then, too, never forget that the beauty of kindness, of thoughtful consideration for others, lasts when the beauty of face is forgotten.

But to return to Evelyn.

About a year after our little talk I heard that she was to marry one of the most intelligent, most successful young business men in the city where she lives.

Do not think it always turns out this way, for Alice, one of the prettiest of my girls, married a splendid man, and she makes him the best of wives. But alas and alack, it is too often the case that the pretty girl depends on her prettiness, and so her plain sister, who cultivates charm, a kindly heart and intellectual powers outstrips her in life. Dear plain girls, do not dwell upon the fact that your nose isn't Grecian or your hair golden. Nor, my dear pretty girls, do you not think because of your beauty you will succeed if you are silly, giggling creatures. Both of you make the most of the face and form God has given you. Make of yourself the charming, unselfish girl who is welcomed everywhere, and who wears well.

For—let me whisper it—

The girl who has developed every charm, every talent, every kindly impulse she possesses, has far more chance of holding the affection of the man she eventually marries than does the girl who all her life has banked only on her prettiness. Marrying a man is not so difficult—every girl has at least one chance. It's keeping the loyal, devoted husband that shows the really successful woman.

Home Administration

LONG past is the day when the household administration might be conducted on a haphazard basis. To-day the woman who holds the reins of government of the domestic circle finds herself getting nearer and nearer to the medieval days when the chatelaine of the castle meant far more than the carrier of the keys.

For, strange as it may seem, the housekeeper of to-day is not so far removed from the woman of that far period, whose life was so narrow and so circumscribed in many ways, and on whom there yet devolved many and arduous duties.

Home Administration.

The woman who does not administer the affairs of the home to-day with consideration of the period in which she lives, and of the effect of her methods not only on her own household but on the lives of those about her, is placing herself not only in the class with the feminine parasite, but is, all unwittingly, proclaiming herself one of that army of slackers. The army, luckily, is growing less daily, as it is being brought home to the American people that warfare in the trenches and on the high seas is not the only way to serve one's country.

It is a pity that so few American women have been really trained in the keeping of household accounts. The women of France and of England have had instilled into them for many generations the need of this training if they are to meet the obligations of their high station.

The women of this country have been used to delegating much of the conduct of their households to servants, or else have been so engaged in doing the work of the home themselves that they have taken small notice of the importance of keeping household accounts of any kind.

Yet there is no way in which the family income may so easily be depleted as by a haphazard manner of housekeeping.

Every woman who is at the head of a household, whether her own or in the capacity of housekeeper to another, should not only keep a record of every expenditure, but should study the markets, be grounded in the scientific value of foods and be culinary expert enough to know when those foods are prepared in such a way as to get from each pound of food and of fuel its greatest value.

No longer may the women of America go light heartedly on their way, leaving the administration of their homes to paid help, for it is no longer a matter of personal preference as to keeping house or leaving it to some one else. America needs more than anything else just now that the women of this country be imbued with a deep and abiding realization of their duty in conserving the products of the land that must feed not only the people of this country, but our men abroad, and help to nourish the armies of the Allies.

Not easily may one make a pound of food do what two pounds once did, for the sake of the nation. But this can be done, and is being done by many women in the United States.

Where the home has been allowed to take care of itself, or left much to servants, it is not an easy thing to conduct the household according to the present standards of living, when to waste is considered a disgrace, and to spend a dollar more than necessary a real, if unintentional, evidence of disloyalty.

The magazines and newspapers of the country are doing their part in educating women to a real appreciation of duty to their government in the matter of food control, and for those who need other assistance in the matter of food values and scientific application to home living the government in Washington will gladly furnish all information desired.

Start an Account Book.

The woman who cooks her own meals and cares for her own household economically and proficiently is doing her part quite as effectively as the woman who is able to leave these details to a housekeeper or a maid, while she takes her place with the Red Cross workers or the other organizations which are rendering such effective aid to the United States government.

Get out your old arithmetic and practise addition. Start an account book to-day. Study food values, use tried recipes, and by giving your family nourishing food at a minimum cost do your part in this great world war.

FRENCH REPULSE FOE'S COUNTER ATTACKS

Russian Government Pledges Support For The Allies

CRISIS ARISES IN GERMAN REICHSTAG OVER PLOT CHARGE

Political Development in Germany as Result of Charges That Radical Socialists Were Involved in Mutiny in German Navy--Little News From Western Battle Front---French Repulse Attempts of Enemy to Retake Lost Ground

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROTTERDAM, October 11.—The statements of Vice-Admiral Von Capelle, Minister of Marine, have turned the Reichstag in a theatre of wildest scandal, says Vorwaerts, discussing the exposure of mutinies within the German navy. The Socialist newspaper adds that there is no shadow of proof that any deputies were guilty of illegal action in connection with the mutiny. The Vossische Zeitung describes the attack on the Independent Socialists as deplorable and an illegal trick on the part of the Government.

"Those guilty of complicity in the plot to paralyze the German navy through mutinies should be handled with iron severity," says the Rheinische Westfalische Zeitung, of Essen. It adds: "They are liable to the death penalty. Thank God Liebknecht, the German Socialist leader, now in prison, was properly dealt with, and in the present case there can only be similar action."

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, October 11.—Having faced what was established to-day as a wide-spread revolt in the navy and with mutterings of discontent in the army, the German military machine was expected by observers here to seek eradication of all opposing elements by new iron hand methods. The belief was expressed in some quarters that German militarists would seize the opportunity afforded by their preliminary suppression of revolt to sweep away all radicals. The fact that German censors passed the news of the naval rebellion was taken here as evidence that the militarists had managed again to gain complete ascendancy, and that they were seeking an excuse for even more rigorous measures against popular rule.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, October 11.—Germnay's paper crisis over the pan-German propaganda which loomed so big in anticipation, but was so small in results has passed. In its place has risen a new, and this time really serious crisis caused by the attempt of Chancellor Michaelis, Vice-Chancellor Helfferich and Minister of the Navy Von Capelles to use the alleged plot in the German navy as a political weapon against the party of the extreme left in the Reichstag. The immediate results of the disclosures of Chancellor Michaelis and Vice-Admiral Von Capelle have been that Government Socialists have been driven into complete opposition and into alignment with Radical Socialists, that the followers of Phillip Scheidemann have delivered formal declaration of war against the Government until Chancellor Michaelis has been removed from office. Stripped of its embellishments the Government statement reduced itself to the charge that agitation to enroll members for the Radical Socialists party had been carried on in the navy, that leaflets had been distributed, and that two of the executed sailors had visited Deputies Haase, Vogtherr and Dittman.

The newspapers intimate that towards the close of the Reichstag session Deputy Haase and his Radical Socialists colleagues appeared rather in the role of accusers than of the accused, and they print in large type Deputy Ledebour's ironical interjection as Chancellor Michaelis rose to reply—"The prisoner will now take the stand."

Washington Regards Mutiny As Serious

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, October 11.—The mutiny in the German fleet is by far the most significant happening in Germany since war broke out.

Germany's sailors know full well whether the submarine warfare is a failure or success, he pointed out. Their mutiny signifies that they realize Germany, in the ultimate, is beaten.

The Navy and State departments believe the German mutiny is perhaps the longest stride toward democracy in Germany that has yet leaked out. Officials do not declare that the mutiny signified the general overturn in Germany. But the Cabinet member believes the naval mutiny is far worse than revealed by the German admissions. When sailors throw their captain overboard and head for Norway things are serious, he pointed out.

Discontent among the men of the German fleet is a sure sign of real trouble, inasmuch as Germany, like every other nation, looks after its sailors better than the army or any other branch. Further, Germany's navy is under the most rigid discipline in the world.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 11.—The official statement issued by the British War Office regarding military operations on the battle front in France and Belgium says: "There was heavy rain again last night. The enemy's artillery showed considerable activity during the night west of Jasschendaele. Otherwise nothing of special interest to report."

CHARGED WITH BOMB OUTRAGES

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.— Three men are under arrest here to-day charged with conspiracy to put bombs on ships carrying supplies to the allies. They are Joseph Zeffert, an American; Walter Uhhe, a German lithographer, and Eugene Reister, a naturalized American, born in Germany. It is charged that between January, 1915 and February, 1916, they had a hand in putting explosives on at least thirty vessels in New York harbour, including the Lusitania.

A WARNING AGAINST TOO MUCH FAITH IN GERMAN MUTINY

London Observers and Editors Emphasize the Danger of Attaching Undue Significance to Story of Revolt

EDITORS SKEPTICAL

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Oct. 11.— It would be a big mistake for America hastily to conclude that the German mutiny means the beginning of the end. Intelligent students of German affairs, with exceptional "inside information," warned to-day against attaching undue significance to the revolt of a few sailors, which rebellion was immediately repressed with iron handed discipline, and which was doubtless caused by bad or insufficient food, oppressive discipline, monotonous canal life, etc. As anti-Socialist propaganda, Admiral Von Capelle and Chancellor Michaelis are shrewdly utilizing the incident to bolster up the government and discredit the minority Socialists.

Incidentally, they seek to create the impression abroad that the spirit of the revolution is much more widespread than the facts warrant, hoping thereby to lure the allies into relaxing of their military efforts.

Some British editors to-day were extremely skeptical of the whole story.

"We must not let ourselves build any hopes on such a tale told for a transparent purpose," warned the Chronicle. "It would be a still greater mistake if we relaxed the firmness and solidarity of our own national attitude under the impression thus to induce the Germans to relax theirs. Doing so would be ignoring all lessons experience has taught us in German psychology. Prussianism will never be seriously menaced from within until certainty of its destruction is wrought from without."

"The allies must not rely on any movement of this kind to do for them the work which must be done by the sun and bomb," declared the Daily Mail.

TOTAL RESULTS SO FAR.

Number examined	375
Fit for trenches	209
Fit for non-combatant service overseas	22
Fit for duty in Canada	40
Unfit for any duty	104

The majority of the candidates who were examined this morning were farmers and many sections of the county were represented. Norwood, Hastings, Harwood and other villages being given as the home addresses of the men presenting themselves. There was a small percentage of total rejections, only four men out of twenty-one examined being placed in E category.

The local Medical Board set a new high record for the number of men examined in one day yesterday, when they looked over fifty-four men, an increase of two over Tuesday's mark. Twenty-three were in front of the doctors at the morning session and twenty-one in the afternoon. At the night session the Board confined their activities to ten examinations, and the other men who presented themselves were asked to come back again. The day was a good one as far as providing possible reinforcements was concerned, as no fewer than thirty-five qualified for Class A, or as one of the men who drew the grade remarked, "A free trip to the trenches." The percentage of Class A men during the day was 65, an increase of two per cent. over Tuesday's figures. An analysis of the statistics show that during the last two days 106 men have been examined, of which 68 or 64 per cent. qualified for service at the front. The rejections, Class E men, for the two days, numbered 27.

Ottawa, Oct. 10. — Four hundred and fifty two returned soldiers were added to the strength of the Military Hospital Commission command during the week ending September 22, according to figures just compiled. The total number of patients being cared for by the commission on that date was 9,068. The next bulletin or two, however, will show a very large increase, as somewhere in the neighborhood of 3,000 men have arrived in the Dominion since Sept. 22.

The commission recently compiled a record of its accommodation and the figures shown were slightly over 11,000. In January, 1917, there were just 2,500 men on the strength of the Military Hospitals Commission command, with accommodation about equal. These tremendous strides in housing the ever-increasing stream of returned men are being maintained by a building programme which, it is expected, will add another 4,000 beds by the beginning of the new year.

There were on September 14, 21,324 Canadian sick and wounded in the Old Country, an increase of 296 during a week.

DROPPED DEAD WHILE AT WORK

Death's Call Came Suddenly to Mr. Thomas Crowley

Thomas Crowley, 376 McDonnell street, died suddenly this morning.

Mr. Crowley had for the past few weeks been helping out in the harvest, at Mr. Sanderson's farm on the Mud Lake Road. This morning he rose apparently in his usual good health, and assisted in bringing in the corn. He had brought a load in, and immediately after unloading the last stook dropped dead. Dr. Carmichael was called but pronounced the man dead on his arrival.

Deceased was born in Downeyville, Emily, about fifty years ago, and had up to about three years ago resided in that village, when he came to the city. During his long residence in Downeyville and since coming to the city Mr. Crowley had been held in great respect by all who knew him. He leaves of the immediate family to mourn his death, three sisters, Miss Jane Crowley and Mrs. Wm. Travers, who reside at home, and Mrs. Thomas Turkett, who resides in the city. His parents predeceased him some years ago.

A sad circumstance in connection with Mr. Crowley's death is the fact that his sister, Mrs. John Toomey, was killed a month ago in an automobile accident in Detroit.

The funeral, to Downeyville cemetery, will be held on Saturday morning. Service at St. Peter's, before leaving.

FOOD CONTROL FOR THE VATICAN

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

ROME, Oct. 11.—Pope Benedict to-day authorized the issuance of bread and sugar tickets to the whole of the Vatican population. Six hundred cards were issued. The Vatican will exercise the strictest supervision to prevent possible evasion. The cards are those issued by the Italian government.

NO TEMPORARY QUARTERS FOR LOCAL WAR VETERANS

PTE. GEO. HARRIS, former member of the 93rd Battalion, who has returned from overseas. He was at the front with the 52nd Battalion and was wounded last winter by shrapnel.

Joint Committee Met Last Night But Took No Action When G. W. V. A. Representatives Announced That They Had Decided on Immediate Campaign For Permanent Building.

WILL START AT ONCE

The decision of the Great War Veterans' Association to go ahead at once with a campaign for funds for a permanent headquarters, as announced in yesterday's Examiner, simplified the work of the joint committee appointed last week and which met last night in the committee room at the City Buildings.

This committee which was composed of Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mayor Duffus, Messrs. J. J. Turner and G. N. Gordon, representing the citizens, and Comrades H. J. Staunton, Geo. Toone, and Sid. Whatley, of the War Veterans, had been empowered by last week's public meeting to go into the question of securing the Peterborough Club or some other temporary quarters for the Veterans. All the committee were in attendance at last night's meeting, while Dr. J. M. McCulloch, and Messrs. W. H. Denham and E. L. Goodwill were present to represent the directors of the Peterborough Club.

In opening the meeting Mayor Duffus, who was voted to the chair, said that he had been looking at several places that might do as temporary quarters, the most suitable he thought being the flat over the Royal Bank building. He had asked Mr. Turner to inquire into the possibility of temporary accommodations being found at the Y.M.C.A.

"There are no rooms there large enough," Mr. Turner remarked.

Mr. Gordon pointed out that the old Oriental Hotel building might be available.

"Are you referring to it as a possibility for permanent quarters?" asked Mrs. Morris. "Because this committee has not power to deal with the question of permanent quarters," she added.

The committee discussed for a few minutes the Peterborough Club proposition. Mrs. Morris did not think the premises suitable and remarked they would be an expensive proposition for temporary quarters.

Mr. Gordon was of the opinion that the Peterborough Club rooms were big and comfortable enough for the purpose.

Mr. Turner suggested that possibly the War Veterans had already decided among themselves the suitability of the Peterborough Club, and if they were not in favour of that property as a temporary quarters there was no use of the committee further discussing the proposal.

President Staunton replied that the Peterborough Club was not considered large enough, and this announcement resulted in the dropping of the proposition entirely and the directors of the Peterborough Club withdrew from the meeting.

The representatives of the Veterans announced that at their meeting on Tuesday night they had decided that they would endeavour to get along with their present quarters, using them for executive meetings and the Armouries for general meetings, and that they would inaugurate at once a campaign for funds for a suitable permanent building. They believed that now was the proper time for such a campaign, that if it was deferred until the end of the war, it might prove unsuccessful and that temporary quarters would be an expensive proposition that would not meet the needs of the situation.

KAUFF'S HOMER SCORED THE FIRST RUN FOR GIANTS

FABER VS. SCHUPP

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The New York Giants flushed with their victory of yesterday, and the Chicago White Sox stung by defeat, were prepared for a stirring battle to-day in the fourth game of the series for the baseball championship of the world. The two-to-nothing victory has greatly heartened the New York players, and baseball sharps would not be surprised if they carry the fighting right home to the White Sox and lengthen the series to seven games. Fans in larger numbers were out early waiting for the gates to the Brush Stadium to open.

To-day's game will be the last in which the players share in receipts. After to-day's game the scene again shifts to Chicago where the fifth game will be played on Saturday. If a sixth is necessary it will be played on the Polo Grounds Monday.

The probable batting order for to-day's game is:

Chicago—J. Collins, lf; McMullen, 3b; E. Collins, 2b; Jackson, rf; Felsh, m; Gandil, 1b; Weaver, ss; Schalk, c; Faber, p.

First Innings.

Chicago.— Zimmerman took John Collins' grounder and threw him out. McMullin's grounder bounced off Zimmerman's glove for a hit. Eddie Collins fanned, a wide curve fooling him on the third strike. Schupp wasted one, but McMullin held first. Herzog threw out Jackson at at first. No runs, one hit, no errors.

New York.—Burns drove a high fly which Felsch took after a short run. Eddie Collins made a nice play on Herzog's hopper, and got his man at first. McMullin got Kauff's bounder and nailed his man at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Second Innings.

Chicago.—Fletcher took Felsch's hot grasser and threw his man out. Schupp had plenty of speed and kept the ball low. Schupp tossed out Gandil. Weaver fished for Schupp's high curves and was a strike out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Third Innings.

John Collins fanned, missing a drop ball for the third strike. No runs, one hit, no errors.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, OCT. 11, 1917

UNITED STATES WIDE-AWAKENESS.

As he might express it, himself, in his native vernacular, Uncle Sam is into the war "with both feet." The United States put in force a draft law that draws. It has already between 500,000 and a million soldiers enrolled, some of them at the front in training, and others on the way. It has done this in fewer than six months, and in the same time it has poured out money like water. Since the United States Congress convened in extraordinary war session, last April, and up to October 6th, it has voted 17,000 million dollars, and has authorized contracts for 2,500 million more. The larger part of the money voted was for war purposes, 7,000 millions being for loans to the Allies. This is good team work, and shows what important and almost directly decisive help the United States is contributing, and will contribute to winning the war. In addition, the United States has put into action very effective food conrol, and export regulations to the end of conserving to the utmost the vital essential of military efficiency at home and in the field.

It has, besides, provided for distributing generally and equitably the burden of financial contribution in the form of a war tax to be imposed under the new war revenue law. It is widely inclusive in its operation and will be effectively enforced.

In line with the promptness and thoroughness in the matter of measures tending to help win the victory, the United States is gathering information that will help the representatives of the United States to take an intelligent and effective part in the negotiations of the Peace Conference that will be convened when the war is over; when the militarism of Prussia is crushed, and when the readjustment of the conditions affecting the interests of European nations and the nations of the world will be subjects of consideration. All-round, the United States is doing its best, in a hearty and business-like manner, characteristic of the business nation it is.

The latest Prussian delusion bases German world domination on the defeat of Britain, but Haig is at present slightly interfering with that condition.

THE BOYS AT THE FRONT.

At this time when, with a little shiver, anticipatory of winter rigours, we snuggle up to the fire, our hearts naturally go out to the boys at the front, or in training in England, who will not have the opportunities we have—warm homes, comfortable beds and variety of foods and comforts.

Not only is winter coming, but Christmas is coming, and as we think of the way we are to spend it at home to make it a "Merry Christmas," we should think of our boys who have prospects of a "dreary Christmas"—in snow or mud and bursting shells and smoke-blurred air, and with no gathering of friends and relatives to brighten the day. If our soldiers are "homesick" at any time, it will be at Christmas, when the ghts of home, and family gatherings, come to their minds. We can brighten the occasion by showing that we remember them—by sending them parcels of Christmas cheer.

The matter of doing this, or of sending other articles, is very much simplified, by the arrangements provided through that live and energetic organization, the Peterborough Progressive Club, by the Canadian Field Comforts Commission, which, if the money equivalent of parcels is provided, will not only purchase the parcel, but see that it is promptly forwarded to any address.

It is a serious matter for many persons, having soldiers to remember, to drop household duties to get the parcel together, to properly and safely bundle it and look to the sending. Al this trouble can be obviated. In another part of this issue is printed a notice of the contents of seven or eight different kinds of parcels, and the cost. If this is furnished, and the parcel designated, the amount is forwarded to the Field Comforts Commission and the parcel selected will be promptly forwarded to the individual soldier, with any card or message the sender may desire.

Persons wishing to remember soldiers should read carefully the notice of the Comforts Commission, cut it out and carefully preserve for reference; and should put themselves in communication with the officials of the Progressive Club, and the way is opened for sending a parcel that will arrive in good condition, which is not the case with many food parcels sent from Canada, after the delay of three thousand miles of transport.

If anybody wants to make a "Merry Christmas" for some soldier in training camp or trench, a parcel of Christmas cheer will help make it so.

PROGRESS, SLOW BUT SURE.

In the thirty-ninth month of this gigantic war struggle the indications for the ultimate, if not speedy, success of the allied side, are becoming more favourable every day. We have the daily repeated story of successes on the western front. These successes are not to be measured altogether by the gain of ground, though strategically that is important. There are other less potent and less concrete considerations to be reckoned with. The successes gained by the allies are won at a tremendous expense of munitions, but at a comparatively low cost of men, that is low as compared with the losses inflicted upon the enemy. These continued inroads on the enemy man force—this deadly attrition, is compelling radical overhauling of Germany's man power. The western front is as strongly manned as possible by the enemy, but that becomes a doubtful advantage. The more men the greater the loss. Even with Russia a negligible quantity in a military sense, Germany cannot muster a controlling force on the western front though all her man forces are utilized. On the contrary the allied armies are numerically stronger than ever before, of better quality and of greater effectiveness from experience.

But it is not in man power alone that allied superiority consists. In the matter of artillery and munitions the allied forces are vastly superior—to the point that they are able to melt the enemy forces in the fierce fire of great guns, without much employment of infantry— saving their troops, while they mow down those of the enemy

These are palpable advantages, but there are subsidiary advantages not so apparent, but they are very important. Among these is the immense money superiority of the allies, especially with that of the United States thrown into the scale; the superiority of food supply, of munitions, of materials. Stewart Lyon, the Canadian correspondent of the Canadian Press, lets in light on the capability and resources of the allies. He visited certain points near the coast, where the "business administration" of our armies in France is centred. He says:

"At one of these, where a Canadian Forestry Company has to do with the wood-working side of things, I saw warehouses and workships on a scale that is probably unparallelled in the world. One of these sheds, in which foodstuffs for man and beast, medical supplies and parcels for soldiers from friends, are housed, awaiting despatch, to the front, is almost half a mile long, by a hundred yards wide. Over a thousand men, chiefly Kaffirs from South Africa, and negroes from the West Indies, are required to handle the goods, in this one shed, yet it seems to be almost deserted."

This is but a single example or indication of the virtually exhaustless resources of the allies, in food, means of handling and handling labour—an endless supply of coolies is available from China—thus permitting every possible fighting man to be released for fighting, with assurance that they will be fed wtih food and munitions; for the transport provisions are adequate to a marvel. Railways for transport of munitions, food and guns, can be almost built "while you wait"—while the locomotive is getting up steam. Material for bridges that can carry artillery and tanks, and 120 feet long, can be shipped and en route in three hours.

The work of the allied advance is slow—but sure, and it will continue with increasing force by virtue of the fact, that the allies are growing stronger in men, munitions, money, supplies and machinery, of support of fighting and fighting forces.

Uncle Sam's standing order—"There must be no manipulation or speculation in foods."

HOW THE UNITED STATES GETS IN ITS WAR TAX WORK

Washington, Friday.—Notice to the public to make its tax returns to the government under the new War Revenue law, was issued to-night by Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper, in an interpretive statement of the law's operation. Warning was given that in no case would the government take the initiative in getting in returns, although all returns would be verified, and everybody concerned should communicate promptly with the nearest revenue office.

Persons failing to make returns Mr. Roper announced, will be regarded as tax slackers and penalties will be enforced against them. As outlined in the statement, the following persons are affected, and must make returns to the government:

"All corporations, joint stock companies and associations.

"All distillers, rectifiers, wholesalers and retailers, holders of distilled spirits intended for sale or to be used for manufacturing purposes.

"All dealers in fermented liquors and malt liquor, wines, cordials, liqueurs, domestic and imported.

"All manufacturers of and dealers in cigars, cigarettes, tobacco, snuff and cigarette papers.

"All carriers of freight, express or passenger and all operators of pipe lines.

"All dealers in life, marine, inland, fire and casualty insurance.

"All manufacturers and wholesale dealers in motor vehicles of every kind, musical instruments, motion picture films, jewelry, boats, sporting goods, perfumes, cosmetics, medicinal preparations, chewing gum and cameras.

"All proprietors of amusement places, including cabarets.

"All traders on produce or stock exchanges and boards of trade.

"All importers of merchandise.

"All manufacturers and importers of playing cards."

SEVERE PENALTIES PROVIDED

The statement continues:

"The law makes it the duty of every person, firm or corporation whose possessions or incomes are taxable to make true and correct returns upon which the tax may be assessed and collected. This information is of vital importance to every citizen, because, notwithstanding that the Bureau of Internal Revenue is the agency charged with the administration of the new law and the collection of the taxes, it is not required that the Bureau of Internal Revenue shall find out and inform persons, firms or corporations of their responsibility. Such persons, firms or corporations must for themselves make returns, which, in the course of administration, the Bureau of Internal Revenue will verify.

"Severe penalties are provided for failure upon the part of any person, firm or corporation to make the correct inventories and returns required.

"In the collection of the tax that will apply to articles or commodities in stock on October 4, 1917, it is the purpose of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to make, through its field force, preliminary inquiries of every person liable to tax to ascertain his possessions in the way of taxable goods and the amount of tax he is liable to pay. This preliminary inquiry will be conducted over a period of probably a week. Within 30 days from the date of enactment of the new law every person, firm or corporation liable to floor tax, must file with the Collector of Internal Revenue a true and correct inventory, under oath, of goods in his possession subject to this tax. Attached to the inventory must be a synopsis of the inventory and a statement of the amount of tax to be paid on the goods covered by the inventory.

BOND MAY BE FILED.

"This is known as a taxpayers' return. Upon the basis of this return and an analysis of the information disclosed by the preliminary inquiry and the taxpayers' inventory, the proper amount of tax will be determined. Payment of the tax must be made to the Collector of Internal Revenue at the time of filing the return, but payment may be extended to a date not exceeding seven months from the passage of the act upon the filing of a bond for payment.

"This bond may be given by an approved corporate surety company in a penal sum of not less than double the amount of the tax and in no case less than $1,000.

"The penalties for failure to comply with the requirements of the law are for slackers.

"Upon every citizen rests the responsibility of contributing to the utmost of his ability towards the successful termination of the war. It is the unquestioned duty of every true American citizen not only to pay the full tax the law requires of him, but to remove every possible obstacle to the successful administration of the law by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Under the circumstances it is a high privilege for every citizen to comply strictly with the terms of the law and to make it a part of his duty to see that every other citizen does likewise."

presentatives of the G.W.V.A. left the joint committee with nothing to report, inasmuch as the committee had been authorized to deal only with the question of temporary quarters.

Mrs. Morris before the meeting adjourned, referred to one aspect of the situation. It had been announced, she said, that the proposed building might be dedicated as a memorial for the Peterborough soldiers who had died at the front. Mrs. Morris believed that it was the feeling of many parents that a memorial should be of a more permanent nature than a club building. She, herself, had lost her only son in France and was not at all in sympathy with the idea of having the Veterans' build as a memorial.

The Veterans are making plans to launch their campaign in the near future. They will go into details at their general meeting to be held next Monday night in the Armouries.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

VILLAGE OF 100 SUPPORTS A MUSICAL CLUB.

Outville, Ohio, may not be the smallest town in the world, but it is the smallest town that supports a music club. A village of about 100 persons, without a hotel or a town hall, and only two public buildings, a school and a church, Outville still maintains a music club that to date has thirty members. Mrs. Ella May Smith, honorary president of the club, recently told of its beginnings in an article published in "Musical America."

In June, 1913, Mrs. Ella May Smith, of Columbia, suggested to her pupil, Mrs. Frank P. Letheran, of Outville, Ohio, that she give a song recital in her home town. Mrs. Letherman gave the recital and Mrs. Smith made a short address on "The Influence of a Music Club in a Community." At this very first concert in the history of the town, Mrs. Smith proposed that those present form a music club after the programme was completed. Her suggestion was received with delight and a club was formed on the spot.

In telling of the workings of the club, Mrs. Letherman, its president, said: "Our club dues are twenty-five cents for active members, and we charge fifty cents for the ten tickets for the season's public recitals. We have given forty-two public recitals in our church, besides our little meetings at our several homes during the entire year. We went right into the National Federation of Music Clubs the first year, and into the State Federation this last year."

The little club has a band of twelve pieces, a small orchestra, and a music library. Through the club, a music teacher for the school has been obtained from the Board of Education. Excellent talent from the neighbouring cities visits Outville once a month and furnishes splendid programmes.

Mrs. Smith summarizes the situation when she says:

"The prosperity of this club should be an inspiration to every little town on the continent. Were you to see the teams of horses, wagons, saddle horses, single and double buggies and automobiles standing drawn up about the fence in front of the church at 7.30 Saturday evening in each month, and were you to realize that the interest never waned and that, no difference what the weather, there was always an audience to greet the young musicians, it would convince you that all the world of men, women and children want more music in their lives and more life in their music."

MUSIC AND UNIVERSITIES.

Artists of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York gave a series of summer performances of Grand Opera in the Gymnasium of Columbia University under the baton of Marcel Charlier. The operas were Faust, La Boheme, Cavelleria Rusticana with I Pagliacci and La Tosca, two performances being given of each during the latter part of July. New York is particularly well situated for work of this kind, but in the Canadian universities there might be a broader and more definite plan of music presentation. At Toronto we have periodical organ recitals on the fine instrument of Convocation Hall, and there are examinations in music, but only once,—so far as the writer can recollect—has there been a distinctive musical "event" under the auspices of the University. That was the visit of the Russian Cathedral Choir of New York. One realizes that during the war the problem of the Board of Governors is not how to expand the influence of the University, but how to retain its position, but plans for the period succeeding the war might well be devised even in these times. Music has generally been the Cinderella of the Fine Arts at the Colleges as well as in social life.

THE VOICE OF MUSIC.

When art comes early in the life of a nation it is the expression of the people's emotional interest in beauty. When it comes later and civilization is full-fledged, it is born of a conventional appreciation of the world's established standards of beauty. The early music wells up out of great love, great joy, great splendid response to nature. In the later life of a nation, art comes from an appreciation of what it adds to life from a sense of its decorative importance. In other words one is born of an emotion, and one of an idea.

Wagner, strangely enough, combined both the traditional and the modern point of view in his music. He had the great idea of a new religion for the world, a religion that could no longer be held in the grasp of the Gods, that must be reborn through the splendor and tragedy of human love and sacrifice.

In the music of Strauss, you feel the pounding of a great idea, you feel suddenly that he is breaking down conventional barriers that have held people away from the intoxication and joy of music.

Beethoven had the great idea of bringing close to the people all pastoral beauty from the beginning of days. Whatever has been joyous in pastoral lives, whatever has been sad or thrilling or tender or peaceful, Beethoven has reproduced for the world's joy and strength.

A STANDARD OF COMPARISON

A fairy complete record of the names and performances of the various great singers may be found in the biographical dictionaries. There we may find the testimony of contemporaries to the power and beauty of the voice and to its expressional color. But one will find there also that type of extreme laudation which compares Malibran to the archangells and puts Jennie Lind among the superhumans. There is no means of knowing accurately how these notable artists compared with the singers of to-day. One must remember that public taste is vastly better than it was in other days and that a singer in these times must face a certain sophication in every audience. For that reason one is not justified in believing that the former times were better than these. In al probability the average of operatic singing now is higher both tonally and expressionally than it ever was before.

Fortunately our children will have an opportunity of comparison. One of the greatest services to vocal art came with the invention of the talking machine. We have conferred immortality upon the great folk of our time. Marie Rappold, Alma Gluck, Louise Homer and a hundred others will sing for generations after they are dead. Their artistic stature will be measured in comparison with the new singers who will arise and we shall have a standard of vocal appreciation and criticism which we can not discover to-day.

Not alone in singing, but in other branches of music such a standard will be available. It would be brave enjoyment, if we could have the opportunity to compare a record by Kreutzer or Paganini with one by Elman or Ysaye; if we could compare Lisst's piano playing and that of D' Albert or Godowsky. Meanwhile the interpretation of the classics by our distinguished artists of to-day is being recorded, and the men of to-morrow will know how far they must go before they may be counted worthy for the seats of the mighty.

In the past only the connoisseurs living in the largest cities had an opportunity of hearing the kings and queens of music. To-day the most remote trapper in the far north may hear the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in the Ride of the Valkyries or the Overture to Tannhauser. The prairie farmer may be as familiar with a score of great artists as his brother in Toronto or Montreal. The phonograph is bringing music and musical appreciation to the multitude and those who are inclined to consider it merely as a pleasing toy are making a profound mistake. They are missing one of the most important art-developments the world has ever known.

WEEKLY MARKET REPOPT

Few price changes are apparent in this week's market. Potatoes are holding firm at one dollar and twenty-five cents a bag, with a tendency to remain at that figure for some time to come. The market price of $1.25 a bag has had the effect of stiffening the price and it is doubtful if it will go lower. In the produce market chickens are selling for twenty-two cents a pound. Geese are worth the same and ducks are very scarce at forty-six and eight cents a pound. Butter sells now at forty-six and seven cents, with eggs ranging all the way from forty-six to fifty cents a dozen. A few turkeys are offering at twenty-five cents a pound with a limited demand.

The Grain Market.

Fall wheat is selling at about two dollars and twenty cents on the Peterborough market. Barley is worth one dollar and ten cents to twenty cents a bushel, while oats are firm at sixty cents.

To Serve You-Sons of Canada

---and to serve your comrades, the women in hundreds of thousands of Canadian homes have pledged themselves and their families to observe the Food Service Regulations.

Whether they be of the log cabin or of the palace--of the city street or of the broad acres, these women radiate the Spirit of Comradeship and Determination to do all in their power to insure you sufficient food supplies.

So, in your trenches from the North Sea to Switzerland --- on your ships wherever they may be, they send you this message.

"For all that you have done for us---in standing between the Civilized World and the Hun, we are proud and glad to render you this small service---we will live up to our Food Service Pledge.

Substitutes for Meat

Meat has always been considered the best tissue or flesh building food, and for this reason people have always eaten it a great deal. Most of our meat has come from the Western Provinces, but the tremendously large ranches of twenty years ago are gradually being cut up into small farms and cattle are not being raised in such large numbers any more. This is one reason why meat costs so much. Another reason is the great demand there is for it on the part of our people who do not know that there are other foods that will supply the needs of the body in just the same way that meat does and which in ordinary times do not cost as much as meat. For instance, we can use fish in place of meat much more than we do.

Other foods that can be used in place of meat are eggs, milk, cream soups, cereals, peas, lentils and nuts.

Eggs should be eaten with foods that are rich in starch, such as bread and potatoes. If so eaten, they will take care of the body just as completely as meat would.

Milk contains heat-giving, energy-giving and tissue-building properties. Cream soups made with skim milk and the pulp of vegetables can take the place of meat.

Cereals contain in varying proportions all the elements necessary to support life. They contain a great deal of starch, which is valuable as an energy giver. Oatmeal and corn-meal contain more fat than the other cereals, and, therefore, make a good winter food, especially for hard-working people. Cereals with cooked fruits are particularly appetizing.

Peas, Beans and Lentils are richer in flesh-building elements than any other vegetable and can be used in place of meat. Lentils are more easily digested than either peas or beans. If properly prepared, all these make very appetizing dishes. A dish of baked beans costing about 20 cents, will furnish a family of six with more nourishment than two pounds of beef costing 50 cents.

In stating that these dishes can be used in place of meat it is not our purpose to urge you to give up eating meat altogether. It is a fact, however, that as a people we eat too much meat, and you would undoubtedly find yourself much benefitted physically if you would cut down on the amount of meat you eat and vary your diet more than you do.

ISOLDE MENGES RECITAL

Miss Isolde Menges, the talented English violinist, made her second appearance in Peterborough last evening before a representative gathering of music lovers. In a varied and well selected programme she proved herself to be an accomplished artist and a clever interpreter of varied styles of music. Throughout the recital Miss Menges received enthusiastic demonstrations of approval and at the close she obligingly responded to the insistent demands of the audience by giving two extra numbers. Miss Menges prefaced each selection by a few remarks in naive comment on its style or meaning, these remarks being intended for the benefit of those in the audience who might not be familiar with the literature of the violin.

Miss Menges opened her programme with Tartini's Sonata, "The Devil's Trill," which was a clever interpretation of the composer's dream of the devil playing the violin at his bedside. Next followed a group of numbers, namely, Schubert-Wilhelmy's "Ave Maria," Francois Schubert's interpretation of a bee, humming and a one-minute French dance, "Le Basque," by Marin Marias. Another acceptable number in this group was "Berceuse," a composition written by Miss Menges' brother, when he was twelve years old. The remarkable musical talent of the family was strongly manifest in this splendidly played number. A quaint Norwegian selection by Tor Aulin completed the first group.

An extended Gounod number followed. In the second group the Pugnani Prelude was splendidly played with dignity of expression and tone. A pretty "Humoreske" by Dvorak-Kreisler was well received, also "La Chasse," by Cartier-Kreisler. In this piece Miss Menges effectively interpreted with characteristic abandon the sounds of the galloping horses, and the huntsman's horn. A Spanish dance, by Sarasate, was the final number in the second group. This and two encores proved to be a very capable effort.

How Shippers Can Relieve Car Shortage

War conditions interfere with car movements, and the weather conditions of winter last year increased the congestion and the coming winter may repeat this. Additional freight cars can be obtained only with great difficulty. Prompt deliveries of new rolling stock do not exist.

If each freight car does more work the difficulty can be faced and overcome. A freight car saved is a freight car gained for extra service. More service per car equals more cars in service. If all shippers load to full capacity or better to 110 per cent., when practicable, car shortage will largely disappear.

Prompt and heavy loading of cars gives more service per car. So also does prompt release of cars. Consignors and consignees are interested in getting cars. Their co-operation in efficient handling will help not only others, but themselves as well.

CONGREGATIONAL MEETING HELD AT TRINITY CHURCH

Reports Given From All Departments of the Church's Work

The congregation of Trinity Church met last evening in the Reid St. Sunday School hall to hear reports from the different departments of the church and to enjoy a social time together.

The work of Trinity Church is thriving under its able pastor, Rev. Dr. Wilson, and a progressive and enterprising officiary.

In addition to the reports, interesting musical numbers were given by Master Baden Greene, violinist, Mrs. Geo. H. King, soloist, Trinity Church, and Mr. J. M. Greene's Victrola.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE

A destructive fire occurred in Mariposa Monday night about 9:30 o'clock, when the barns of Joseph Ryall, who lives a short distance from the G.T.R. station, were destroyed by fire together with the contents. They included the crops, five horses, one pig, a buggy, gasoline engine, turnip pulper, etc. The cause of the fire is a mystery. Mr. Ryall carried a small insurance.

HOW THE DOLLAR IS DECLINING IN POWER

Effects of War-time Inflation Are Far-reaching, and the Future is Clouded in Uncertainty

There is a phrase going the rounds just now that is bound to acquire deeper and deeper meaning as the war goes on—it is the Diminishing Power of the Dollar. It was observed in spite of this country having become the "Bank of the World" that dollars were at a slight discount in Europe. When the reason for this was sought, Americans suddenly sat up and realized that the dollar was at a still greater discount right here in America. That is— the dollar purchases less to-day than it did before the war.

Perhaps the best illustration of the diminishing power of the dollar is in a table compiled by a financier of Buffalo. Compared to 1900, the dollar's purchasing power was: only 82.2 in 1914, 66.4 in 1915, 51.4 in 1916, 50.3 in February of 1917, 48.5 in March of 1917, 46 cents in June of 1917, and is still declining.

The best way to realize what that means is to take some basic supply like wheat or flour, and figure how much of it the dolair would buy. In 1900, roughly the dollar would buy a quarter of a barrel of flour, or one-and-a-fifth bushels of wheat. By 1917, the dollar would buy only a fourteenth of a barrel of flour, or half a bushel of wheat. Its power to purchase had diminished. Its power to buy labour had diminished; but its power to pay pre-war debts had increased; for you get twice as many dollars for everything you have to sell, whether labour or land, or bushels of wheat.

Two big basic reasons are given for the diminishing power of the dollar; and both are implied in the term—inflation. By inflation one set of thinkers mean that while we have no more commodities than usual, we have twice and three and four times as much gold as in former years. For war exports only, we have drawn back in the country two billions of gold. The other thinkers hold that the power to issue unlimited paper currency has cheapened the value of coin money. To these two causes should be added a third—consumption has outstripped production; so while we seem to be producing enormous crops of food, we are called on to feed more enormous quotas of population. How accurate these various explanations are, I do not know. We all do know that the purchasing power of the dollar has diminished; and the question is—when money tightens—as tighten it must after the war, as, indeed, it has begun already to tighten— will commodities and labour cheapen? Will it be harder or easier to pay debts? Should debts be carried over to be be paid when the purchasing power of the dollar goes back to the dollar, or should they be paid now when the dollar is worth only 46 cents?

The Uncertainties Ahead.

I asked two big financiers that question and their answer was they were paying debts now and battening down hatches against storms in the fuutre. One put it very clearly this way: "If I had owed $1,000 on a piece of land before the war, it would have required over 1,000 bushels of wheat to have paid that debt. Just now, I could pay the debt with 400 bushels of wheat and the corresponding lessened cost of labour for a smaller acreage of wheat. Tomorrow, say in 1921, when wheat recedes to 80 cents, it will require 1250 bushels of wheat to pay the debt; and meanwhile, I shall have paid more interest on that debt. I think that comparison could be carried out concerning every undertaking any business man is contemplating. Now is the time to pay debts and avoid contracting more, when commodities are dear and money is cheap. Later, when commodities are cheap, and money dear, and you have the money, is the time to undertake new ventures and buy commodities."

The Federal Reserve Banks have issued a chart of the country's business. Except in munition centres—business is not as usual. Business is marked "careful" and "conservative." It may be added that in The Economist, Sir George Paish is warning England of the very same perils of inflation and 'business as usual.' As told in a previous issue, there is still an undercurrent of peace below the surface of things, not 'peace at any price,' but peace that must soon be inevitable.— Agnes C. Lamb, in The Financial Post.

The housekeepers are urged by the Resources Committee, Parliament Buildings, to substitute other foods for beef, bacon and ham, which is all right, but why does not the Government go many steps further and conserve the 206,593,051 lbs. of barley, rye, etc., to feed stock, and thus largely increase the production of beef and bacon? These grains are worse than wasted in the manufacture of spirituous liquors. It appears like saving at the spigot and wasting at the bung hole.

Port Arthur Aldermen Call on the Government To Practise Food Saving

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—A resolution, demanding the total prohibition of the manufacture of spirituous liquors, was passed unanimously without a dissenting voice by our city council last Monday.

The members of the Senate and the members of the Dominion Government on both sides of the House do not seem to have the backbone to put in force Dominion Wide Prohibition. They cannot advance any sane reason for not doing so. As the Pioneer ably puts it, "The wastage of Canada's means through the liquor traffic is appalling."

There was paid in Canada last year for liquor, $75,000,000. Regarding food stuffs for the year ending March, 1917, there was used in Canadian breweries and distilleries:

Former Peterboro' Boys In A Big B.C. Business Enterprise

The following from the Victoria, B.C., Colonist, contains references to an important business enterprise by Ormond Bros., two former Peterborough boys, brothers of Mrs. J. R. Stratton:

One of the most important changes in the industrial life of Victoria became public last night with the announcement that Messrs. Ormonds, Ltd., have taken over the great biscuit and confectionery manufacturing business of Popham Bros., Victoria West.

The firm at present has a payroll of $1,500 a week in Victoria and employs sixty-five persons. With one possible exception it is the largest manufacturing firm of the kind in Western Canada. From the Victoria plant the trade as far east as Calgary is being supplied with the famous brands turned out here. The capacity of the plant can be judged from the fact that one machine alone dips 1,000 chocolates a minute. Carload lots of products are being shipped regularly from Victoria West to all parts of British Columbia, chiefly the North and Interior. The value of each carload is $5,000, which money is distributed in Victoria.

Mr. A. E. Ormond, who is the new manager, and Mr. O. B. Ormond, who is the new secretary, have been associated with the Popham firm for several years. Seeing the great possibilities in the extension of the business, particularly because of the high reputation the brands of the firm hold throughout the country, the Ormonds decided they would be missing a great opportunity if they did not take over the Popham business. They believe that although the business has attained almost national importance, it is just now on the threshold of a tremendous expansion.

To fill the demand for sweet goods for shipment to the troops overseas, the firm is now getting up a Patriotic Tin, a combination of confections and sweet biscuits. These tins are being placed on sale at all druggists and grocers.

Citizens Are Asked To Report Their Garden Results To Ald. Dobbin

The Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has addressed a communication to the Secretaries of the Greater Production Movement in the localities throughout Canada, where the effort has been made to stimulate larger production in the way of garden and field produce, asking that an effort be made to get together some record of the results.

As very many people in this city and district have gone into the movement and have benefitted, it is asked that all who have succeeded, even in a small way, as well as those who have planted and reaped in quantity, send in a brief summary of operations.

These can be sent (preferably written) or 'phoned to Mr. F. H. Dobbin, at the Patriotic Fund Office, who will forward to the Department. Thanksgiving Day was a field and garden day for the city and suburbs, and the indications are that the price of potatoes will not this season dance around the $4.50 per bag price. The very general effort made has effectually killed off the operations of the potatoe speculator.

In addition to potatoes large quantities of roots and vegetables have been realized. It is pleasing to find that the work that was done to find and place at service of people the vacant lots has borne fruit. It will be instituted even in a larger way next season, good and early. Those who have had the use of vacant plots will do well to at once arrange for the use of the lots next season. If this is done it will leave the effort to be devoted to finding lands for those who have not this season participated.

In the meantime send in reports, as above. Give name, size of plot used, and the results, specifying quantities. The information will also be printed in the local papers and we can all know those who have been energetic in the good and profitable work.

Mr. F. Montgomery Had A Chance To Act As Magistrate

Mr. Frank Montgomery, who was fined $2 this morning for allowing his dog to run at large, evidently fancied that he had been singled out by the police for their special attention. He had not let the dog out on the street, but he admitted that it had not been tied up. In some way the cook was responsible, but this explanation, Magistrate Dumble stated, was not sufficient.

"I will let you sit here and deal with these cases," he said to Mr. Montgomery, with a little touch of sarcasm that had no sting in it. "I did not make the law, but I must see that it is enforced. The by-law requires that dogs must be tied up, and are only permitted on the streets when on leash in charge of the owner."

Replying to Mr. Montgomery's insinuation that he was being victimized by the police diligence, Police Thompson read out the names of several persons who had been fined or were about to be hailed to court on the same charge.

"The Council says we should make more arrests," said the Chief. Mr. Montgomery left the court room after paying his $2, mumbling a threat that he would get even with P. C. Elads.

A. Stinson, a market gardener, permitted his dog to stray into the city, thereby costing its owner a $2 fine and $3 costs.

Magistrate Dumble dismissed what appeared to be a spite case against an auto-delivery man. He had rented a car on Sunday and it came home with a broken part for which he charged an extra two dollars. The consequent resentment led by a subsequent charge that the livery man had his car on the street with the lamps out. There were the principals and one witness on each side, and finally His Worship threw the case out.

How You Can Quickly Remove Hairy Growths

(Aids to Beauty)

A well known beauty specialist advises this treatment for the removal of hair from the face. Mix into a paste some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. This method is quick and entirely safe. To avoid disappointment, however, it is well to make certain you get genuine delatone.

1,000 AUTOMOBILES CARRIED A RECORD CROWD TO NORWOOD FAIR

Over 7,000 Persons Attended East Peterboro's Agricultural Exhibition—Large Number of Entries in All Classes But the Motor Car Predominated.

MANY FROM THIS CITY

The Norwood Fair set up a new record yesterday with an attendance roughly estimated at over 7,000. President Ed. Hawthorne, Secretary John E. Roxborough and the other directors were more than delighted with the reports of the turnstile registrations, and the convincing evidence of the crowds that swarmed the grounds throughout the afternoon. It was another big day for the East Peterborough Agricultural Society, and especially was it a comparatively warm day without which the material success would have been greatly curtailed.

The exhibits were as numerous as ever although the display of horses seemed less prominent. But the sheep pens were all filled, the cattle classes overflowed the stalls and the poultry show, in the words of Mr. Wm. McNeil of London, past president of the Guelph Winter Show, who was judge yesterday, was the finest local display he had seen this fall.

A few of the visitors may have seen some of the exhibits in the main building, but the attention of the throng was centred upon the Government's war souvenirs, which should have been shown in a separate tent or building. All the classes were well filled with entries and not the least conspicuous were the potato exhibits which were numerous and of fine quality. Cobblers, Delawares, Buffalo Bills, Beauty of Hebrons, Dakota Reds, Early New Yorkers and other varieties were well represented.

Village Cluttered With Cars.

While the usual display of agricultural products was all that could be desired, and evidence of the fertility of the Townships to the East and particularly of the progressiveness of the farming communities north and south of Rice Lake, the most impressive and significant display was the number and variety of motor cars. They were strewn all over the village. From the corner of Alma and Queen streets, at the public school corner, extending up past the Fair Grounds, Mr. J. C. Keefer counted two hundred cars. There were other hundreds packed within the grounds, every church yard had its quota, and the hotels had scarcely room for the few straggling horses that seemed but a reminder of other days. Peterborough street and other main streets were fringed with cars, and it was confidently stated by the Exhibition officials that there were at least one thousand automobiles in the village.

Came Long Distances.

The main highways leading to Norwood were overhung with thick veils of dust that were kept in a continuous swirl by the endless procession of motor cars. This was particularly evident on the road leading from Hastings. All the traffic from south of Rice Lake converged at the Hastings bridge and continued north to Norwood. The pennants on the radiator or tops announced many towns from the lake front and adjoining townships and it is no exaggeration in describing the traffic as an unbroken procession.

The conspicuousness of the motor car was simply astonishing. It has multiplied among the farmers more rapidly than has been generally realized, and as an indication of the rural wealth in the eastern section of Peterborough and the adjoining counties it left a profound impression of the increasing wealth of the farmer, of the new conditions the automobile has created and developed, and of the need of a complete system of good roads for the benefit of the farmers themselves, apart from the city motorists.

Peterborough was largely represented by three or four hundred citizens, half of whom crowded the special coaches attached to the noon C.P.R. train, the others going by automobile. Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., and Mrs. Gillespie, Mayor Duffus, Alderman Stratton, Chief Thompson, Mr. E. M. Elliott, County Clerk, and others were noticed among the crowd. Warden Brown and several of the members of the County Council were there, and Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., and Mr. James Thompson, M.P.P., for West Peterborough missed few opportunities of extending the "glad hand" to their constituents.

Government War Souvenirs.

The exhibit of war souvenirs owned by the Dominion Government, was easily one of the most interesting that has been seen in this district. It was obtained from the Archives Department through the efforts of Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M.P., and, extensive as it was, it represented but a fraction of the Dominion's growing collection of trophies and souvenirs gathered from the battlefields of France and Belgium. Lieut. W. A. R. Badger of Ottawa, who recently returned from France after three years' service, was in charge of the exhibit, the articles of which he carefully explained. He was injured at the front and his three brothers were killed in action. The Armouries, transformed into an exhibition building, were altogether inadequate to accommodate the crowds that poured into it, but only trickled out. They held up in front of the war souvenirs, about which they hived even as densely as bees in their swarming. As a result the crowd bulged out in the middle and swept over the tables on which grains and other produce were displayed. Bags of wheat, oats, and beans were overturned and their contents ground together under the feet of the closely packed crowd. The crush became so uncomfortable that at length one group forced their way out merely for relief, and with only a passing glimpse of the exhibit. Its place was immediately filled by others just as eager and as impatient to see the display, and generally just as willing to get out of the building. In this manner the majority of the visitors vainly tried to obtain a good view of the exhibit, and at the close of the afternoon there were many who turned homeward disappointed. The display included the first German machine gun captured by the Canadians at Ypres. It had been presented to King George, but he had recently handed it over to the Canadian Government. Lieut. Badger showed the heavy, protective helmets and breast and back plates worn by the German bombers, rifles with bent and twisted bayonets collected as they had been cast aside on the battlefields, the mud of Flanders still remaining on them. Many varieties of shells, bombs, masks, helmets, pierced by shrapnel splinters, and other articles used by the soldiers were also shown. A German trench sign was not the least interesting item of the display.

THE HORSE RACES.

The horse races directed by Dr. Munro of Warsaw, provided particularly close finishes, especially in the Free-for-all, in which Dick Elmhirst's "Herman Wenger" snatched first money from Frank Montgomery's "Jimmy Direct."

The results were as follows:

SHORTHORN CATTLE.

The herds shown by Mr. W. Knox of Indian River, and Mr. J. P. Boland, shared the attention of the crowds who paid more than a casual interest in the cattle exhibits. Mr. Knox took six firsts, two seconds and three thirds; and Mr. Boland three firsts, four seconds and one third.

HEREFORDS.

ABERDEEN-ANGUS.

This class brought out some of the best of the herd owned by Allen Bros. of Warkworth. They took six first and other prizes.

SHEEP.

The display of sheep was of exceptional merit. With a large entry list there was a keen competition in every class.

Cotswolds—Bert Stillman of Campbellford, scored three firsts, four seconds and several thirds, and R. Honey & Son of Dartford, three firsts, one second and two thirds.

Leicesters—George H. Hendy, of Campbellford, took two firsts, and Charles Hendy, also of Campbellford, three firsts, four seconds and two thirds.

South Downs—C. H. Curtis, of Warkworth, took five firsts, and F. L. Walsh of Warkworth, was also well represented in the prizes.

Oxford Downs—In this class W. L. Duncan of Colborne had four firsts, one second and one third; Sherman Garbutt of Lakefield, took one first, four seconds, and two thirds, and Wm. Elmhurst of Indian River, took first, second and third with his ewe lambs.

Shropshires—W. Wilson & Son, of Dartford, took one first, four seconds, and three thirds, and C. H. Curtis had five firsts, one second and one third.

Horned Dorsets—There were several fine pens of this variety. C. H. Curtis took four firsts, and F. L. Walsh three firsts.

Lincolns — George Hutchinson of Warkworth had four firsts, and four seconds; and Sherman Garbutt, one first and one second.

Any other breed—George Hendy took three first and one second.

SWINE.

Berkshires—W. Wilson & Son, of Dartford, took four firsts and three seconds.

Yorkshires—R. Honey & Son, of Dartford, took three firsts and one second.

Chester Whites—Chas. Hendy, four firsts and one second.

Any breed (large)—G. H. Hendy, two first; Chas. Hendy, one second.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS

There were numerous interesting exhibits at the Norwood Fair, which received the attention of thousands of visitors. Among those which drew large crowds were the following:

DELCO-LIGHT DISPLAY.

Opposite the main entrance to the grounds, the first thing that attracted general attention was the splendid exhibit made of Delco-Light by representatives from Messrs. Alexander & Miller, electrical contractors of Peterborough. This exhibit was constantly surrounded by interested inquirers anxious to learn all about this new light.

What is Delco-Light? It is a complete electric light and power plant that will supply electric current for house, barns, barnyard, and other buildings, and brings city conveniences to the country. Since this light has been introduced, thousands of plants —not only on farms, but in summer homes, warehouses, schools, churches, stores, etc., have recently been successfully installed. In the country home it certainly prives worth while, for it makes possible all the conveniences to which one has been accustomed in the city.

For one thing, Delco-Light means good-bye to coal oil lamps. Ask the farmer if it wouldn't be a fine thing to do away with the oil lamps about his home?

Delco-Light consists of an engine, generator, switchboard and set of batteries. The engine and generator are directly connected, which does away with any transmission losses or belt trouble, increasing the efficiency of the machine. The storage battery is of the special Delco-Light type, consisting of sixteen glass jar cells, delivering 32-volt current. Electricity is stored up in the battery by means of the generating unit. Wires lead from the light and power connections to this storage battery, from which electric current is used as desired for light or power.

Wouldn't the farmer's family welcome an opportunity to escape the drudgery of wash-day, churning and carrying water? Wouldn't he like to have the time he now spends in chopping feed, pumping water for stock and turning the grindstone for more productive labour in the fields?

With a small electric motor run by Delco-Light current you can operate all appliances formerly run by hand, such as the grindstone, fanning mill, churn, cream separator, or washing machine. You can have a bath room.

All these conveniences can be had at a low cost. Delco-Light will supply electric light and power for less than it costs in most cities. It will produce a maximum amount of electric current from fuel. It will run on kerosene, gasoline or gas. It will produce four times as much light from a gallon of kerosene as will an oil lamp.

It is neither difficult nor expensive to wire a house for electricity. Experienced electricians can install a wiring system in an old house without marring the walls or floor, and without seriously interfering with the household routine. Wiring and fixtures can be secured at a reasonable cost. Such work is being done every day to the complete satisfaction of the house owners, and every house so improved is increased in value far beyond the cost of the work.

Messrs. Alexander & Miller, the District Agents, have already installed Delco-Light plants in the following Stoney Lake summer cottages—For Mr. Geo. W. Morrow, of this city; Mr. Dodsworth of Pittsburg; for Mr. Mitchell, of Toronto, and for Mr. G. Walter Green, city.

Mr. Alexander and Mr. Powell, of Peterborough, assisted in demonstrating the remarkable conveniences, advantages and superiority of the Delco-Light.

STRONG PIANO DISPLAY BY HEINTZMAN & CO.

The Norwood Fair main building was made unusually attractive by a very practical and musical demonstration of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co.'s pianos, which captivated the thousands of visitors that flocked to hear the performances. Three expert salesmen representing "Heintzman Hall," of Peterborough, assisted in the musical melanges, while East Peterborough visitors applauded and encored the tonal excellence of these instruments. The "Classic" Heintzman and "Player" pianos exhibited furnished delightful music and drew such crowds to the exhibit as kept the display the centre of interest.

Tonal excellence is the one great essential in a piano, and this is found in the superlative degree in these beautiful Canadian-made Heintzman & Co. pianos. The outstanding merit of these instruments has commanded recognition in the studios of professional musicians and in the private homes of the most discriminating people. Musically, all Heintzman & Co. pianos are of one grade, but there are several styles of case, the plainer and less costly designs possessing all the quality characteristics of the more ornate. Being made in Canada, the prices of these pianos are based on a reasonable profit.

In dealing with this firm of piano manufacturers, one has a large choice of instruments to make a selection from. Instruments are sold on weekly or monthly payments, when desired. The terms are made so simple that, instead of having to save up for years to buy a piano or organ, you just pay a small cash payment and the instrument is immediately delivered.

Mr. Britton, the manager of "Heintzman Hall," Peterborough, which sent the exhibit to this Fair, is an enthusiastic piano man with a long and valuable experience. The success which has followed his connection with the Peterborough agency has been phenomenal, and his record of sales every month throughout this district is said to be the largest that has ever been known.

In addition to the Heintzman & Co. pianos, these ware rooms display various types of the wonderful Victor Victrolas, Sonoras and musical records—the sale of which are also very large. All the popular Victor records are received each month and kept in stock, and the public are welcome to visit "Heintzman Hall," Peterborough, any day and hear the voices of the greatest singers in the world played in sound-proof demonstrating rooms. Those interested should not fail to secure an interview with Mr. Britton, or one of his assistant salesmen, who represent this district. The Peterborough warerooms of the Heintzman Co. pianos which sent in this fine exhibit are situated in the Royal Bank building, corner of George and Hunter streets.

THE FORD CAR THE CAR FOR FARMERS.

"Ford cars everywhere!"—that was certainly the truth yesterday, judging from a Norwood Fair standpoint. Throughout the exhibition field, and parked along the streets and highways for blocks away leading into the grounds, Ford cars made a forcible demonstration of the claim that "the Ford car is the car."

Thousands from Otonabee, Asphodel, Dummer, Douro, Hastings, Belmont and other sections of East Peterborough drove to the Fair with their families in the "Universal" car. Speaking to one man he unhesitating-

More Prizes For Peterboro' County Plowing Match

The directors of the County of Peterborough Plowmen's Association have received some additional contributions to the prize-list for the county plowing match, which is to be held in Smith Township on October 23. The Peterborough Cereal Co., Ltd., has contributed an $8.00 prize in the class for junior plowmen, and Mr. C. C. Abbott, of the Bank of Montreal, a $5.00 prize in the class for riding plows. Mr. Drummond, of the Massey-Harris, has also contributed.

To date about thirteen entries have been received for the five-acre competition in which farmers have the privilege of plowing five acres on their own farms and entering their work in a special contest arranged this year for the first time. The judges for this competition will start work within a few days.

Peterboro' Lumber Company's Planing Mill Almost Totally Destroyed By Last Night's Fire

The planing mill of the Peterborough Lumber Company's extensive plant, on Burnham's Point, was all but totally destroyed by fire that broke out last night, shortly before nine o'clock. Pressed by several large contracts, including one for the Leonard Construction Company, the mill was running overtime to meet the heavy demand for material. About nine o'clock last night the foreman Mr. Richard Skillen, entered the motor room, a small annex on the north side of the building and found the ceiling through which the electric wires entered, wrapped in a blaze that was spreading to the adjoining walls. Assisted by John Walsh and other employees, the foreman fought the fire until at one time they had almost gained control. Their efforts were finally undone as the flames caught the mill wall. The Fire Department was called from the office, several hundred yards away, and although Chief Grange and his men made the long run in good time, the fire had made more rapid headway. When the firemen arrived the mill was flaming like a huge torch that illuminated the yards and cast long ruddy reflections out upon the lake and river. Several streams of water were swept over the frame building, with its inflammable contents of dry lumber, and the fire was gradually conquered, but not before most of the roof had fallen and the walls charred beyond further use.

Business As Usual.

Mr. J. Frank Linton, Secretary-Treasurer of the Peterborough Lumber Compny, stated to-day that Wand's Mill had been secured for temporary use, and that the staff had continued operations this morning. By this means business will continue as usual, and customers will be fully supplied. Mr. Linton could not estimate the Company's loss this morning. The mill had been partially insured. There was a quantity of lumber just manufactured that was ready for shipment.

"Another fifteen minutes and the fire might not have happened for the men were due to quit at 9 o'clock," said Mr. Linton.

Pleased With Department.

"The Company is pleased with the manner in which Chief Grange and his men handled the fire," Mr. Lnton added: "We pointed out that the refuse burner on the south side of the mill might be saved, and they were successful in fighting off the flames."

It is understood that the mill will be rebuilt at once. During the past summer it has been operating at full capacity and would have continued throughout the winter. Unlike the sawmill the planer knew no seasons.

Police Helped.

Four of the Police Constables helped fill the gap left by the sending of five firemen to Campbellford, yesterday, to assist in fighting the fire at the paper mills. Constables Blade, Pratt, Deannard and Lawrence "doubled" as firemen, Mayor Duffus got a soaking, and Messrs. Dickson Davidson, J. F. Linton and Fred Overend of the Lumber Company did what they could in assisting the Department.

Mr. Richard Skillen lost half of one boot in his hand to hand struggle with the blaze in its incipient stage. About eleven o'clock Mr. Harry Beatty of the Utilities Commission, cut the electric feed wires to the mill. It was generally stated that the fire had its origin from some wire trouble in the motor room.

Political Cauldron Is Still Boiling

Negotiations Are Marking Time Until Arrival of Maritime Leaders

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 11.— Union negotiations are making time this morning, pending the arrival from the far east of Premier Murray of Nova Scotia and A. K. MacLean of Halifax, this afternoon. Meanwhile the political caldron is boiling violently at Ottawa, and accessions are being added every hour to the bevy of Liberals and Conservatives, hard shelled and unionists who have haunted the corridors of the Chateou ever since the negotiations commenced.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier stepped off the train from Toronto this morning with Fred Pardee. The Liberal whip was broadly smiling, but non-communicative. He was motored to his home, where he is resting after the strenuous three days spent at the Queen City. From all accounts the result of these three days during which Sir Wilfrid met men from all parts of the province, was a revelation to him.

It is not expected that he will have any manifesto to deliver for some time yet. The impression is that he has reconsidered his former tentative decision to retire and that he will remain leader. Interest in union negotiations has pretty well shifted from the Western Liberals to the Maritime Province representation. F. B. Carvell has now been here two days. He is saying little to anyone and keeping his own counsel. Premier Murray is favoured as the government's choice and there is little betting that Carvell will come in. However, nobody but themselves and the Prime Minister can tell. Further negotiations are necessary and there is little likelihood of any definite statement being forthcoming to-night.

WHY ACTRESSES NEVER GROW OLD

Nothing concerning the profession seems more puzzling to the dear old public than the perpetual youth of our feminine members. How often we hear remarks like: "Why, I saw her as Juliet forty years ago, and she doesn't look a year older now!" Of course allowance is made for make-up, but when they see us off the stage at close range they need another explanation.

How strange women generally haven't learned the secret of keeping the face young! How simple a matter to get an ounce of mercolized wax at the drug store, apply it like cold cream, and in the morning wash it off! We know how this gradually, imperceptibly absorbs old cuticle, keeping the complexion new and fresh, free from fine lines, sallowness or over-redness. We know, too, that this mercolized wax is the reason actresses don't wear moth patches, liver spots, pimples and the like. Why don't our sisters on the other side of the footlights lear nthe reason, and profit by it?—The learn the reason, and profit by it?—The

A NEEDY CASE

The particulars of a rather sad case needing immediate assistance, has just developed in the city, the particulars of which was only to-day given out. It is the case of a respectable family, named Britton, living on the corner of Paterson street and Rutherford Avenue. The family consists of husband, wife, and two small children. The husband has been unable to work for some months, and is said to be suffering from tuberculosis. The family have been depending on a small weekly income from the Company, where, it is said, the husband formerly worked. Fuel and other necessaries of life are needed and will be gladly received.

"Henpecked Henry"

Laughter is recommended by all physicians as good for what ails you. The man who can laugh and enjoy himself is ever welcome in any throng. Laughter is a better tonic than any concoction the apothecary can mix, because it drives dull care away and the patient does not know he is taking medicine.

Many a business man with cares on his mind is transported into another land in a few moments when he gets a chance to laugh heartily. It is a stimulant both to the brain and the brawn. Some men make a business of establishing laugh factories, and then, with the aid of the public, maintaining them for the good of all.

If you are in need of the best tonic in the world get ready to see Halton Powell's "Henpecked Henry" when that man of a million troubles comes to The "Grand" Tuesday, Oct. 16th.

"Henpecked Henry" is the best laugh factory ever put on the American stage, and principally so because his many predicaments are home-like productions. This famous cartoon musical farce has enjoyed most successful runs through the English-speaking nations, and almost entirely so because it is a geyser of mirth. As the show comes here, it is presented by an especially strong cast and the girliest of girls, who make life happy for themselves and for their auditors by working the hilarity mill overtime. The coming of this show is in keeping with the efforts of The "Grand" to make this season one memorable for the quality of the shows presented.

57th Band Played At Norwood Fair

The 57th regimental band, under the direction of Mr. R. Gliddon, presented a fine programme of music at the Norwood Fair yesterday. Their selections were greatly appreciated by the large crowd.

NATIONS LOOK TO THE FUTURE

London Visitor Tells How All Belligerents Have Eye on Times to Come.

OTTAWA, Oct. 11.—The true benefit of the Military Service Act will not be realized in full even when the needed reinforcements arrive at the front and the Canadian Expeditionary Force returns to its work strengthened and reinvigorated. This is the opinion of a London business man of high standing who is now visiting Canada on a Government mission.

All the belligerent nations, this visitor says, are fighting to-day with one eye on the future. The desire of all is to go through the war with a business and industrial organization as firmly stabilized and normal as possible. The industrial value of the Military Service Act will be that it will leave at their tasks those whose work is needed in the national interest and help to insure future prosperity. Assurance of this coming benefit helped to make the draft law more popular in England than was ever expected, despite its drastic provisions. A-19

Russian Government Pledges Its Support To Allied Cause

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PETROGRAD, October 11.—In a proclamation issued by the new Cabinet to-day the Provisional Government pledges to support with its entire strength the cause of the Allies, to oppose vigorously every attempt at conquest of territories belonging to other nations, and all attempts of other nations to impose their will on Russia. The proclamation expressed the desire of the Russian Provisional Government to participate in perfect accord with the Allies at the forthcoming conference at Paris, where the Russian delegates will seek to persuade their Allies to adopt a common peace policy. The Government will impose a progressive tax on war profits, special taxes on luxuries, and increase all indirect taxation of property. The introduction of state monopolies of most developed industries, is also part of the programme.

Movement In Reichstag To Oust Chancellor

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, October 11.—A formidable and open movement in the Reichstag to oust Chancellor Michaelis and Vice-Chancellor Helfferich, and reinstate Prince Von Buelow as Chancellor, was reported in Berlin despatches to-day. Quoting the Vossische Zeitung, the German newspaper asserted that "A number of Reichstag members are openly working to this end." Michaelis and Helfferich are particularly under fire for their institution of propaganda in the army for Von Tirpitz' pan-German political party, the "Fatherland party." The Centrist Radical wing is likewise opposing them for refusal specifically and formally to discuss the Government's attitude on the majority peace formula.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 11.—The French last night defeated a German attempt to recapture the ground taken in the French offensive in Belgium this week, the War Office announces. On the Verdun front the Germans broke into advanced French positions but were repulsed after a spirited engagement.

ARGUMENT OVER-RULED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—The commission appointed by the Government to investigate disputes between the Ontario Hydro Power Commission and various private corporations, respecting the rights of the latter to power development at Niagara Falls, this morning over-ruled the first important argument of the Electrical Development Company, one of the corporations concerned to the effect that the commission had no jurisdiction and that the matter should be settled by the courts.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

GIANTS, THANKS TO BENTON AND ROBERTSON TURNED THE TABLES

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Cheered on by thousands of loyal rooters, the New York Nationals turned desperately upon the Chicago Americans in the third game of the world series here this afternoon and shut out their inter-league rivals by 2 to 0. It was an entirely different appearing team that faced the White Sox at the Polo Grounds. For the first time since the present struggle for titular baseball honors began the Giants fought and won both victory and the breaks of the game.

As was the case in the initial contest in Chicago, the struggle developed into a pitchers' battle, but today it was Eddie Cicotte who was forced to bow before the prowess of the opposing hurler and the sweeping bats of the Giants. Pitted against "Rube" Benton, the star of the White Sox hurling corps found a rival as skilful as he in delivery, as crafty in generalship, and who refused to allow Cicotte's team-mates a run to ease the strain. Only six of the visitors reached first, five on hits and one on a fielder's choice, and of these only two saw second base.

One Inning Did Trick.

Behind Benton the Giants played with a dash and brilliancy which were completely missing in the two preceding games. Despite Cicotte's fine control and deceptive curves they smashed into the delivery of the White Sox pitching star in the fourth inning, and hammered out the two runs which spelled victory and restored their confidence for the contests to come. After the game the Nationals expressed the belief that they would be able to repeat to-morrow and start westward Thursday night on even terms with their American League opponents for the fifth game of the series set for Saturday in Chicago.

Among the fans to-night the name of Davis Robertson is praised in equal proportions with that of Rube Benton. Between them these two diamond combatants brought about the downfall of the Chicago combination when the outlook for a break in the series of defeats was none too bright.

For three and a half innings the opposing box men had proved invincible, and the thirty-odd thousand fans present were settling down for a hurling duel when Robertson sprang into the calcium glare of fame. He ended the White Sox fourth inning attempt to penetrate the pitching of Benton with a great running catch of Gandil's long, sizzling drive to right field when he hurled himself against the concrete wall of the grandstand and plucked the ball with one hand just as it was about to strike the wall. Had he missed the catch Gandil's smash would have gone for at least a two-base hit.

McGraw Uses Sacrifice.

But Robertson was not done. He doffed his fielder's glove and, stepping into the batter's box, picked one of Cicotte's sharp-breaking low balls and drove high and far into right centre. The sphere sailed upward and onward under the force of the blow until it seemed certain that it would equal Felsch's home-run drive of the opening game. Both Jackson and Felsch raced frantically after the ball, but it hit the bleacher fence and bounded away from their clutches. Robertson was sliding into third base when the ball was returned to the infield. Holke followed with a two-base drive to left field, scoring Robertson. Catcher Rariden, playing in place of McCarty, who was injured in the second battle at Chicago, advanced his team-mate to third with a sacrifice, Cicotte to Gandil. Benton could not fathom Cicotte's curves and struck out. As Burns came to bat Umpire Klem took the ball away from Catcher Schalk, and after examining it carefully threw it into the Giants' dugout, while the crowd, scenting the "shine ball," booed vigorously.

When Cicotte hurled up a new white ball Burns hit a puzzling slow grounder toward third, which scored Holke, who was half-way to the plate when bat met ball. Cicotte finally captured the sphere and tried to retire Burns at first, but his throw was wild and the batter continued on to second. With Herzog at bat, the crowds were rooting strenuously for a continuance of the hitting, but Gandil checked the rally with a wonderful running catch of the Giants' field captain's foul, which he speared one-handed as the ball was about to disappear among the spectators in one of the ground row of field boxes. That was the end of the run-making for the day, for after that spectacular inning both Cicotte and Benton pitched well-nigh perfect ball. While both teams got runners on the bases the hits to bring them home never were forthcoming.

The Pitching Analysis.

As was the case in the 2-to-1 win of Saturday, the winning pitcher was forced to deliver more balls than his defeated rival. Benton to-day pitched a total of 107 balls to Cicotte's 97, just as Cicotte in his victorious game hurled 101 to Sallee's 85. During the nine innings which Benton pitched the Giants' Grenadier hurled 26 strikes, 38 balls, and 14 foul-strikes; the White Sox made five hits, drove out 21 field outs, and fouled three balls. Cicotte, pitching 97 times, secured 27 strikes, 13 foul-strikes, gave 26 balls, and was fouled five times. The Giants reached him for eight hits, went out 16 times on fielding plays, and J. Collins' two errors on Kauff's drives account for the remainder.

While there was little of advantage between the two pitchers, it appeared to many as though Benton had more on the ball than Cicotte. His delivery came up with wide, sweeping curves or broke with almost right-angle slants, which had the White Sox missing or popping up most of the time. The Chicago twirler varied his pitching to a greater extent than Benton, and his control was as perfect as usual. To those who saw him work in the initial contest it appeared as though he did not have as sharp a curve or break as on Saturday, when he turned back the Giants with seven hits and one run. His record to-day was eight hits and two runs, while Benton let the White Sox down with five hits, no two coming in one inning.

PARCELS AND CHRISTMAS CHEER FOR OUR SOLDIERS OVERSEAS

An Easy Way of Remembering the Boys at the Front or in Training Camps—A List of Parcels and Cost, for Convenience of Senders

The following notice has been received from Miss Plummer, Captain of the Field Comforts Commission, Moore Barracks, Shorncliffe, Eng., by the Peterborough Progressive club for distribution. As there are too few copes to give effective information on a very important matter, it is thought well to publish the notice in the Examiner, so that all who have boys at the front, or in England, may know of the easy way presented for reemmberieg them. Those interested may cut out the instructions and preserve for reference:

The Canadian Field Comforts Commission undertakes the purchase of supplies for parcels to be sent to individual soldiers at the Front.

Parcels from Canada containing biscuits, fruits, home-made sweets, etc., sometimes arrive in stale or spoiled condition.

The purchasing of these parcels in England instead of Canada saves time, economises shipping space and as the Commission buys from manufacturers and wholesale houses on the most favourable terms, more and better articles can usually be sent for the same money.

A complete list of names and addresses of soldiers for whom parcels are intended must be sent with order and money to be expended, together with cards or messages to be enclosed in parcels.

Parcels for Canadians in British or foreign units, in the Navy, in hospitals or at private addresses MUST have postage allowed for.

Parcels for those in Canadian units only are sent free in bales, which take from ten days to three weeks to reach the Front. To save time these parcels can be posted if postage is allowed for at the rate given.

If is important: to give names, numbers and units of men as correctly as possible; to state number of parcels ordered and full amount sent for parcels and for postage; to make all cheques, drafts or money orders payable to the Canadian Field Comforts Commission; to give letter of standard parcel selected or to suggest articles preferred; to send all directions at same time as order.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with the writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Peterborough, Oct. 11th, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner:
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—From time to time there has appeared in The Examiner reports of the City Council dealing with the question of encroachments on the City Streets and in this connection I would like to ask the City Council if they are, at the present time, taking proper precautions to see that no permanent buildings are being erected which encroach on the streets.

Judging from the trend of business in Peterborough, during the past ten years, Charlotte Street will at no distant date be one of our main business thoroughfares, and anyone with half an eye to beauty or symmetry in looking along this street to-day cannot fail to notice that grave mistakes have been made in the past by our civic legislators in allowing property owners to build out upon this street; are the same mistakes being repeated by our present City Council?

In the olden days "everybody's business was nobody's business." Is it the same to-day? Is it not better for the City at the present day to see that no further encroachments are being made than for our rulers of the future to recover the property encroached upon, by the long and tedious and expensive law-suits.

At the present day, thanks to the energy and business ability of two of our most progressive citizens, there is being erected on this street, at a point which is going to be the very business heart of the City a building which will no doubt be an ornament to this street and to the City, and as a resident of this street I would like to receive the definite assurance of the City Council that the main south wall of this building is not going to encroach upon the street.

Yours truly,
Charlotte Street.

Disastrous Fire At Paper Mills

(Campbellford News.)

Yesterday (Wednesday) morning about eight o'clock, fire was discovered in the Northumberland Paper and Electric Company's mills, and before water could be obtained it had gained considerable headway. The blaze started in the south part of the buildings where waste paper was stored and burned very steadily. The local fire brigade was on the scene a few minutes after the alarm sounded and managed to keep the fire from spreading to the upper section of the building. The Peterboro fire department were wired to send help and they arrived before noon. Their help proved of great advantage, and at the time the News went to press yesterday afternoon the blaze was well under control.

It is as yet impossible to estimate the loss, but it will run up to several thousand dollars. We learn that the loss is partially covered by insurance.

In February, 1916, the comapny lost their entire plant by fire, and had erected a large new plant on the same site.

—Fire broke out in the picking room of the Trent Valley Woollen mills on Tuesday, but the automatic sprinkling system worked perfectly, quenching the blaze in a very short time.—Campbellford News.

BEAVERTON GIRL STRUCK BY TRAIN

BEAVERTON, Oct. 11. — Miss Gladys Nix, seventeen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Nix, of Thorah Township, was seriously injured on Saturday, when a carriage in which she was driving, was struck by a Grand Trunk train at the railway crossing near here. The horse was killed, the carriage badly wrecked, and Miss Nix hurt about the spine. She was removed to Beaverton by the railway officials.

ADMITTED THAT POST CURING ADDED TO WEIGHT

TORONTO, Oct. 11. — Robert N. Watt, the Montreal manager of the William Davies Company, was the first witness at the resumption of the "bacon probe" to-day. He was examined at some length as to the reason for post curing bacon before shipping it to the British War Department. He admitted that this process added to the weight of bacon and that he expected prices would go higher and post curing would enable his company to keep bacon in the cellars. Mr. Tilley, counsel for William Davies Co., made the surprising statement that the record of certain post curing tests had disappeared.

St. Peters' Ladies' Literary Society

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the St. Peter's T.A.S. Ladies' Literary Society was held in the T.A.S. rooms on Wednesday evening. Rev. Father Phelan acted as chairman. The following were elected officers for the year:

President—Miss I. A. Kelly.
Sec.-Treas.—Miss M. McCormack.
Executive—Miss Maye Kelly, Mrs. Frank Hickey, Mrs. W. R. Hunter, Mrs. Thos. Lane and Miss Nora Shevlin.

It is the intention of the society to hold social evenings every two weeks. The first will take place on Tuesday night next, Oct. 16th, at 8.30. This society has been most successful in the past and this year will be no exception.

GOOD OPENING FOR RETURNED SOLDIER

In the course of the Vocational Training of men returned from service, the local Soldiers' Aid Commission is asked to suggest the name of some man to take up the duties, to be perfected in further on, of gas engine expert, demonstrator, etc. Some man with a decent mechanical training and a liking for the place will be instructed and paid, and the hope is to get such a man who can make the situation a permanent one. Any likely candidate will get in touch with the Secretary, at the Patriotic Fund Office, as speedily as possible.

WEDDING BELLS

GLENDENNEN—MILLS.

Quietly in All Saints' Rectory on Wednesday, October 17th, Rev. Mr. Grobb officiating, the wedding was solemnized of Jeanie Mills, 107 Aylmer Street, and James A. Glendennen, who some time ago returned from active service, where he was a member of the 21st Battalion.

Mr. and Mrs. Glendennen left by the 4 o'clock train for a short honeymoon in Toronto, and on their return will reside at 588 Sherbrooke Street, where they will be at home to their friends.

JACKES—DENISON.

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—A quiet wedding took place on Wednesday afternoon at the Church of the Redeemer, when Cecilia Hepburne, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Denison, and granddaughter of the late Col. W. L. Denison, of Dovercourt, was married to Mr. Charles Arthur Jackes, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Jackes. The Rev. Charles J. James performed the ceremony. The bride was given away by her father, and wore white charmeuse satin, and Georgette crepe, veil and orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white roses and lily-of-the-valley. Her only ornament was a diamond lavalliere, the gift of the bridegroom. The bride's sister, Miss Esther Denison, was the only attendant, and wore peach charmeuse draped with Georgette crepe of the same shade, black velvet picture hat and carried sunset roses. Dr. Alex. D. McKelvey officiated as best man, and the ushers were Major R. L. Denison, cousin of the bride, and Capt. Ernest T. Wingate. During the signing of the register Miss Elinor Atkinson sang "Until." After the ceremony a reception was held at 281 St. George Street, the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Denison wearing amethyst satin and black hat, and Mrs. Jackes, mother of the bridegroom, in grey crepe meteor and purple hat. After the reception the bride and bridegroom left for a short trip across the line, the bride traveling in a navy blue suit, grey hat and black fox furs.

Kauff's Homer Scored the First

Rariden popped to McMullin who had to run towards the stand to take the ball. Schupp beat up the air and went back to pitching. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fourth Innings.

Chicago.—Chicago got a double past third. Rariden tried to pick off E. Collins at second. Jackson lifted to Herzog. Eddie Collins was picked off by Schupp, the play being Schupp to Herzog to Zimmerman. Felsch struck out and the stands were in an uproar. No runs, one hit, no errors.

New York.— Crowd booed Eddie Collins as he went to the field. Burns struck out. Eddie Collins tossed out Herzog at the initial bag. Kauff drove a hot hit to the bleachers for a home run, his first hit of the series for him and the first hit off Faber to-day. Eddie Collins threw out Zimmerman. One run, one hit, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

Chicago.—Gandil singled past Fletcher. Weaver hit into a double play, Herzog to Fletcher to Holke. Schalk singled over second after the count was three and two. It was Schalk's second hit. Schupp tossed out Faber. No runs, two hits, no errors.

New York.—Fletcher singled sharply past Collins. Robertson bunted safely, Fletcher moving on to second. Holke also bunted safely and the bases were filled. On Holke's hit, Faber took the ball and started to throw to third but the bag was not covered. Rariden hit into a double play, Faber to Schak to Gandil. Robertson moved on to third and Holke took second on the play. Robertson scored on Schupp's single, but Holke was thrown out at the plate. One run, four hits, no errors.

Sixth Innings.

Chicago.—John Collins shot a single into left. McMullin fanned for the second time. On a short passed ball, John Collins moved on to second. Rariden had him thrown out, but Herzog dropped the ball and the runner was safe. Collins flew out to Burns. Herzog threw out Jackson at first. No runs, one hit, one error.

New York.—Burns got a hit over second, which Collins was only able to knock down. Herzog sacrificed, Faber to Gandil, Burns going to second. Kauff flied out to Felsch, Burns going to third on the throw in. Zimmerman out, Eddie Collins to first for the third time in the game. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Innings.

New York.—Fletcher scratched a hit through McMullin. Fletcher went to third on a wild pitch, the ball bouncing off Schalk's foot clear to the Giants' bench. Faber threw out Robertson, Fletcher holding third. Holke was hit by a pitched ball and took first. Fletcher scored when Eddie Collins threw out Rariden at first, Holke going to second on the play. Weaver threw out Schupp. One run, one hit, no errors.

Eighth Innings.

Chicago.— Burns snared Schalk's drive. Risberg batted in place of Faber. Risberg flied to Robertson. John Collins singled into left centre. McMullin sent up a high fly to Herzog. No runs, one hit, no errors.

New York.—Danforth, left hander, went into the box for Chicago. Burns fanned. Herzog pumped a single over Weaver's head. Herzog and Kauff scored on Kauff's home run into right field stand. It was Kauff's second home run of the day. Zimmerman drove a long hit into right field for three bases. Fletcher struck out, but Schalk had to throw him out at first. Zimmerman tried to steal home but Schalk tagged him as he slid into the plate. Two runs, three hits, no errors.

fly declared that "the Ford was a necessity, not a luxury." What was formerly considered the rich man's plaything is now known to be as practical a machine as the cream separator or the threshing machine.

The Ford exhibit made by the Norwood sales representative, claimed the attention of crowds of visitors all day. It consisted of a Ford Touring Car and a Sedan, the new Bell Car, and a Smith Form-a-Truck. A very interesting feature of the exhibit was a display of the many individual sections of a Ford, including the principal transmission parts. This formed a real object lesson to prospective Ford buyers and was very instructive to beginners. The crank shaft of a used Ford was shown which had travelled a distance of 32,788 miles, and was apparently good for as many more miles, and quite free from flaw of any kind.

It is worthy of note, too, that while the demand for the Ford car goes on increasing every year, it was the only car shown that had not advanced its price. Last year's low price still stays, and this phenomenal feature must have an important influence on the increasing sales of this year.

Representatives from the Duffus Garage, Simcoe street, Peterborough, were present and assisted in demonstrating the superior claims of the Ford.

CLASSY CLOTHING DISPLAY BY "OAK HALL," PETERBOROUGH.

It's time now for heavier clothing. The clammy chill which seemed to steal up one's back on the open Fair field was a sign and a warning; and the classy display of fall and winter garments by "Oak Hall" of Peterborough was quite suggestive. In this display there was abundant evidence of warmth, comfort and style. The greeting that this exhibit got from the thousands who inspected it was a real warm one, calculated to influence early buyers. There was no shortage of men on this firing line, as they filed in and around the well-arranged sample room, where the 1917-18 styles in suits, top coats, sweaters, etc., were exhibited.

The samples shown of "Oak Hall's" fall models were such as appealed to the discriminating dresser, for they were looked over and over, not only for their fine proportions and excellent material, but for the moderate cost, as revealed by the price tickets. The oftener that "Oak Hall" make a public display of his clothing, the more widespread does their reputation become as an authority on "what men should wear."

This exhibit was mainly intended to serve as an illustration of the varied styles and prices of men's and boys' fall clothing carried in "Oak Hall's" store in Peterborough, where, under the careful, systematic and methodical management of the manager, Mr. Jos. Maher, the business has been growing larger and larger year by year.

The Fair grounds were dotted all over with "Oak Hall" attractive signs and coloured bulletins, and were conspicuous before the eyes of the thousands of visitors.

THE POPULAR CHEVROLET.

The Manning Garage, Peterborough, made a good exhibit of the popular Chevrolet car. The merits of this handsome model were demonstrated on the Fair Grounds by Mr. W. S. Howson, salesman for the Manning Garage.

The story of the growth of the Chevrolet's popularity in this section is a testimony to its wonderful achievements and power mechanism. The Manning Garage has proven its efficiency and good work by the successful handling of the Chevrolet's business in this territory, and the prospects for new sales are of the brightest. The Chevrolet has been pronounced free from any weak points, as the aim of the company has been to build a safe car, of powerful capacity, at a price that ensures safety and durability. When we look at the matter seriously, we are almost brought to believe that the motor car is more for the farmer than anyone else. Farmers are beginning to learn also to market their products in the motor car—having bought it for pleasure, it has turned out to be one of the most useful things on the farm.

The Manning Garage, Peterborough, have been very successful in demonstrating the value of the Chevrolet as a farmer's car, as the sales in the district have surpassed their most sanguine expectations. Mr. Manning and Mr. Howson are both well known auto men, and their business methods are such as are calculated to ensure confidence in their statements.

Sunday School Lesson Questions

By Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.
Oct. 14, 1917.
(All Rights Reserved).

Returning from Captivity. Ezra 1:1-11;2:64-70.

1. Verses 1, 2. Who was King Cyrus and what were his character and achievements?
2. Where were the Jews, as a people at the opening of this lesson, and what were the circumstances which took them there?
3. How do you account for it that Cyrus, immediately when he began to reign over Babylon, decided to release the Jewish captives and to rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem?
4. Verse 1, 2. What reason can you assign for a king, not a Jew, having such a direct message from God?
5. If the religious history of every nation from the beginning of time could be fully known, should we have, in esesnce, a repetition of Bible history?
6. Verses 3, 4. What class of people do we depend on chiefly, to build churches and suppport missionaries?
7. Verses 3, 4. What motive does Cyrus appeal to, for building the Temple at Jerusalem?
8. What good is accomplished by the vast sums of money spent in building and supporting churches?
9. If all people are obligated to give money to support the cause of religion, what is the least they should give?
10. Verses 5, 6. Are ministers today under obligations to take the lead, by precept and example, in religious enterprises, without waiting for any special spiritual leading? Why?
11. When persons willingly help in God's cause, are they without exception "them whose spirit God had raised?" Why?
12. When we undertake giving or doing, for the cause of God, why is it safe to conclude that God specially appointed us thereto?
13. Verses 7-11. What in brief were the circumstances which brought the gold and silver vessels to Babylon from the first Temple of Jerusalem?
14. When a man gives lavishly of precious treasure to the cause of God is that always, or generally, a proof of his love for God?
15. Chap. 11. Verses 64-70. What number of people returned to Jerusalem and what was the number originally carried away to Babyon by Nebuchadnezzar? (See 2 Kings 24:14).
16. Verses 34-70. What were the religious and financial conditions of the people when they were originally deported, and when they returned?
17. What general effect did their captivity have upon them?
18. Which ministers more to the character of the average man, prosperity or adversity? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club).

Lesson for Sunday, Oct. 21, 1917. The Temple Rebuilt and Dedicated Ezra 3:8-13;6:14-18.

The recipes for Griddle Cakes and Fish Chowder, mentioned above, are as follows:

Griddle Cakes—
1 egg
2 1-2 cups flour.
1-2 teaspoonful salt.
2 cups sour milk.
1 1-4 teaspoons soda.

Mix and sift flour, salt and soda; add sour milk, and egg well beaten. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased hot griddle; cook on one side, turn and cook on the other. Serve with maple or corn syrup.

Fish Chowder—
2 cups potatoes (sliced).
1 cup fish.
1 cup onion.

Boil separately any white fleshed fish, onion and potato. Drain, remove the bones from the fish. Combine the three in one pan, add white sauce and reheat. Serve hot. This may be varied by adding pieces of bacon cut fine. Ths recipe is equally good when left-over fish is used. (Wheat and meat saving recipes by Domestic Science Experts of the Canadian Food Controller's Office).

All in the Shuffle—A Government official was discussing the morality of certain war-profiters.

"Their morality reminds me," he said, "of a professional gambler who always won at cards, whereas at the races he always lost."

"Oh, pshaw, George," his wife said to him one day, 'you make me tired. Why is it you always bring home a horse-collar roll when you play poker and turn up broke when you play the horses?'

"'My love,' said George quietly, 'I don't shuffle the horses.'"—Washington Star.

109th COLOURS ARE DEPOSITED IN THE CHURCH

OMEMEE, Oct. 9.—Yesterday afternoon the colours of the 109th Overseas Battalion (Victoria and Haliburton) were deposited in the Methodist church here by the 110th (Irish) Regiment of Toronto. The colours were originally presented to the battalion by Lady Eaton, whose home was here before her marriage, and when the battalion was broken up in England the colours were returned to Canada. A special train provided by Sir John Eaton carried the 110th Regiment, under the command of Lieut.-Col. R. H. Boyd Magee, to Omemee, two private cars being attached to the train for the officers and the guests of Lady Eaton. On arrival here the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church provided the regiment with dinner.

After dinner the impressive ceremony laid down in the regulations for depositing colours in churches was performed. The King's colours were borne by Lieut. W. Anderson, and the regimental colours by Lieut. Armes. Rev. John Lewis, the pastor of the church; Rev. William Johnston, Trenton, and Rev. David Balfour, Janetville, received the colours, assisted by selected laymen, they being Dr. John Wood, S. T. Connell, T. A. Macpherson, T. C. Ivory, Richard Poast, Harry Nugent and Lady Eaton.

Colours Presented.

When the guard of honour presented arms the colours were passed to the senior officers of the reigment, Major Switzer and Capt. Harry McGee, who gave them to Lady Eaton, who in turn handed them to Rev. Mr. Lewis and Mr. Johnston, these gentlemen accepting them on behalf of the clergy and the committee of the church.

Addresses were delivered by Lieut.-Col. Cecil G. Williams, Chief Recruiting Officer for Canada, and Rev. J. Lewis. Mr. Stanley Clarke, of Syracuse, N.Y., rendered a solo on the harp, Mrs. Blight of Toronto, presiding at the organ.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the regiment was inspected by Lieut.-General Sir Sam Hughes, who in a short speech complimented the officers and men on their efficient and smart appearance. The ceremony was concluded by cheers for the King, Sir Sam and Sir John and Lady Eaton.

During the afternoon the men, led by Mr. Clarke, the harpist, serenaded Lady Eaton, and the brass, pipe and drum and Irish pipe bands of the regiment gave a band concert. The officers were entertained at Tullylark, the home of Mrs. McCrea, the mother of Lary Eaton. Supper for the regiment was provided by the Ladies' Aid, and at about 8 o'clock the regiment left by special train for Toronto, after making history for this municipality.

A revival meeting was in progress in a southern town and Sister Smith was called upon for testimony. Being meek and humble, she said: "I do not feel as though I should stand here and give testimony. I have been a transgressor for a good many years, and have only recently seen the light. I believe that my place is in a dark corner behind the door." Brother Jones was next called upon for his testimony, and following the example set by Sister Smith, he said: "I, too, have been a sinner for more than forty years, and I do not think it would be fitting for me to stand before this assembly as a model. I think my place is behind the door in a dark corner, with Sister Smith."

O'Brien Enjoying Better Health Than in Years, He Declares

"It just seems to me I tried everything but found no way out of my suffering until I got Tanlac," said John O'Brien of 69 Montrose Avenue, Toronto, recently. Mr. O'Brien has lived in Toronto for forty-five years. He is a moulder by trade, but is employed at present by the Canadian National Exhibition.

"For three or four years now," he continued, "I have had constant trouble with my stomach. Everything I ate gave me indigestion and kept me in misery for hours. Gas would form on my stomach and rise up into my chest and almost cut off my breath. I had a choking sensation and at times felt just like I couldn't draw another breath. Sometimes I had dizzy spells, would fall to my knees and have to sit down and wait for the attack to pass off. I would have dizzy headaches for hours at a time and got to where I really felt afraid to try to work, my condition was so bad.

"After taking Tanlac a few days I began to straighten right up, and while I have just started on my second bottle there's already a wonderful difference in my feelings. I'm really in better shape right now than I've been in three years. I have not been bothered with the pain in my stomach or that tight, smothering sensation in my chest since I began taking Tanlac. The dizziness is gone entirely, my headaches are broken up, and I can say I have never spent money to better advantage in my life than when I bought Tanlac."

LET CANADA HAVE COAL.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The fuel administration is preparing to modify the embargo on coal shipments to Canada, as it has been found that Canada can be supplied in limited quantities without threatening the supply now going to the northwest. The northwest, will be required to conserve its coal supplies in every way possible. Cities may be asked to limit the use of their lighting plants during certain periods at night and probably will be required to use less coal in some industries.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"One Eye, you bray like an ass," Ormiston cried, eyeing him with a frown. "Drink, gentlemen, to the sweetest mistress in all Indies." He tossed off the wine, then turned again to Ramona. "What ails you, girl? Are you not happy?"

She thought of the silent figure among the bushes. Even now the wounded man might be breathing his last. What a mockery it all seemed.

"Would you have me happy," she said, "when you are going away?"

The reply pleased him.

"A pretty wit, by my faith," he remarked to Portuguese Joe.

"Devil's snares, to catch fools," muttered Tench to himself.

A moment later Graves and his men the great iron-bound sea chest between them, emerged from the house. As they proceeded toward the gate, a clinging figure crept between the posts. It was the hunchback.

Ormiston's sharp eyes were fixed upon the boy at once. He hated the negro, largely on account of the latter's devotion to Ramona. She had taken pity on the boy, because of his deformity, and had bought him his freedom; as a consequence he was ready to perform any service, to endure any hardship, for her sake.

He had come most unexpectedly upon the throng in the garden; from the frightened expression with which he looked about, it was clear that he had not realized their presence. He lowered his whip, and gazed rather helplessly at his mistress.

"Come here, you black ape!" Ormiston commanded.

"They say they bring good luck," laughed another of the women, a black-haired amazon whom her companions addressed as Anita.

"What do you mean, you spawn of the devil," he cried, "by playing about in the road, when you should be here waiting on your mistress?"

"Pardon, master." The hunchback shook with fear. "I was outside. There came sounds of fighting from under the hill. Someone shot. I went to see what it was. A sailor was wounded—"

"A sailor!" Ormiston wheeled on his companions, with sudden remembrance of the story that Mistress Devereux had poured into his ears earlier in the evening. "One Eye, what do you know about this?"

The old man shrugged his shoulders.

"Ask the Portugee," he replied. "It's his affair."

"A private quarrel, Firebrand," he remarked, with a short laugh. "The fellow had insulted me. I shot him."

"Who was he?"

"How should I know—a sour-faced knave—what matters it?"

Ormiston turned once more to the hunchback.

"What became of him?" he demanded.

From the moment the hunchback first spoke, Ramona had done her best to catch his eye, although what he had said well-nigh stopped hear heart's beating. The gripping terror of the situation left her shaking with a numbing chill. When Ormiston turned to question Tench, she saw the boys gaze wander for an instant about the garden, then with a look of horror it met her own. She told him, with her widened eyes, what she could; there was small chance to misunderstand the message of fear that flashed between them. Then he answered the question that Ormiston had flung at him.

"He went through the bushes—toward the town," the hunchback made a frightened gesture—"that way—I—I would have followed, but I—I thought—"

"Are you telling me the truth?" Ormiston demanded, glaring suspiciously at the cringing figure before him.

"God's truth, master—I swear—"

The buccaneer brought the heavy lash down upon the boy's shoulders. An angry scowl hung over his eyes.

The Lord help you, if you are not!" he cried, raising the whip for a second stroke.

"Let the boy alone, Firebrand," Ramona faced him; a crimson splash upon her lower lip showed where in her excitement the teeth had pierced the skin.

"Do you know aught of this matter?" he demanded, cold suspicion in his glance.

"How should I? There have been no sailors here, wounded or otherwise. The boy speaks the truth."

"Well for him, that he does. See that hereafter you stay indoors, where you belong, you rat!" Again the whip descended; a red welt across the hunchback's face showed where the lash had struck.

With a cry the boy staggered back, his arms upraised to ward off further blows. His line of retreat brought him immediately toward the point in the bushes where Barton lay hidden, and to Ramona's horror Ormiston followed, covering his victim with a rain of blows. She could do nothing. In another instant the boy would stumble over the Puritan's body. A great sigh burst from her lips. It seemed that the hour of her fate, and Barton's, had struck.

And then, a singular thing happened. The hunchback, feeling his progress impeded, gave a swift glance behind him, and before Ramona had realized what he was about, sank crosslegged in the grass, swung the lute about his shoulders into his lap, and began to play.

It was a sparkling little tune, full of the spirit of the dance. Ormiston stopped, and with a laugh, flung down the whip.

"The brat is good for something, it seems," he exclaimed.

Ramona gave a shudder of relief. Just when it seemed that nothing could save her, the fates had stayed their hands. In a daze, she heard Ormiston speaking.

'Hark you, boy," he said. "We sail to-night. I leave the Mistress Ramona in your care. Guard her well, as you value your life. Sleep across her bed-room door. If any man dare enter, kill him. Do you understand?"

The boy stopped his playing, and glanced at the hilt of his knife. There was a vast significance in his look.

"Yes, master," he replied. "I understand."

Ormiston turned to Ramona, his anger gone.

"Well, girl," he said. "You and I must say farewell.

"Farewell," she whispered, shuddering.

"Speak to no more strange men."

"No more, Firebrand—no more."

He drew her to him and kissed her.

'Enough, you savage," she said, pushing him away with a pitiful attempt at playfulness. "Why are you so jealous? I'll count the hours until you return. And don't forget the diamond shoebuckles you promised me."

"You shall have them, sweet jewel, if I must sink a Spanish galleon to get them. Let's be off, gentlemen." He went toward the gateway, where the others of the party were assembled.

"Out with you, my hearties," cried Tench. "The tide turns in an hour. Out with you."

His companions crowded through the gate, the negro slaves, with their torches, leading the way. Almost at once they set up their weird chant. The smoking pine knots shone like great fireflies against the underbrush as they descended the winding road. Ormiston paused for a moment at the gate.

"Lie close, sweet mistress," he called back "If any man dare cross my threshold, 'twould be better for him had he never been born. Farewell!" With a wave of his hand he disappeared in the darkness.

The three persons left in the garden remained motionless for many minutes. Lucia crouched trembling on the steps of the house. Pedro, his lute stilled, felt softly in the grass behind him, seeking the wounded man's heart. Ramona, supporting herself by means of the table, stood gazing through the gate, her eyes very wide, her face white and haggard. The silence was unbroken, save by the laughter of the departing company. Above the sound of their voices rose the mournful notes of the chanty, filling the night with strange minor chords.

At last it became so faint that but for a confused echo rose from the hillside. Ramona, with a gasping sob, turned from the table and made her way swiftly toward the hunchbacked boy.

"Does he still live?" she whispered, and fell on her knees beside the silent figure.

The boy nodded, and moved to one side.

"Yes, mistress," he said.

"Madre de Dios!" she warned. "What do you mean to do?"

Ramona turned swiftly upon her.

"Make ready a bed," she commanded.

"The danger! What matters it? The man is wounded, and needs our care. Make ready a bed, I say."

"If the master should find out,'" the hunchback muttered. "Better to anger the devil himself. Had we not best send him to the town,"

"No. He stays here. Thou art a good boy, Pedro. I shall not forget. Come. With Lucia's help, we will carry him into the house."

"Into the house, God 'a' mercy, mistress. Why should you do this?"

Ramona gazed for a moment at the white face of the wounded man. Then she bent down, very slowly, and kissed him upon the forehead.

"Who knows, Pedro?" she said. "Perhaps the moon has made me mad."

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favourite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WEEKLY REPORT ON FARM CONDITIONS

Silos Are Being Filled—Favourable Season For Clover Seed

Following is a summary of weekly crop reports made by District Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Recent rains have helped to put some of the dry, hard clay soil in condition for fall ploughing, and this work has been pushed along as fast as horses and machinery can draw the ploughs. There is still a steady and strong demand for the use of government tractors for this purpose.

Fall wheat sowing is at an end, with a large area to its credit, but the putting in of more winter rye will still be risked if the weather permits.

Corn is being hurried into the silo. Much of it was caught by frost about the 10th and 16th of September, but the quality has been but little affected as a whole.

Potatoes are being dug later than usual this year. Some rot on heavy clay fields is complained of, but on loamy and sandy soils there has been practically no injury, and the crop generally is of excellent quality.

Roots are highly spoken of both as to yield and quality, but comparatively few have yet been pulled.

Clover looks as if it will be in good condition for wintering. It has also been a favourable season for clover seed, which has had little or no injury from frost.

Apples in Dundas County, which have been well sprayed, are commanding high prices. The Wealthy has been sold by local Associations at $6.20 a barrel for No. 1, and $5.00 a barrel for No. 2, and it is predicted that McIntosh and Snow Apples of No. 1 quality will bring as high as $8 a barrel.

Many tomatoes are late in ripening as the weather has been so cool but onions have been pulled in good general condition.

Live stock—In Leeds County horses are reported to be selling at from $30 to $50 less compared with spring values, while cattle are said to have reached their highest figures this fall. Large shipments of good beef animals are reported from points in Lanark and Prince Edward Hogs are scarce, and are getting good prices.

Milk production is declining, as is to be expected with failing pastures and the high price of mill feeds, although dairy cows are doing as well as usual for the time of year.

Labour: Farmers are now very busy at various forms of fall work, and more farm help could be used if available. Over 100 boys between 12 and 15 years of age from the City of Port Arthur are helping neighbouring farmers to pick potatoes. Farmers are experiencing difficulty in getting threshing machines and engines to fill their silos.

ENEMY DAILY GROWS WEAKER

Ottawa, Oct. 10. — The greatest confidence in the Allied supremacy on the Western front has been expressed of late by officers and men who have returned in the recent past. The Allied commanders appear to be absolute masters of the situation and the strain of being continually harrassed by superior forces is beginning to tell on the German armies.

"The Canadian forces at the front are keen and enthusiastic," said an officer to-day who has a brilliant record for coolness under fire. While the enemy is not despised, for he often fights stoutly enough, evidence comes in abundance every day that the backbone of the mighty organization with which the Kaiser began this war, is broken. I have met nobody at home so firmly and cheerfully confident as nearly all of the men at the front. Indeed, I never heard of a pessimist any where near the trenches."

Canada's men in the trenches are playing an important part in the fighting, according to this officer, and with the coming of the expected reinforcements, they will experience an impetus which must mean new glories for Canadian arms and greater service to the Allies.

"That burglar insulted me." "How?" "He demanded my money or my life." "Well?" "All I had with me was 60 cents and he took that in preference to my life."—Detroit "Free Press."

How best to Serve

Every Canadian can help in the successful application of the Military Service Act

THE Military Service Act is the law of the land. It will be enforced sincerely and with firmness, but fairly. Reinforcements to be raised are limited to 100,000 men, who are being selected by the country, not by the military authority. Military control does not start until these men are chosen.

The Men Called Can Help

The first call is for men between the ages of 20 and 34 inclusive, who were unmarried or widowers without children on July 6, 1917. All these men should go immediately before a Medical Board in this district for examination as to physical fitness. If they are not placed in the Medical Category A., their present obligation ceases. If found physically fit and placed in Category A., they should immediately after the issue of the proclamation calling out the first class, visit the nearest post office and report for service on a printed form supplied. If reasonable ground for claiming exemption exists, an exemption form may be obtained from the Postmaster, and filled out. The Postmaster will forward this form to the Registrar appointed for the district, and the man seeking exemption will then be advised by mail when and where he should appear before an Exemption Board to have his case taken up.

The Employer's Part

Employers will find it to their advantage to see that all the men in their employ who are in the first class under the Military Service Act appear as soon as possible before a Medical Board for examination. Should an employer desire exemption for any one of his men who is found physically fit, he may seek it on the following grounds:

(1) that the national interest demands that a man be left at his work rather than placed in military service.

(2) that, instead of doing military service, a man should be used in work for which he has special qualifications.

(3) that it is expedient in the national interest that instead of being employed in Military Service, he should continue to be educated or trained for any work for which he is then being educated or trained.

Duty of Parent or Near Relative

Parents or near relatives of men in the class called may apply for their exemption on the above grounds or because of some special domestic reasons. In this, as in other cases, delay is a grave mistake.

A very interesting programme was compiled and each event was keenly contested by the boys and some splendid results obtained which must have been very gratifying to Mr. Mackenzie, who takes so much interest in their physical training. A large number of friends and visitors were present, and although the day was decidedly cold every one seemed to enjoy the contests. Among the visitors from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Nesbitt, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Peary, Mrs. Little, Mrs. Max Hamilton, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Peterborough, and Miss Adelaide Macdonald, of Toronto.

Lieut. A. Lampman, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, Toronto, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Hilliard at "Cowley" over the holiday.

Miss Olive Jory, of Peterborough, spent the week-end at her home in the village.

Mr. D. Fotheringhame, of Toronto, was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie at "The Grove" for the Thanksgiving holiday.

The Ven. Archdeacon Ingles, M.A., and Miss Ingles, of Toronto, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Tate at "Bendenis" for the week-end.

Mr. John W. Todd is spending a few days this week in Toronto.

The Rev. R. J. Moore, of Toronto, was a guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie at "The Grove" for the week-end.

The Rev. and Mrs. J. Grant, of Banff, Alta., were guests of Rev. and Mrs. H. Britten at "The Grove Cottage" over the holiday.

Mr. G. Mills, of Guelph, is in the village relieving Mr. D. H. Morison, Manager of the Royal Bank, while away on his holidays.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 4.—Mr. Z. McIlmoyl of Edmonton, Alta., spent a few days last week visiting old friends in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald and Master Donald returned to the village last week after spending the summer at their cottage at Sandy Point.

Mrs. Jamieson of Peterborough, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Johnson for a few days last week.

Mrs. D. Sloan of Peterborough, was in the village on Tuesday last, the guest of Mrs. F. J. Tate.

Mrs. R. Flynn and son, of Smith's Falls, spent a few days last week visiting friends in the village.

Major G. Smith and Mrs. Smith, of Hamilton, passed through the village on Wednesday last on their return home from Stoney Lake.

Messrs. D. H. Charlton and Thos. Simpson have returned to the village having closed Kawartha Park store for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Collins, who have been spending the summer at Stoney Lake, passed through the village on Saturday last on their return to Peterborough.

Mrs. W. Sherin, who has been spending the past two weeks visiting her sister in Ottawa, returned home on Wednesday last.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cooper, Mrs. Wm. Cox and Miss Lily Cox have returned to the village after spending the summer at their cottage at Stoney Lake.

Capt. and Mrs. G. R. Browning and Miss Margaret, Mrs. H. Adams of Peterborough, and Mrs. A. O. Sawyer, of Havelock, were in the village on Wednesday last, the guests of Mrs. J. M. Bygott.

Mr. T. G. Grieve, of Peterborough, was in the village on Saturday.

Corp. Roy Macdonald, who has been invalided home from the front, arrived in the village on Friday last.

Miss Traill, who has been spending the past week in Peterborough, where she was the guest of Miss Dunlop, returned home on Monday.

Mrs. Wm. Anderson, of Bobcaygeon, spent a few days last week visiting friends in the village.

Mr. D. Sloan of Peterborough, was in the village on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Calderwood, of Barrie, are guests of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie at "The Grove."

Member S.P.C.A. (to brutal driver) —No, my friend, I don't shut up. Your poor horse, unfortunately, cannot speak like Balaam's ass, but I would have you know, sir, that I can. —Boston Transcript.

"I am sorry, Rollo," said the young woman, gently, "but I fear that you must not hope. I am fond of you, but we can never marry. You see—"

"Yes, I see!" he interrupted, bitterly. "You cannot marry me because I weigh 200 pounds. Nobody loves a fat man!"

And with this quotation he strode forth into the night.

But there is always a Chapter II. Three weeks later our hero again stood in the presence of our heroine.

"I have come back to renew my suit," he said.

"But Rollo, did I not tell you that it was hopeless?"

"Wait! Do not spurn me till you know all. I have been taking a gymnasium course. To-day I am a bargain. I am reduced from 200 to 198!"

DYSPEPSIA OF WOMEN

Special Treatment Required.

Many women suffer from a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms are similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines usually prescribed do not restore the patient's normal condition.

There seems to be a kind of dyspepsia caused by derangement of the female organism. While this appears to be the same as ordinary indigestion it can be relieved only by a medicine which, besides acting as a stomach tonic, is good for female ailments. Read what such a medicine did for Mrs. Williams :—

She says:—"Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with dyspepsia and bearing down pains in my back and sides, and after my meals my stomach would bloat up till I could scarcely get my breath. At times I was so weak I could hardly stand on my feet and I looked hollow-eyed and my skin was yellow. Now I have a good color, have gained in every way and can do my work without any pains. I think it is the best medicine on earth for stomach troubles of women."—Mrs. NELLIE WILLIAMS, 31 West 3d Street, New Albany, Ind.

BOW RIVER DIVERTED SUPPLIES HUGE IRRIGATION PROJECT

A GENERAL utility river—such is the Bow River. It is doubtful, indeed, if any other river in the world, no matter how famous, performs so many varied functions as this comparatively unknown tributary of the great Saskatchewan River. The Nile, the Thames, the Mississippi, the Amazon, the Rhine, and so forth, have usually only one specialty; the Bow has three. During its short existence of about three hundred miles it assists in scenic effects, it creates electrical energy that is applied to industrial expansion, and it is finally utilized to irrigate agricultural land.

Rising in the eastern slope of the Canadian Rocky Mountain system, the Bow River is for sixty or so miles a typical mountain stream. Some of the finest mountain scenery in the world is contained in this portion of its basin—scenery that tourists travel hundreds and thousands of miles to see. Beautiful Lake Louise, the Valley of the Ten Peaks, the world-celebrated Banff, are all situated on this stretch of the Bow River, which, fed by glaciers and melting snow, has apparently no other destiny than to contribute to a scenic paradise.

But other things await it. Leaving Banff, the river enters its power producing section—a stretch about thirty miles long. At Kananaskis Falls two large power plants have been established, at which 31,600 horse-power is now developed and transmitted to the city of Calgary, fifty-five miles distant. This power lights Calgary, drives its street railway, and supplies the motive power for a large number of industrial establishments that have sprung up in that thriving city. There is at least 35,000 horse-power available at these two plants; there are four other sites in the same district the development of which has been demonstrated to be economically feasible, and which will yield an estimated minimum of 85,000 horse-power.

In addition to this, the Canadian Water Powers Branch estimate that with the creation of storage capacity, of which there is over one million acre feet in the river basin, 58,000 feet having already been created, and the regulation of the river's flow, it will be possible to practically triple the continuous wheel horse-power of the hydro-electric energy.

Immediately after passing the city of Calgary, part of the waters of the river are diverted to supply the western section of the great irrigation enterprise that has been established in Alberta by the Canadian Pacific Railway. This is the largest individual irrigation project on the American continent, and comprises, in fact, an area equal to more than one-fifth the total irrigated areas of the United States. By means of 1,600 miles of main and secondary canal and distributing ditches, 376,000 acres of farm land are brought under irrigation in this section alone. Some 35 miles further east, the Bassano Dam—nearly 8,600 feet long—takes further toll of the Bow River by diverting sufficient water to irrigate the eastern section of the same project. Approximately 440,000 acres in this section are now being or will ultimately be brought under irrigation.

After Bassano the Bow River eventually joins the South Saskatchewan River, which, several hundred miles later, joining the North Saskatchewan, forms one of the largest water systems of the world, finally flowing into the Hudson's Bay.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Diplomatic Affair

It Was Managed by a Woman

By ETHEL HOLMES

"Mme. Chapellier?"

"Yes."

"His excellency has directed me to admit you as soon as you called."

The attendant led the way to the private office of the minister of foreign affairs, opened the door and announced:

"Mme. Chapellier!"

"The government," said the minister, "appreciating your past services, is desirous of adding to the amounts already paid you another 50,000 francs."

"And I doubt not the government expects me to add to my past services a corresponding amount."

"Can you leave for London tonight?"

"I can go anywhere at any time."

"Very well. I will explain."

The minister cast a look about the room, habitual with him before entering upon a matter involving secrecy, leaned forward in his chair and spoke in a low tone.

"The British government has made a treaty with the ambassador of the sublime porte at London by which the sultan grants valuable concessions to Great Britain. We have been negotiating with the sultan's ambassador here in Paris for these same privileges, but we are too late.

"Sir Bradford Chichester, one of the younger members of the British diplomatic corps, has engaged passage by sea for Constantinople in a ship sailing on the 14th. He will carry with him the British-Turkish treaty for signature at the Turkish foreign office. It is our purpose to delay him either at starting or on the way."

Mme. Chapellier reached London the next morning and reported in person to Baron le Brun, the ambassador.

"In order to assist you," he said, "I give a dinner this evening at which Sir Bradford Chichester will be present. Have you costumes?"

"Very well. I shall expect you at 8."

At the dinner given at the French embassy Mrs. Worthington Wood, who, though born of French parents, had lived the first fifteen years of her life in America, was taken in to dinner by Sir Bradford Chichester. She knew that his family, though ancient, were not rich and that he would gladly take a wealthy wife. She manifested so much interest in seeing his country seat, the Dunes, on the Irish channel and some 200 miles from London, that he, thinking to benefit in the matter of a courtship—should he deem such desirable—arranged a house party to go there to remain till the 13th, when he must return to the city to be ready to sail on the 14th. Of course Mrs. Wood was invited.

The next day a small number of guests assembled at the Dunes. It was winter, but the house was cheerfully lighted and logs blazed on every hearth. Sir Bradford devoted himself to the young widow. There are women who possess the knack of carrying an impressible man quickly off his feet. Such was Mrs. Worthington Wood. She administered, so to speak, a love potion. There was in it a reason—to cause her victim to feel that he could never aspire to possess her. Eyes that shot a spark to kindle passion, feigned innocence to excite reverence.

Sir Bradford, Mrs. Wood and several others of the house party had gone up from London on the same train and in the same compartment. Mrs. Wood noticed that her host carried a leather hand bag that he never lost sight of. If he left the train for a moment at a station he took the bag with him; if he went into the smoking compartment to enjoy a cigar the hand bag went with him.

Mrs. Wood also noticed that when he entered the family equipage to be driven to his home, while he gave up his rugs, umbrella and other such belongings to the servants, he held on to the satchel. She deemed it necessary to her plans to know where the hand bag should be deposited. But as soon as the host entered the house, leaving his guests to be shown to their rooms by the housekeeper, he disappeared. When Mrs. Wood next saw him the satchel was not with him.

"I have brought with me," she said to him, "a few of my finest jewels, not daring to leave them in London. Have you a safe in the house?"

"Certainly," he said. "One moment. I will call the housekeeper. The safe is in my bedroom. She will go with us."

"Us? Is it necessary for you to go?"

"I never allow my safe to be opened except by myself."

"On second thought, I will keep my valuables locked in my trunk."

There was a faint reproach in the glance she gave him and her tone.

"Pardon me," he said. "I would trust you, but my housekeeper"—

"You would not trust?"

"Certainly, I would trust you both, but there is property in that safe that doesn't belong to me. Would I be justified in permitting any one, however trustworthy, to go in there?"

His tone was growing more decided. Interests of state were asserting themselves.

"You would be a fool to do so. Here is my box. I intrust it to your care."

A temptation came to him not to be outdone in a matter of confidence, but he resisted it. Taking the box, in which there were only a few gems for informal occasions, he went away and placed it in his safe.

The next evening at dinner the young widow was entrancing. She seemed to be in a light, happy mood. She told the story of how the host had refused to permit her to visit his safe without his being present and set all the guests laughing by its humorous telling. The host laughed with the rest, and had he not been coming under a spell that would have ended the matter. As it was he winced. There was underneath Mrs. Wood's humor a faint suspicion of ridicule. He tried to excuse himself, but only got tangled in his own excuses.

"Don't you think," said the lady to the others, "that Sir Bradford owes me some reparation?"

All banteringly agreed that he did.

"Well, this is the last night of our visit here. Let him intrust me with the key of his safe till tomorrow morning."

All declared that such an act would not necessarily be showing any confidence whatever. But the widow insisted that it would satisfy her, and she smilingly held out her hand for the key.

The thought flashed through Sir Bradford's head that the safe, being in his own room, would be under his control through the night. There was a pretty woman smiling at him, daring him—a woman with whom he was fascinated and whom he thought it advantageous to marry. Nevertheless he did not consent. Then suddenly there came a flash from the woman's eyes, a haughty look as if she deemed such a denial of confidence insulting. Sir Bradford put his hand in his pocket and tossed the key on the table before her.

Amid a burst of laughter she seized it and placed it in her corsage.

The diplomat had no sooner yielded to an impulse than he regretted his act. A man under a woman's spell is liable to rush from one extreme to another. One moment he trusts her implicitly; the next he fears that he has fallen into the toils of a devil. At any rate, such was the fear of Sir Bradford. Never for a moment during the evening did he leave the side of the woman who possessed the key of his safe—the safe where was deposited that which if it passed into the possession of another would ruin him. If he turned away from her for a moment it was that she should not see the expression on his face when he cursed himself for a fool.

The widow rallied him continually. "Aren't you going to give me one moment alone?" "Be comforted! I am not in the habit of visiting any but my own room when I visit." "Will you sleep with a revolver under your pillow tonight?" These were some of the banterings she gave him, much to the amusement of the guests. At midnight, when the party broke up, she had made no move. She rose with the others and went up to her room.

The moment Sir Bradford heard her door close he went up to his own apartment. With his eyes fixed on his safe he gave himself up to tumultuous musing. It contained his possible ruin, and the key was in the possession of a woman he had known but a few days.

"Pooh, pooh! What an ass! She only did it to bedevil me. Nonsense! I have a revolver under my pillow, and if any one should come in here tonight— More nonsense! Who's to come?" Thus he tried to dismiss the matter from his mind. But, oh, if he only had the key!

He went to bed and tried to sleep. Slumber would not come. Fancying he heard a movement in his room, he arose and struck a light. He was ashamed of himself for doing so, but left it burning. This made him feel a trifle more comfortable, and toward morning he went to sleep.

He was awakened by his valet bringing hot water. After a glance at the safe, which showed no evidence of having been tampered with, he arose, dressed and went down to breakfast. A maid approached him and said:

"I took the hot water to Mrs. Wood, room 6. She didn't answer when I knocked, and I went in. She isn't there."

Sir Bradford blanched. Like lightning the thought flashed through his brain that the key of his safe had gone with her. Then he saw that he was ruined. He was to sail that afternoon for Constantinople. The only way to get the treaty was to break into his safe. But it was a new and perfect one, put in since he had entered the diplomatic service. Only in London could men be found of sufficient skill to do the work, and London was 200 miles away. He put his hand to his head, staggered up to his room and locked himself in.

* * * * * * *

Twenty-four hours later the minister of foreign affairs in Paris received the card of Mme. Chapellier. He directed that she be at once admitted.

"Well?" he said.

"I left the diplomat at his home far from London with the treaty locked in his safe. There is the key."

"And how much time do you think we will gain?"

She handed him an item cut from a newspaper stating that Sir Bradford Chichester had sent to London for men to open his safe; that they had failed and others more skillful had gone up. He had offered the latter £1,000 if they would do the job in three hours.

"That will do," said the minister. "Our treaty is on the way."

He drew her a check for 50,000 francs.

Few People Know This

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

The Prompt Answer.

¶ If he answers by saying at once "Mr. Blank speaking" instead of using the time-wasting "Hello" or "Well" you are still further pleased for you have saved valuable time and perhaps avoided a whole series of unnecessary questions to find out to whom you are speaking.

¶ To always answer promptly and to announce yourself at once instead of saying "Hello" "Yes" or "Well" will go far toward keeping up the quality of your telephone service.

STEPPING STONES TOWARDS SUCCESS IN THIS WORLD.

In a booklet entitled 'The Dynamo' Robert C. Ogden formulated a set of life rules called Stepping Stones. He was a successful man; he lived in a high plane and left an enduring name. All the while he was a great merchant, making money, friends, progress and renown. Here is the code:

1. Keep faith in humanity.
2. A man becomes what he most desires to be.
3. Do not mistake a prejudice for a principle.
4. Keep your intellectual and spiritual life bright.
5. Be energetic, wide awake, pushing, but be silent.
6. The world wants men who are well-equipped and worthy.
7. False witness may be given by a gesture or a grimace.
8. Honour womanhood if you would keep faith in humanity.
9. What a marvel of a business man's guide is the Book of Proverbs.
10. The longer you live, if you live right, the less you will think of yourself.
11. Be true. Stand up and believe in yourself, then other people will believe in you.
12. A vigorous, healthy man has really only one right in the world, only one thing to demand, and that is a chance to work.
13. In every life comes some crisis when conscious integrity gives a power and heroic strength that can come from no other source.
14. The charity that we are bidden to display is broad to God's sunshine, but His laws are fine as a razor's edge, and quite as keen.

ALL OBJECTIVES ARE TAKEN IN THE NEW BRITISH DRIVE

Victory Was Achieved Despite the Fearful State of the Ground, the British Soldiers Wallowing Through a Sea of Mud---Attacking Waves Now Within a Short Distance of Passchendaele and Only Six Miles From Roulers, Main Transportation Centre Through Which German Line of Communication to Submarine Bases Runs.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, October 12.—All the first objectives were swept over and taken in the first dash of another tremendous British drive early to-day. The victory was achieved despite the fearful state of the ground, literally an ocean of mud through which the advancing Tommies wallowed and almost swam. As this is written headquarters reports show the drive still in progress.

Field Marshal Haig's attacking waves have now arrived within a short distance of Passchendaele. Passchendaele is seven miles northeast of Ypres. It is one of the most important cities along the eastern slope of the Passchendaele Ridge, and is not more than six miles from Roulers, one of the main transportation centres through which Germany's line of communications to the Belgian seaport submarine bases passes.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, October 12. — By 7:45 o'clock this morning reports were received that everything was going well with to-day's British attack in Flanders. The troops along a wide front had pushed forward to a depth averaging 800 yards or more. Prisoners were beginning to come in early, although slowly owing to the condition of the ground. This covered the territory on a six-mile front from near Houthelet Wood to a point below the Ypres-Roulers Railway, and the British are now battling along the Passchendaele Ridge within one thousand yards of the centre of the village of Passchendaele.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Thursday (delayed)—Heavy artillery fighting is reported in the official statement given out here last night. Three German aeroplanes were destroyed in air combats and two others were driven down out of control. The British lost four machines.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 12.—The demobilization of superfluous troops attached to the Russion army has begun. Classes called for years 1895-96, which include the men of 43 and 44 years of age, are first to be relieved from duty. The men are being sent to their home villages in special trains.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Ralph H. Turner.)

TOKIO, October 12.—The Allies are insisting on Japan's participation in the war with men and fighting ships, according to a military writer of the newspaper Nichimichi to-day. The American embargo on steel, he asserted, was adopted for the specific purpose of backing up the Allied demand for Japanese troops and greater Japanese naval participation. The writer declared that after the fall of Riga the Entente Allies asked that Japan send an eexpedition to Europe. In reply Japan explained that mobilization was impracticable. The writer expressed the belief that the Allies' demands would become more and more insistent from now on.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 12.—Another air raid over Belgium was reported officially to-day. Naval aircraft dropped many bombs on Sparappelhook airdrome despite heavy clouds and rain. All our machines returned.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), October 12.—The night was marked by great activities of artillery and by series of German efforts at various points on the front. West of Cerny we repulsed an enemy attack while a detail operation carried out by us north of Noisy Farm enabled us to bring back prisoners.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, October 12. — The Flanders offensive is on again. This morning the British attacked on a front of six miles east of Ypres and satisfactory progress is reported.

The official report from Field Marshal Haig's headquarters to-day says that the British attacked at 5:25 o'clock this morning.

Field Marshal Haig's latest effort is being pushed in the same region as the attack of Tuesday in which the British in co-operation with the French drove back the Germans along a front of seven miles and captured more than two thousand prisoners. It is probable that the present effort is an attempt to clear the Germans from the remaining portions of the dominant ridge east of Ypres. Tuesday's attack gave the British more ground on the ridge and left the Germans with only a small section in the region of Passchendaele. The British now hold most of the good positions on the ridge from which they dominate with their artillery the important Roulers-Menin railroad and the railroad towns of Roulers, Stalen and Menin.

Apparently the present drive is being made under weather conditions similar to that which existed Tuesday. Following several days of heavy rain Field Marshal Haig threw his men forward and surprised the Germans who did not think that the British would attempt to attack while the battlefield was water-soaked.

(By The Associated Press.)

FRENCH FRONT IN FRANCE, October 2.—Fresh evidence of the German campaign of terrorization in Alsace-Lorraine comes to hand every day. Since the beginning of hostilities German courts-martial sitting in the annexed provinces have inflicted sentences totalling five thousand years' imprisonment on citizens of Alsace and Lorraine whose sole offence has been the expression of opinions favourable to France. All classes and all districts have suffered.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, October 12. — Documents recently taken from German prisoners indicate that the famous iron cross, over two million of which have been distributed by the Kaiser since the beginning of the war, is now given not only for acts of bravery, but for exceptional ability in looting and destroying French villages and farm houses.

In a letter written by a German Landwehr soldier, Alfred Saur, to another German soldier named Heinrich Kinkelaus, 39th Regiment, and made public to-day, Saur speaks of his hopes of getting the coveted decoration for the discovery of where an aged French woman kept her belongings.

HIGH HOPES ARE BASED ON HAIG'S NEW OFFENSIVE

Fact That British Are Attacking Again in Spite of the Bad Weather Taken as Proof That the Enemy is Reeling From the Assaults

ISSUES IMPORTANT

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 12.—The highest hopes were raised here to-day upon the announcement by General Haig of a third offensive blow begun this morning, the third in eight days.

First of all, London realized that weather conditions could not possibly be worse for fighting. It rained almost steadily for five days in Flanders. Every despatch of late has emphasized the wallowing sea of mud there. The public, therefore, accepted the fact that under such adverse conditions Haig has again chosen to attack, as proof of the knowledge by the British Commander-in-Chief that he now has the enemy reeling from his sledge-hammer blows.

Momentous issues hang on the German line in the bloody Ypres sector. The British drive is a direct menace to the German grip on submarine bases on the Belgian coast.

NO SCARCITY HERE

There has been a genuine, still hunt for a special line of ladies' boots that has suddenly become the popular shoe, and after going the complete round of the city stores, the seekers have found just what they wanted at the Peterborough Shore Store. It is almost needless to mention the boot, as everybody is looking for the high kid shoe with Neolin soles and rubber heels, in either chocolate or black, and Peterborough Shoe Store not only has them, but at a lower price than others sold them while they had them. You can buy them here at $7.00 and $8.00, that still sell elsewhere at $10.00. All other lines of shoes at equally remarkable values. Rubbers for every style of shoe, never so complete a stock. Be sure of the place—291 George St. New Lundy Block.

Sergt. Sewell Returning

Staff Sergt. Sam Sewell of Peterborough, who went overseas with the 8th C. M. R., will arrive home to-night. Mayor Duffus received a wire to that effect this afternoon.

"SPLENDID" SAYS HAIG

British Field Marshal Pleased With Success of Latest Offensive and Full of Admiration at the Gallant Conduct of His Men

MUD WORST ENEMY

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).
(By William Philip Simms).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, Oct. 12.—"All is simply splendid," declared Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig to-day, discussing his latest offensive in an interview granted the United Press correspondent.

"The entire history of Flanders shows that the soldiers' worst enemy is mud.

"This is true more than ever because in the particular section here the natural drainage was stopped when the country was inundated.

"Notwithstanding the mud, the British, including men from all dominions, and the French, have overcome both the mud and the Germans."

The British Commander-in-Chief was full of this admiration at the stubborness of his men in fighting the elements and for their going on, unwhimpering, under the worst sort of conditions. He declared they were absolutely unafraid of the worst punishment the Germans could offer.

Boy Helped Himself To Bicycles, Gets 12 Lashes As Lesson

A fourteen year old boy who had stolen ten bicycles, nine of which had been returned to their owners, appeared in police court this morning on the charge of stealing the unrecovered machine. The last bicycle disappeared on September 28th, and according to the boy it was hidden away in Mann's lumber yard. When he looked for it again it was gone. This boy and his weakness for appropriating and using bicycles left outside stores or homes has given the police more than his share of work in restoring them to their owners. Magistrate Dumble ordered his father to pay $25 into court unless the lost bicycle is returned within a certain period, also that the father give $200 as a bond for the good conduct of his son for a period of six months, and finally ordered twelve lashes as a punishment to the boy. The youth's mother is dead, and his father agreeing to the entire order of the court, appeared anxious to do whatever he could for the boy.

LATEST PHOTO OF LORD AND LADY READING
Lord Reading, who is Lord Chief Justice of England, is in America on a special mission for Great Britain, that is connected with the financing of the war. Regarded as possessing one of the greatest financial minds in the British Empire, he has made several trips to the United States and Canada during the war to arrange for financing of the Allies.

New Ministers Include Major General Mewburn, Hon. J. A. Calder, Hon. A. L. Sifton and N. W. Rowell, the Latter Being President of Privy Council.

TO-DAY'S DEVELOPMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch).

OTTAWA, Oct. 12.—Shortly before one o'clock ten members of the new Union administration were sworn in as follows:

Premier and Secretary of State for External Affairs—Sir Robert Borden.
Minister of Militia—Major General Mewburn.
Minister of Overseas Service—Sir Edward Kemp.
Immigration and Colonization — Hon. J. A. Calder.
Interior—Hon. Arthur Meighen.
Agriculture—T. A. Crerar.
Customs—Hon. A. L. Sifton.
President of Privy Council—N. W. Rowell.
Railways and Canals—Hon. J. D. Reid.
Secretary of State for Mines (new) —Hon. Martin Burrell.

Hon. Frank Cochrane goes to the Canadian Northern as Chairman of the Board of Directors and Sir George Perley becomes the Canadian High Commissioner in London.

The definite entry of five additional Liberals into the Cabinet followed a morning of protracted negotiations. There was a continual passing to and fro of members of the old and the new administration.

At a quite early hour Frank Carvell, the Liberal member for Carleton-N.B., was in evidence, and went into consultation with the Prime Minister. Within a few minutes he was followed by Premier Murray of Nova Scotia, A. K. MacLean, Liberal M.P. for Halifax, and the Western Liberals. About noon the Eastern men left the conference, strictly non-communicative as to their attitude. Doubts are expressed, however, whether Premier Murray will join the Cabinet as was indicated last night.

The name of Mr. MacLean is suggested in his stead, but again some doubt is felt. The conferences will continue throughout the day, however, and an official statement on the final composition of the new Government will probably be issued this evening

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

OTTAWA, Oct. 12.—Liberal members and leaders included in the Union Cabinet showed interest in the proceedings, but declined to pass any remarks for publication this morning. "It appears to be accomplished," remarked Hon. G. P. Graham, with a shrug, and would volunteer no opinion, neither would Fred. Pardee. With the inclusion of N. W. Rowell as President of the Council, speculation is rife as to where Messrs. Graham, Pardee and other conscriptionists Ontario Liberals will place their allegiance. Much depends on the stand which Sir Wilfrid Laurier decides to take in the near future.

No name has yet been officially attached to the new Government. It is suggested, however, that as it has now become common usage to call it "Union," that name will stick to it, and the candidate will be known as Unionist candidate. Adherents of Sir Wilfrid, if Sir Wilfrid remains leader of the party, will be known most likely as "Laurier Liberals." Much depends on the new orientation which the creation of the new Cabinet will engender. The situation is fraught with all sorts of possibilities.

THE LIBERAL POSITION.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 12.— Exactly what the position of the official Liberal party will be under union government is not clear. Quebec Liberalism is not represented in the new cabinet, and so far as the French Canadian population is concerned, Sir Wilfrid Laurier is still leader of the Liberal party, and it is believed will remain so. It is also believed that he has been assured support by the majority of the Liberal candidates in Ontario. Support from the west will depend largely upon the extent to which new Western union ministers fall in enlist-

Fit for non-combatant service overseas	26
Fit for service in Canada	41
Unfit for any duty	117

There were seventeen candidates this morning, nearly all giving farming as their occupation and thirteen qualified for Category A. One of the young men who was placed in that class fainted after going through the medical examination. Included in this morning's candidates were five men from Hastings and three from Campbellford.

The examinations by the local medical Board yesterday again passed the fifty mark, fifty-one men being examined at the three sessions, making a total of 157 for the last three days, of which 95 were found fit for the trenches. At yesterday afternoon's session the percentage of Class A men recorded took a decided drop, only five out of thirteen being registered in A Category. Five were rejected outright. The night session, however, brought the total percentage for the day up to the usual average, as eleven of the sixteen candidates were placed in Class A.

The total figures, including all three sessions yesterday, show that during the ten days the Board has been sitting the average number examined each day, has been 40, and that 56 per cent., of the men examined have been placed in Class A, 6 per cent. in Class B, 10 per cent. in Class C, and 28 per cent. in Class E.

Mayor Duffus received a telegram today notifying him that Pte. J. Cocks, just returned from overseas, was leaving Kingston at 1.40 this afternoon and would reach Peterborough on the 5.30 G.T.R. train this evening.

Yesterday Pte. Moore arrived home on the 5.30 G.T.R. train and was met at the station by Mayor Duffus and Ald. Duncan, who took him to his home.

Another arrival yesterday from overseas was Pte. John Thomas Millett, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who suffered the loss of a leg as a result of injuries sustained while at the front with the 5th C.M.R., to which he was transferred from the 93rd Battalion.

The duties of Class One eligibles under the Military Service Act, as defined by the proclamation which will be scattered broadcast over the Dominion to-morrow, leave but one of two courses which each unmarried man or widower without children, between the ages of 20 and 34, must follow. He must apply for military service or for exemption, and whichever course he takes he must have a physical examination before a medical board. Further, the period within which a man must make up his mind which course he will follow is limited to twenty-five days, from October 15 to November 10, as the latter date is the last day on which exemption application forms will be available at the post offices. Any man, who, by November 10, has not put in an application for exemption, will automatically lose all right to claim exemption, regardless of what merits might ordinarily accompany his claims, and such men will be put in the same class as those who declare their willingness to serve. There are to be absolutely no exceptions to this course of procedure, and the only Class One men who evade it will be those who make themselves liable to the extreme penalties of the Act for evasion of duty. Every man comes under the regulations, regardless of his whereabouts or his physical condition, whether he is absent from the country temporarily, in the hospital with a fractured leg, at home suffering from disease or is a chronic invalid. In cases such as the above, it will be the place of the employer or some near relative to see that the facts are promptly placed before the proper officials.

Forms Ready Next Week

The necessary application forms will be available at the post offices all over the Dominion early in the week, and while the proper course for men in large centres, such as Toronto, Hamilton and other cities, will be for them to get their medical examination over first, this does not apply in rural districts. As a matter of fact, the regulations have been drafted mainly for the benefit of rural communities where the medical boards are necessarily widely scattered, and where there may be some doubt as to just where the man should go to be examined. Each applicant, when he goes to his postmaster, will tell him whether he wishes to serve or to apply for exemption. The post-

VETERANS' JEWELS PRESENTED TO PETERBORO' ODDFELLOWS

Interesting Event Held Last Evening--Grand Warden Was Present

Grand Warden G. M. Hurmiston was the guest of honour at a banquet given by the Peterborough Lodge 111, I.O.O.F., in the Oddfellows' Hall, last night, when jewels were presented to twenty-five veterans of the Lodge, signifying 25 years of membership. The meeting, which was attended by over 200, including members from Millbrook, Havelock, Lakefield and Norwood, will long be remembered amongst the most interesting and instructive, combined with being a huge success socially, ever held by the Lodge.

Received Jewels.

The following is a list of the veterans to whom the veteran jewels were presented by the Grand Warden:

R. M. Beach, John Bickle, F. Brownscombe, W. J. Cox, J. Crowe, A. Davidson, F. A. Douglas, F. Foster, J. Henthorne, J. Hayden, E. A. Kendry, W. J. Henry, M. Lyle, J. Logan, E. Manning, F. L. Robinson, J. Raby, J. H. Smith, W. H. Thompson, D. Thompson, W. H. Vickers, J. M. White, W. White, J. Wolstenholm

The Toasts.

The toasts were made and responded to by the following:

The King, proposed by the Chairman.

The Visiting Brethren, proposed by Mr. H. Denike, Havelock, responded to by Mr. Vance, Millbrook.

The Absent Brethren on Active Service, proposed by Mr. A. A. Fowler, responded to by Lieut. McNab.

Interesting Speeches.

Interesting speeches were made by Mr. Hurmiston, who told of the work of the Lodge in the United States, and congratulated the officers on the splendid showing last night, and the unsually large number who received degrees, and by Mr. T. C. Elliott, Degree Captain, also made a most acceptable speech on the work of the Lodge.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, OCT. 12, 1917

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

Even in Quebec, with the populace bedevilled by six years of Nationalism's propaganda of treason, under the official protection of the Borden Government, conscription is not likely to put any "wigs on the green." A Montreal officer visiting Ottawa says: "The young chaps are going before the Medical Boards in crowds; and if it had not been for the talk of a few politicians there would have been no agitation even." If it hadn't been for the Nationalist "politicians" and other politicians that encouraged them there would not have ben the failure in recruiting in Quebec that resulted. And if the war administration of the government from the beginning had inspired greater popular confidence; if deference, if not truckling, to the "big interests" had not obtained; if favour to money had not surpassed interest in manhood, there would, very probably, have been no lull in recruiting elsewhere in Canada, and conscription might not have been necessary.

The greater the signs of weakening of the Central Powers, the greater should be the effort and determination of the Entente Allies.

THE LEAVEN WORKING.

Whether or not the reports of the German naval mutiny are well founded as to facts there does not seem to be much doubt that both in the army and the navy the leaven of democracy has created aspirations for liberty and for relief from the slavery and tyranny of autocracy. With, alongside of them, the spectacle and fact of a nation of 170 millions of people breaking the bonds of despotism and becoming a free people, German sailors and soldiers and German people could not fail to be influenced by the significance of the fact of the Russian relvolution. The sailors of the German navy, in their enforced idleness, as custodians of a fleet that did not dare show its nose in the open, have had leisure to exercise the only faculty of which despotism had not deprived them—of thinking. A revolution in Germany now, or soon hereafter, would be no new thng. It would not be the first time that a German ruler had to flee his country before the menace of revolution. If autocracy could not keep the Slav spirit of freedom down it may be shown that autocracy cannot always keep its heel on the neck of a Teuton race that has naturally within it the germ of liberty.

The plain duty of every Canadian is to do everything possible to keep our fighting forces fed and strengthened with more of the same kind.

IS SIR ROBERT IN EARNEST?

No serious, thinking Canadian will deny the wisdom, and, indeed, necessity, of a union or national government, provided that the union effected spells national government in the real sense. A union government implies a combination of party and patriotic forces in which partizan feeling and partizan profit are mutually subordinated, and in which political opinion is subordinated to the adoption of a policy that has for its chief object the best possible fulfilment of Canada's duty in helping win the war. A real union government to be national must be altogether patriotic in sentiment, and non-partizan in policy.

The present attempt to form a union—a true national—government, does not seem to be promising. Sir Robert Borden does not seem to be able to resist the partizan influences in his present following which insist practically upon a procedure, which, while resulting in formation of a "union" government, shall protect party interests, and this ideal put into practice means putting sand in the machinery of union government formation. Will Sir Robert be able to leave partizanship outside the new government?

There was much reason to doubt the earnestness and bona fides of Sir Robert Borden's first offer to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to enter a union government. The proopsal was made impossible of acceptance by the fact that it involved the retention of Hon. Robert Rogers in a position of dominating influence, a condition that no self-respecting leader could entertain.

After a working rapprochement between the two great parties had made the idea of a union government more promising—when prominent Liberals had sacrificed party ties and severed party affiliation in a true, non-partizan spirit, all that seemed to be necessary was for Sir Bobert Borden to meet his opponents in the same spirit and subordinate party considerations to the great work of forming a "trong non-partizan, patriotic, win-the-war government.

But Sir Robert has not done this. While a virtual armistice between the parties existed to facilitate the formation of a non-partizan government, Sir Robert Borden has been busily exploiting the resources of the country to provide positions for his followers after the most approved partizan style. Since the recent negotiations have been opened Sir Robert has given fat positions in the civil service to six of his followers, the latest partizan appointment being that of Mr. McLean, Conservative M.P. for Queens, Prince Edward Island, to the position of Controller of the Northwest Mounted Police at $5,000 a year; a position one would have thought the western members who are to enter the cabinet, should have had a voice in if they are to be any more than lay figures in the "union" cabinet. Prematurely filling a position that requires a special fitness which the new partizan appointee does not possess, does not seem a striking proof of Sir Robert's bona fides or an allurement to non-partizans to enter the government.

If Sir Robert Borden is in earnest in his attempts to from a non-partizan union government, one would think he would abstain from the most patent partizanship, and leave important appointments to the judgment of the new ministry.

While the interests of the country may not be served by such appointments, the partizan spirit behind them may prevent the formation of a bona fide union government; and we shall find partizans ready to put the blame of failure anywhere than where it will really belong—to persistence of partizanship in the attempt to banish partianship and form a government that shall be really patroitic and non-partizan.

It will take time to decide whether the union government reported to have been formed answers the conditions of a real union government.

"The present Dominion government has been the most honest and provident since that of Alexander Mackenzie." The Toronto News says that and it must be so.

Peter McArthur, Farmers' Wives and Food Pledge Cards

At the present time there is a distressing amount of discussion in the country about the pledge cards that are being distributed through the Women's Institutes. They seem to arouse a surprising amount of opposition, but I am not sure that it matters very much. I do not think that there are very many farmers' wives who could be more saving than they are, and even those whose carelessness causes waste can make only a partial waste. You must remember that there are no garbage cans in the country, and no incinerators to burn up refuse. Table scraps and food that is spoiled for human consumption go to our smoke-consuming hogs or to our internal-combustion hens, and take the form of new food products. No one is more anxious to promote food conservation than I am—the second article I wrote after the outbreak of the war urged a campaign against waste—but I dislike to see irritation caused by having thrift and saving urged on people who are already saving in every way, many of them through necessity. One indignant woman exclaimed: "We save even our dishwater. It all goes to the pigs." A town woman, who heard the remark, added: "When we moved into town nothing bothered me more than to see greasy dish-water going down the sink. When I was a girl on the farm we were trained to save every drop of it." With hens and hogs for scavengers — and they never go on strike—it is hardly possible for country women to waste, even if they wanted to. The suggestion that they should sign pledges seems to many of them to be an insult. There are others, of course, who make the pledge cards the medium of a protest against the use of grain for brewing and distilling, the franchise, and other things that they object to in the conduct of the Government, but whether the cards are signed or not, there will be little waste.

Perhaps something might be accomplished by a pledge calling for the use of substitutes for bacon, wheat and the products that will be most useful, but even this might cause difficulty. Pork is probably the commonest meat food used in the country, and the home-cured brand made from hogs fed on pasture, swill and unavoidable waste does not cost anything like forty-eight cents a pound. I doubt if it costs much more than the fish which we are urged to eat, while it is the most sustaining food that can be used by a man who is doing hard work in the open air. Still, of course, it has a good market value, though it is doubtful if the money it would fetch would buy its equivalent in other foods. But it can be shipped to the soldiers at the front, while many other kinds of food cannot. It strikes me that what is needed for the country is pledge cards that touch on nothing but substitution. There is so little waste that it is not wise to anger people by talking about it.—Peter McArthur.

SITUATION IN TURKEY DESPERATE

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Oct. 12.—"The internal situation in Turkey is desperate," declared Dr. Otis A. Glazebrook, American Consul at Jerusalem, on his arrival.

"All the decent food still left in Turkey," Dr. Glazebrook said, "is sent to the army. The people are virtually starving."

Dr. Glazebrook said that the Turks have a strong and well equipped army of one hundred thousand men, barring the advance of the British between Jaffa and Jerusalem.

Ex-King Of Greece Is At St. Moritz

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Oct. 12.—Former King Constantine of Greece is living quietly with his family at St. Moritz, Switzerland, according to Pleasant A. Stovall, American Minister at Berne, who arrived here to-day.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I have no intention of entering into a newspaper controversy with anyone, least of all with Mrs. Kendrey, for whom I have the greatest respect, but I feel that I must correct any wrong impression which Mrs. Kendrey's interpretation of my letter might give to the public.

It was not without a great deal of thought that I sent my letter to "The Examiner," as I knew that it would meet with the disapporval of many; but there is no part of my letter that I wish to withdraw. Any of your readers who perused my letter carefully, know that I, in no way, belittled the great movement for food conservation, which, as your other correspondent says, "has reached such large prooprtions." On the contrary, I most distinctly said, that any woman worthy of the name was saving in every possible way. I am whole heartedly in favour of the elimination of waste in any form, just as I am absolutely and whole-heartedly opposed to signing pledges for any body of men or women, which, while demanding pledges of others, does not do its own part in the economy campaign.

The inconsistency of those who ask the women of the country to do their utmo t to save waste, while the greatest waste in the country is not done away with, by those in authority, is what my letter very plainly dealt with. Nor am I alone, or merely with "a handful of women" in protesting against this inconsistency. The daily papers of both political parties show that I am in company not to be despised, and that the women of whole towns and cities have rebelled, and I believe rightly so.

It is cruel to attach the stigma of wrote what I believe to be right, and I have statistical backing for any statement I made. I can only write what I believe in, and I am not ashamed of my position. I have as great faith in Canadian womanhood as the writer of the answer to my letter. I know that Canadian women will not be shirkers; and, in addition, I have an even greater faith in Canadian motherhood than Mrs. Kendrey, for I believe that there are few Canadian mothers who would not wish to know about the environment into which our boys are being sent, and who would not demand that everything be done to make conditions as favourable as possible for the brave Canadian lads?

It is cruel to attack the stigma of the eixstence of the waste through liquor, during war time, to the working people of England Heaven knows the working people have enough to bear without bearing the blame for this. Other countries have dealt with the liquor question and internal revolution has not been caused by the act of those in control of the situation. I am told "we are asked to save barley, not wheat," and am I to rest satised when I know that, during the last fiscal year, there was used, in Canada, for the manufacture of liquor, barely, 2,353,273 bushels; Indian corn, 589,394 bushels; rye, 123,801 bushels; oats, 4,075 bushels; molasses, 14,884,460 lbs., the total value being $4,244,090.69 (Inland Revenue statistics). How many loaves of bread would this buy?

I am asked, will the reading of "The Fiddlers" by Canadians give them a more courageous faith in the ultimate outcome of this horrible war and all its associations?" My reply is, that I firmly believe that the reading of "The Fiddlers," by patriotic Canadians, will indeed fire them with a love of country which they have never before known, and a desire to overcome injustice and inconsistnc in high places. It would indeed fill all mothers, and all those women who have the mother heart, even though they have not children of their own, "with a higher courage and faith."

No one is more loyal to Canada or loves Canada more than I do, and, knowing that, I do not recent the imputation that I am spreading German propaganda. I think it was during the first year of the war that I was spoken of as being "pro-German" because I allowed a Beethoven sonata to be played in recital, and did not want to destroy all the German dish-

"pro-German" is very freely used now by many people who happen to meet others whose views do not meet with their approval. Those of us who read the political news, notice that frequently each side of politics flings the term "pro-German" at its opposink side. This term, therefore, does not worry me in the slightest, as I know that I love my country, and am willing to deny myself to any extent for her good. If I had not love of Canada I should not be writing this letter.

As to the franchise, I would be as willing as Mrs. Kendrey to give up my vote, were it for the good of the boys who are so bravely fighting for us. But Mrs. Kendrey knows as well as I do, that the denial of the vote to her and to me will not benefit the boys, and is simply an act of injustice. I am in love with no political party, and it may be because of my non-partisan outlook that I see things in so different a light from that of your other correspondent.

Mrs. Kendrey would deny me the vote and exclude me from the ranks of voters until I have been "proved worthy" "by sufferings," and on this ground I can assuredly claim eligibility as a voter, for it was only through great sorrow that I was led to think on public subjects and to work for the country that I love.

A CHIMNEY FIRE.

The Fire Department was called last night, at 7.18, to the corner of Brock and George streets, to a chimney fire in Mrs. Guerin's flat in the building belonging to Mrs. Birdsalls. The fire, which was extinguished by chemicals, did no damage.

Ample Power In Peterborough

Some municipalities in Ontario have complained of a shortage of power with the result the Hydro Electric Commission has been taking an inventory of available power throughout Ontario. The increasing demands of the munition plants is given as the chief reason for the shortage.

Lindsay claims to have lost a new industry due, it is alleged, to the inability to secure sufficient power.

So far there has been no shortage in Peterborough and there is no prospect of any in the immediate future.

CHRISTMAS SHOWER FOR WOUNDED CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Mrs. W. H. White is giving a "shower" at St. Luke's Rectory, 334 Rogers St., Ashburnham, on Tuesday afternoon and evening, October 16th, in aid of the effort about to be made by the Canadian Women's Club of Folkestone, England, to fill "Christmas stockings" for the wounded Canadians in the hospitals of the Shorncliffe area. Ladies of Peterborough, who would like to help in this patriotic undertaking, are invited to come to Tuesday's "shower," bringing with them any one of the following articles: 1 box cigarettes, 1 pack cards, 1 puzzle, 1 neck tie (red), 1 handkerchief (khaki), 1 pair socks, 1 Spearmint chewing gum, 1 bar chocolate, 1 writing-pad and pencil, 1 book.

The total number of stockings required to be filled is 3,500. There is no danger of overlapping, as the C. W. C. is working in conjunction with the Red Cross. Moore Barracks Hospital will be included in the group mentioned. This hospital is the hospital for all cases of sickness in the training camps of the Shorncliffe area, viz., St. Martin's Plain, Upper and Lower Dibgate, East and West Sandling, Otterpool and Wisten-hanger.

The C.W. Club for war work has been doing much work for the Canadian soldiers—visiting hospitals, entertaining the wounded, and operating a club for soldiers, where the cooking and most of the other work is done by the members of the C. W. C. This club is very popular with the men, who flock there to enjoy the good home-made cookery. It has a large recreation-room, a reading and writing-room, 4 bathrooms, and sleeping accommodation for 30 men. Although the C. W. C. has become much reduced in numbers, those remaining are making a determined effort to carry on its work.

WAN CHEEKS WHERE SMILES SHOULD BE

"The most heartrending of all things in the blighted country," says an American who has just returned from a tour of investigation in the occupied part of Belgium, "is the plight of the little children. Here and there kiddies born to freedom and happiness, just as your children, yet robbed of all that is bright and cheery and being slowly starved to death by an inhuman enemy of their fathers. What right has anyone to deny these children the food that will furnish their little bodies? Germany will not give it to them—it hopes to win the war that way. Will we be like them? It is our duty—a debt of humanity, if nothing more—to give them food. It is little enough to do for them. If you at home, snug in your plenty, could see their frail little bodies, their wan cheeks colourless, and with none of the smiles of childhood, then you would feed them. These little children are the pride of their parents, just as ours are, and what will their fathers say when they come back from the war and what will they think of their victory when they find only little graves where the smiling faces of the kiddies should be? These children are living now on a bowlful of soup and a little bread each day. That is the best the Belgian Relief Committee can do for them unless you and I give more freely to this, the world's most deserving charity."

Anyone wishing to respond to the appeal of this witness of the appalling distress at present existing in Belgium should send his or her donation to the Belgian Relief Fund.

Work Of The Fire Brigade Is Appreciated

Fire Chief Grange yesterday received a cheque for $25 and a letter of thanks from the Peterborough Lumber Company, as a token of the company's appreciation of the manner in which the fire on Wednesday night was handled by the brigade. The money will be devoted to the Firemen's Benefit Fund.

The Company's letter was as follows:

October 11, 1917.

George Grange, Fire Chief.

Dear Sir,—We wish to express our high appreciation of the excellent work done by yourself and men of your Department during the fire at our planing mill, last night, and enclose herewith our cheque for $25 towards your Firemen's Fund.

Got Away With Load of Pumpkins

North Monaghan has a pumpkin thief who uses a motor car to facilitate his particular line of business. Last night the individual in question halted his trusty gasoline buggy in front of the premises of a well-known market gardener, and, climbing the fence, proceeded to fill his car with pie material in the shape of large, luscious pumpkins. He had capacity load when the owner of the property hove in sight in his own car, and gave chase to the marauder. The latter made good his escape, but the gardener managed to detect the number of his car, which has been reported to the police.

The Cream of the Opera

The cream of the entire opera, "The Bohemian Girl," is given on Victrola Record 35608. Dismissed German Envoy to Argentine Centre of Stormy Scene

(By Chas. P. Stewart.)

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 12. — How Count Luxburg, dismissed German envoy, was forcibly searched and disarmed after he had given vent to a wild outburst of language when discovered hiding at an obscure Uruguayan ranch, was told in information reaching here today. The Count is himself under heavy guard, en route back to Buenos Aires. He will be held under strictest guard, at an internment camp until Argentine can see him off on his trip to Berlin via a Spanish steamer.

It appears that Luxburg, furnished with a passport and given all diplomatic courtesies, including complete protection from unfriendly crowds in Buenos Aires, decided when he arrived in Uruguay, not to return home. He established himself in a remote Uruguayan ranch. Uruguayan police finally located him and took him into custody. Luxurg, it was stated, was violently abusive in his protests over his treatment and became so much so that he was finally searched. Two revolvers which he carried were seized.

"Busybodies" Constitute A Nuisance

Citizens Would Be Better Advised If They Would Report Destitute Cases to the City Officials Rather Than Attempt Individual Relief

Yesterday an appeal was made on behalf of a family said to be in destitute circumstances. A more effective way of dealing with such cases would be to report them direct to Mr. F. W. Miller, head of the Civic Charity Department, or the Relief Office, both of which are located at the City Hall. Individual effort is often misplaced and leads to complications, whereas a direct appeal to the properly constituted bodies would bring forth better and quicker results. Within the past week or ten days at least two cases were reported to the first named department, and upon investigation it was shown that the city was in no way liable and immediate steps were taken to vest the responsibility of maintenance in the proper municipality. If this was not done the city would have to assume greater burdens of this nature than is now necessary. According to the officials of both the Charity and Relief Departments the greatest difficulty they have in connection with the administration of the departments is in the elimination of what one official designated as "busybodies." In the Relief Department there is a fund of approximately seven thousand dollars available for such work, so that it is hardly necessary for individuals to seek private funds or interest themselves in such cases without first notifying the authorities named. Each year the city expends thousands of dollars in relief work and it is only by extreme care that abuses are avoided. The best anyone can do for a destitute case should they discover one is to notify Mr. F. W. Miller of the Central Charity Board or Mr. F. H. Dobbin of the Relief Association and feel assured that every attention will be given to the case.

TREBILCOCK BROS. HAD LARGE SALE OF GERARD'S BOOK

Trebilcock Brothers are delivering the large shipment of Ambassador James M. Gerard's book "My Four Years in Germany," of which they have sold more than one hundred copies in this city. It forms a valuable addition to any library that includes a section of the most important books dealing the countries at war. "My Four Years in Germany" antedates the outbreak of war and is particularly interesting in its recital of the events in which the Kaiser and his party bulked so largely during the summer of 1914.

LEADERSHIP IS VACANT

C. M. Bowman is Named by Many as Mr. Rowell's Successor

(Special to the Toronto Star and the Peterborough Examiner).

TORONTO, Oct. 12. — N. W. Rowell's inclusion in the Union Government leaves the Ontario Opposition leadership vacant.

C. M. Bowman, M.P.P., West Bruce, Chief Liberal Whip in the Ontario Legislature, is the man named by many as Mr. Rowell's successor.

Another Canadian party has been born, as J. M. Godfrey sees the new situation under Union Government. This party will be known as the War Unionists. After the war, he thinks, the designation may be shortened to "Unionists."

"It was time for a new party," said Mr. Godfrey. "Naturally enough, I am delighted."

No Penalty For "Blacklister" Who Possesses Liquor?

A "black-lister," charged with having liquor in his possession, contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act amendment, added another to his many appearances in police court, this morning. In a recent raid on his home a quantity of liquor, which he had obtained in some devious manner, was found by the authorities. Mr. F. D. Kerr, who appeared for him, this morning, argued that the Act provided no penalty for a breach of this clause.

The case was adourned for a week during which Crown Attorney Hatton will inquire from the Department for a ruling on this point.

The case was adjourned for a week or License Inspector to prohibit any person who is an habitual drunkard from obtaining liquor. The Express Companies and individuals are forbidden, under penalty, to supply him with alcoholic beverages; but although the amendement proscribes the "black-lister" it does not apparently indicate a penalty for infractions of this section of the Act. Under the old Liquor License Act the "Indian-lister" was usually fined $10 or more.

Two Lakefield Houses Destroyed

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 12.—The double house and adjoining sheds on Albert street, owned by Mr. W. W. Leonard, were completely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire broke out about 12.30 a.m. in a shed in the rear of the house, and when discovered had made such headway that the adjacent house was soon in flames. The house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. James Long and Mrs. Robt. Alford.

Only a small part of the furniture was saved. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

It was only by the most strenuous efforts that the surrounding houses and stores were saved. The loss is estimated at about $1,000.

BRIDGEBURG, Oct. 12.—Complaint has been sent to Ottawa against the treatment accorded a young Pelham farmer when he went to the St. Catharines Medical Board for examination. He says he was met with this remark: "We've been waiting for you for three years. Now you'll have to wait for us."

The farmer had driven to St. Catharines two days previously, and it was not until late on the second that he asked that he be no longer kept away from his work.

Dear Mary:—

I was not thoughtful when I furnished my home last. I did not get the right kind of range. I tried to "save" in the wrong place. So the other day I gave my old range to my washwoman who needed it and went down to Harry Zacks' and bought a new one.

Why, what a difference it makes! Women who must slave hours every day in a hot kitchen should simply DEMAND of their husbands the most convenient range. I wouldn't go back to my old one for one year for ten times what my new one cost.

Your friend—HELEN.

P.S.—It is astonishing how easy it is to buy new things when you can pay for them on the easy terms arranged by ing organizations to their cause. The impression here appears to be that in Manitoba and Saskatchewan anyway the organization will be fairly solidly behind the union. In Alberta there may be a split with Hon. C. A. Cross and Hon. Frank Oliver on the straight Liberal Laurier ticket. British Columbia Liberals have no representation on the new cabinet. In the Maritime Provinces it is believed, the fight will be pretty well along party lines and that there will be a few union acclamations. In Ontario the situation is uncertain. Neither Hon. Geo. P. Graham nor Fred Pardee participated in the conference held last night and were uncommunicative when approached later. It is believed that they saw Sir Wilfrid during the evening. The Liberal leader is expected to issue a brief statement, probably before the end of the week. Upon the nature of that statement very much may depend the number of Laurier candidates who will be in the field during the coming election.

Garbage Collectors Get Many Bouquets In The Late Season

Since the flowers gardens were seared and struck down by recent frosts, the garbage carts have been piled high with wasted asters, gladioli and various other plants that have gone the way of everything that possesses only life. There are citizens who pile these dead plants into great heaps and vainly believe that the collector will fork them or carry them away into the carts. These piles will decorate the front lawns until spring unless the regulations for collection are adopted. Plants, limbs and other loose refuse must be tied in bundles which may be readily gathered up.

Magistrate Dumble Decides That Milk Was Deteriorated By Poor Pasturage In September

In the following written judgment Magistrate Dumble dismisses a charge against Wm. Fife of Otonabee of having delivered deteriorated milk to a cheese factory. The case was tried on Wednesday.

John Gibson -vs, Wm. Fife..
Judgment.

The defendant is charged with unlawfully sending to the Ormonde Cheese Factory, Otonabee, "deteriorated milk," contrary to the Industry Act.

The evidence given was that of the Inspector, John Gibson, who stated that on September 12th, 1917, he inspected the milk delivered by defendant at the Ormonde Cheese factory in the Township of Otonabee, that it consisted of the milk taken from cows the previous Wednesday night, 12th September, and on Thursday morning, September 13th, and again on Monday morning, October 8th, and that his instruments, a lactometre and a Babcock Tester gave the result as follows. First testing:

Specific gravity, 32.5.

Butter fat, two tests, 2.40, 2.50; average 2.45.

Ths record designated poor milk, and below the proper standard. So again on the 8th day of October he tested it with the following result:

Specific gravity, 29.7.

Butter fat, 3.80.

This showed a wonderful improvement, being much above normal average quality. He then laid an information against defendant for having on the 12th of September delivered at the factory "deteriorated milk."

The defendant pleaded not guilty, and he and his son and two grown-up daughters, who lived and conducted the farming on the farm where the herd was, went into the witness box and severally swore that they could not account for the great difference in the milk, and severally stated that they had not nor had any of them added to or taken anything from the milk. It was stated in evidence that defendant always kept the Saturday night and Sunday morning milkings for home use. None of them could account for the poorness of the milk delivered at the factory on the morning of the 12th September.

Incidentally it was stated that after the first test the cows had been put into an alfalfa field for the first time this season. Now the test by instruments has always been accepted as correct and no doubt they are correct, but they do not determine that the milks have been "deteriorated" by the act of any one. The first tested milk was below standard, the last was just as much above. Was the milk delivered on on 12th of September watered? Was the milk skimmed of its cream?

In the face of the very high standing of the Fife family, I could not accept the simple test of the instruments against the oaths of four members of the family. The father and three of his grown up children.

Admitting that the instrumental tests were correct, would I be safe in making a conviction where one test showed poor milk and the next test a surplus of good qualities. Was there another criterion that ought to be considered? I think there was, and I think if due weight had been given to it this information would never have been laid.

All September was very dry, the pastures were dried up, the milking would naturally fall off both in quantity and quality. After the first test the cows were turned into an alfalfa clover field and had been in it about a week when the second test was made, showing the greatly improved milk. Is not the entire explanation here? Do not these new conditions of pasture account for what did not occur to the mind of any of the parties? The Inspector was right in going back and making the second test, but should not a man of his large experience have found the explanation without dragging this most respectable family to court to defend themselves against a charge of fraud. I am glad to draw attention to the possibility of doing a great wrong if reliance is wholly on the result of mechanical tests, and failing to consider other conditions which may be accountable for results.

The charge here is one of fraud, that is of fraudulently adding water which accounted for the gravity and of withdrawing cream which accounted for the low reading of butter fat. The instruments told the truth, but was that first reading the result of fraud or of the poor pasture? Was the high standard of the second reading the result of a week's feeding on a field of alfalfa, or was it evidence only of refraining from adding water and refraining from abstracting cream?

I hold that the readings of the two tests were the direct results of the condition of the pastures and that I could not be justified in finding fraud when the results were perfectly consistent with the conditons of the pastures.

I would not be justfied in robbing an old and most highly respected family of their good name on the result of one test by a machine as against the evidence of four witnesses, when a little consideration of the condition of the feeding offered a clear, satisfactory and natural explanation

I think the Inspector was doing his duty considering the enormous interests involved, but I think more consideration of the feeding conditions should be given before charging results of bad weather and pasture conditions as results of fraud.

If the Lactometre and Babcock tester could have spoken they would have said the poor showing on the 12th of September was the result of dried up pasture, extra good showing on the 19th Sept. the result of one week's feeding on alfalfa clover.

D. W. DUMBLE,
Police Magistrate.

"Take Care Of The Pickle"

Worth 25 to 28 cts. a Pound Chief Auditor For Davies Company Alleged to Have Said

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Oct. 12.—"Take care of the pickle, it is worth to 28 cents pound. The British Government should know more than to pay 25 to 28 cents a pound for salt watr." J. T. Wardle, who was in charge of the export department of the William Davies Company, Limited, at Montreal until August 25th last, swore at the Government investigation this morning that he was instructed as above by John Cringan, the official auditor of the company.

Wardle said the remark was a sore point with him as a patriotic man and a Britisher.

He soon afterwards left the company's employ.

Gringan on being called as a witness after Wardle, denied making any such statement, but admitted having some conversation with him over the export business. Mr. Wardle was then recalled and declared again that Mr. Gringan had thus spoken and that he had also said: "I think it is a shame that people should have to pay such high prices." Mr. Wardle admitted that he was irritated because he had not received promotion.

Engineers' Dinner At Empress Hotel Was Well Attended

At a dinner meeting of the Engineers' Club at the Empress Hotel last night, Mr. R. L. Dobbin, superintendent of the City's Water Works Department, gave an address on the raising of the suspended span of the Quebec bridge. Mr. P. P. Westby, of the Wm. Hamilton Co., presided in the absence of Mr. C. E. Canfield. The address was illustrated with slides taken from official photographs and by others taken by Mr. Dobbin. Following the lucid story of the big engineering event, a discussion, led by Mr. R. B. Rogers, brought out many questions and information regarding the work and the principles under which it was effected. Mr. H. O. Fisk operated the lantern. Last night's meeting, which began at 6.30 o'clock, was greatly appreciated by the engineers, and not the least important feature was the excellent dinner provided.

Funeral Of Mr. Thomas Crowley

The funeral of the late Thomas Crowley, who died yesterday, will leave the family residence to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock, and proceed to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Martin's Cemetery, Downeyville, for interment.

Children should be trained to be particular about washing their hands before meals.

MILITARY NEWS

master will then give him the necessary papers to fill out, the papers are left with the postmaster, who in his turn, forwards them to the Central Registrar for the Province, and the applicant does not need to pay any more attention to the matter until he receives some notice from the Registrar telling him where and when to apply for medical examination, or where and when to appear for his exemption hearing. This greatly simplifies matters for all men who will have to travel some distance to their medical boards, and who could not be sure of being examined when they did apply, but for all men living in Toronto or other centres where medical boards are sitting, the simplest course will be for them to go up directly for examination. Even if a man lives at some distance from a medical board and wishes to get his examination over first in order to help him determine his attitude towards applying for exemption, it will be quite proper for him to apply personally for such physical examination, and even if he does happen to make a mistake and not get to the nearest board, he will not have to be examined again, as the decision of one board holds good.

NEW YORK GIANTS EVEN UP THE SERIES

Schupp's Fine Pitching and Heavy Hitting of McGraw Tribe Results in a 5 to 0 Win--Benny Kauff Starred With Two Clean Home Runs.

NEW YORK, Oct 11. — Swinging their war clubs like the cave men of old, the New York Nationals battered their way to victory over the Chicago Americans here to-day by a score of 5 to 0. As a result of the second defeat of the White Sox in two days, the Giants are travelling westward to-night on even terms with their rivals in the struggle for world's series victory. The outcome of the battle for premier baseball honours is as much a doubt as before the series began in Chicago last Saturday. Each team now has won two contests and the indications point to a full will admit the supremacy of the oth- seven-game drive before either club er.

The victory of the Giants in the fourth game was the most impresive of the struggle to date, for the National League colour-bearers excelled both in pitching and with the bat. While the Chicago combination threatened several times they never got a runner beyond third base and the American League team left for the shores of Lake Michigan without crossing the Polo Grounds home plate in eighteen innings.

Two new diamond heroes leaped to pedestals of fame in the clash to-day, for Ferdinand Schupp turned the White Sox batters back without a run and Benny Kauff led the batting massacre with two home runs.

The youthful left-hander fully redeemed hmself for the vicious sally of the Chicago Club in the second game on their home grounds when the Comiskey Park batters drove him from the mound early in the contest whil Kauff, after thirteen hitless trips to the plate, finally found his batting eye and broke through Pitcher Faber for a circuit drive which paved the way for the Giants' onslaught which later was to demoralize the White Sox. The effectiveness of Schupp's hurling and Kauff's batting was sufficient to defeat the American League champions, but the scent of victory was contagious and their tea-mates were but a stride behind them in the rush through the White Sox trenches.

Ancient History Dope.

Only twice in the long history of world series baseball has Kauff's feat of two home runs in one game been duplicated. Before the former batting leader of the Federal League made his two circuit drives the honour was divided between Harry Hooper of the Boston Americans of 1915 and Outfielder Dougherty of the same club in 1903. Hooper hammered two home runs into the bleachers in the fifth game of the world series of two years ago against the Philadelphia Nationals, while in the ancient days of the post-season play Dougherty established the record with his twin drives against the Pittsburg Nationals of 1903.

In shutting out the Sox without a run, following a similar feat by Rube Benton yesterday, Schupp also equalled for the Giants' team, as a whole, a double shut-out which has been scored but few times since the beginning of the present century. In 1908 the Chcago Nationals whitewashed the Detroit Americans twice in succession and in 1905 the Giants of those days shut out the Philadelphia Athletics four games out of five, while the only victory of the Mack men was also a shut-out by the Indian pitcher, "Chief" Bender. Christy Mathewson, now manager of the Cincinnati Nationals, and "Iron-Man" Joe McGinnity were the New York twirlers who engineered the quadruple whitewash of the Athletics.

There was nothing to forecast the sensational developments of to-day's game in the early innings. For three sessions it was a pitchers' battle between Faber and Schupp with little, if any, advantage on either side. Kauff was the third man to face Faber in the Giants' half of the fourth, Burns and Herzog having failed to make first base. With two out and his record of not a hit in the series in thirteen times at bat a by-word among the fans, Kauff was desperate. With a ball and a strike called against him he saw a perfect "groove" ball coming up from Faber's hand, and, taking a deep toe-hold in the batter's box, he flung the full weight of his body into the sweep of the bat. There was a terrific crack and the ball flew like a bullet over second base and far onward into centre-field.

Outfielder Felsch, the man who made the tremendous circuit drive off Sallee in the opening game of the series, sighted the sailing sphere and sprinted for the centre-field bleacher fence. The ball passed over his head as he ran, and fell among the folds of a canvas sign which, before it was dropped at the beginning of the game announced: "The Giants have bought their Liberty bonds. Have you?" Felsch, in his eagerness to hold Kauff at third, fumbled the ball as he tried to pick it up and the Giants' runner was crossing the plate as the sphere was finally returned to the infield. Both Kauff's team-mates and the fans gave him an enthusiastic greeting as he sped toward the Giants' dugout.

Bunts Bring Results.

The circuit blow appeared to take something of Faber's confidence, and although Zimmerman was retired on an infield out the White Sox hurler faltered as soon as he faced the Nationals in the succeeding session. Fletcher opened with a single to centre. Manager McGraw crossed the Sox by switching from his well-known hit-and-run system to bunting. Robertson and Holke both laid down perfect bunts, and by fast sprinting the bases were filled. Rariden's hopper to Faber resulted in a double play, Fletcher being forced at the plate, and Schalk's quick throw to Gandil getting Rariden by a step. Schupp's single to centre sent Robertson across the plate but Holke was caught by Felscher's rapid return of the ball as he tried to slide in a stride behind Robertson.

In the "lucky seventh" the Giants scored again. Fletcher singled off McMullen's glove and took third when Faber's "spitball" flew wild and Schalk had to chase it to the grandstand wall. Robertson went out, Faber to Gandil, and then the White Sox pitcher hit Holke, sending him to first. For the first time in the game the fans began to root steadily in an effort to rattle Faber. McGraw gave the signal for the hit-and-run play, and as Rariden went out, Collins to Gandil, Fletcher scored. With Holke on second Schupp was retired, Weaver to first.

Faber retired at the end of the seventh inning, and Danforth took up the hurling for the White Sox when the Giants went to bat in the eighth. Burns fanned, but Captain Herzog splashed a single to centre, and for a second time in the game Kauff found a ball to his liking and sent it sailing away for another home run. This time he hooked the ball toward right field, and the sphere dropped leisurely into the grandstand, back of first base, while Kauff trotted around the bases, preceded by Herzog, for the final runs of the contest. Zimmerman tried to duplicate Kauff's hit, but the best he could do was to triple to centre, and he was caught in an attempted steal home after Fletcher was thrown out at first on a strikeout.

NOT TO BE SCRAPPED YET.

Municipalities Given Chance to Help London Railroad.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 12.—George Woods, of Toronto, president of the London and Lake Erie Railway, has agreed to take no action for two weeks in regard to selling the line for scrap and give the municipalities between London and the lake an opportunity of either buying the road or assisting it financially. A meeting of representatives from all the municipalities has been called for next Thursday.

Snow Storm At Chicago

Poor Weather Prospects For Fifth World Series Game To-morrow

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 12.—The fifth world series game here to-morrow may be played on snow shoes.

That was the indication to-day when the weather man tried to camouflage the landscape into looking like Christmas.

Snow fell during the night and early to-day, and heavy clouds cast a gloom over the city that was in keeping with the spirits of its fans after yesterday's second successive defeat in New York.

The weather man promises "unsettled and warmer" for to-morrow. The "unsettled" part is the part that's bothering the fans. As the weather man failed to foresee to-day's snow, it may mean a repetition for Saturday.

Whatever the weather, however, a capacity crowd is assured. Speculators are asking $10 for a grand stand seat and $15 for a box seat.

And the White Sox backers are still willing to bet. They want even money on the series now, but more Chicago money was in sight than at any time since the series began.

AUSTRIANS LOSE MILLION.

One-third of the Army on the Italian Front Sacrificed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11. — A despatch from Rome says: "A great Austrian War Council has taken place on the Isonzo front. The commanders of the different sectors and Gen. Conrad were present. It is ascertained that the Austrian losses on the Italian front amounted to one-third of the whole Austro-Hungarian army there. The machine guns which Austria had at the beginning of the war, and which Austria had built since the war and used on the Italian front, have practically all fallen into the hands of the Italians. It is ascertained that the German and Austro-Hungarian commands now consider the Italian front the most dangerous."

An Italian military authority explains that Austria-Hungary had 3,000,000 soldiers on the Italian front, and that the loss of a third of them meant the loss of a million men.

A Beast of Burden that Goes When it Pleases Only.

The South American llama will bear neither beating nor ill-treatment. The animals go in troops, an Indian walking a long distance ahead as a guide. If the llamas are tired, they stop, and the Indian stops also. If the delay be too great, the Indian becoming uneasy towards sunset, after all due precaution, resolves on supplicating the beasts to resume their journey. He stands about fifty-or sixty paces off in an attitude of humility, waving his hand coaxingly towards them, looks at them with tenderness, and at the same time in the softest tones, reiterates, "Ic, ic, ic!" If the llamas are disposed to resume their course they follow the Indian in good order and at a regular pace, but step fast, for their legs are long; but when they are in ill-humor, they do not even turn towards the speaker, but remain motionless, huddled together, standing or lying down. The straight neck and gentle majesty of bearing, the long down of their always clean and glossy skin, their supple and timid motion, all give them an air at once sensitive and noble. If it happens (which is very seldom the case) that an Indian wishes to obtain either by force or even by threats, what the llama will not willingly perform, the instant the animal finds itself affronted by words or gesture it raises its head with dignity, and without making any attempt to escape ill-treatment by flight, lies down. The respect shown these animals by Peruvian Indians amounts almost to superstitious reverence. When the Indians load them two approach and caress the animals, hiding its head that it may not see the load on its back. It is the same in unloading.

Germans Tried To Head Off Recent Drive Of British Enemy Shelled Communicating Roads and Front Lines —Machine Gun Fire Was Very Severe—Huns Were Driven From Brewery Stronghold—Mud in Some Cases Was Impenetrable—Hard Fighting.

(By the Associated Press.)

British Front in France and Belgium, Oct. 13.—There was more rifle and bayonet work yesterday than in the last battle or two in Flanders. The machine guns, however, played an important part of the German defence. The enemy fought better than usual in some places, but in others he has shown a lack of fighting spirit. The mud in some cases was impenetrable.

ANTICIPATED ADVANCE.

The Germans evidently guessed in advance that the attack was to be launched at daybreak. During the night they shelled communicating roads and front lines heavily, and as early as two o'clock this morning they threw large numbers of gas shells along the British forward positions. As the attack began the enemy maintained heavy machine gun barrage over large sections of the front.

On the right of the advance, which roughly was in the direction about the Ravesbeek river, the ground was awful. In addition there were numerous strong German positions along the slopes of the Passchendaele ridge, which dominated the advance and made it possible for the enemy to pour heavy machine gun fire into the approaching troops.

HELD UP ADVANCE.

Bellevue, 1,500 yards west of Passchendaele, was another point that held up the British advance with machine gun fire. Bellevue is located on the spur which rises above the surrounding ground, and there were many German pill boxes packed on this elevation. The fire from these strongholds was incessant. There was also hard fighting about the Copse, just to the north-west of Bellevue.

GRAVE DIFFICULTIES.

North of Wallemollen, the depth of attack gradually tapered off as it swung north-westward toward Houlholst forest. Here grave difficulties were encountered along the Lekkebotherbeke and Broenbeck rivers, where the ground was a horrible mass of seemingly bottomless mud.

LATEST REPORTS.

The latest reports received were to the effect that the British had driven the Germans from their brewery stronghold in the eastern outskirts of Poelcapelle and had pushed on beyond. Just how far they continued to advance it is impossible to say at this hour.

KEEN INTEREST IN THE PLOWING COMPETITION

Numerous Competitors in Five Acre Contest, Five Townships Being Represented in the List of Entries.

SCORE CARD READY

Keen interest is being taken this year in the five acre ploughing competition being held for the first time in this county, under the direction of the County Ploughmen's Association. Thirteen entries have been received, including five from Otonabee, four from Smith, one from Asphodel, one from Belmont and three from Ennismore. The competitors are allowed to plough five acres in stubble on their own farms. The judges, Messrs. Wm. J. Cleghorn and Joshua Smithson, of Otonabee, will visit the different farms and score the land of the competitors, from August 18 to 20.

The judges announce that they have prepared a score card, which they intend using in scoring the work of the competitors. The highest number of points any competitor can obtain is 135, divided as follows:

Crown	20 points
Straightness	15
Evenness of cut	20
Evenness of depth	20
Covering of grass and stubble	20
Finish	20
General appearance	20
	135

It is expected that this competition will be productive of much good. Men who would like to compete in the county match are often not so situated that they can readily attend the match. Often, also, some men would like to compete, but are nervous about ploughing before the large crowd that attends the county match. By allowing competitors to plough five acres on their own farms, these difficulties have been overcome, and the number of entries already received indicates that this is going to be a most interesting feature of the work of the County Association. A number of township councils have voted $5.00 each towards the prize money in this special match. These grants have assisted the County Association materially in holding it.

IT is always safe to send a Dominion Express Money Order. Five dollars cost three cents.

Norwood Boy Scouts Carry On Under Enthusiastic Leader

Made a Good Showing in Their Display at Wednesday's Fair —Rev. A. Mansell Irwin Is Scoutmaster and Devoted to the Work

The service of the Rev. A. Mansell Irwin, of the Norwood Methodist Church, as Scout Master of the village Scouts, is doubtless appreciated by the boys and their parents. Under his leadership the platoon carrys on from year to year receiving the boys when they seem scarcely big enough to carry their staves and passing them on to the High School Cadets, and above all implanting in awakening minds ideas of personal efficiency and service that will remain with them throughout their lives.

At the Norwood Fair during the past few years, the Scouts have been conspicuous little figures in their natty uniforms and in the various manoeuvres which they execute with that absence of self-consciousness that is characteristic of boyhood. This year their work was as commendable as ever. Thirty-six in number, their platoon, thoroughly organized, gave an exhibition of the rudiments of company drill, stretcher making, camp fire craft, and finally competed in first aid work for the prizes offered by Mrs. Richard Birdsall, of Birdsall's station. Their display was altogether interesting. It was an evidence of what young boys can do under proper training and in a form of recreation that naturally appeals to them. Their latent initiative is called into action, it finds an appealing and many-sided objective, and there is developed a spirit of self-reliance that must surely be reflected in their after years.

Patrol No. 1—1st Robert Rathwell, 2nd Norman McLean, 3rd Eric Elliott.

The Norwood Scouts are fortunate in their leader. Apparently he has not lost touch with youth. He stimulates and shares the enthusiasm the boys manifest in their outing, some of which run into weeks spent back in the rock country. Then there is the first aid course in which the boys have become proficient under the instructions of Rev. Mr. Irwin, who qualified himself for just this form of work. The citizens of Norwood may realize what the Scout organization means to those boys who take advantage of the opportunities it holds out to them, but it is more than likely that the burden of the work falls upon the Scout Master. And while the boys are interested in a pastime the influence of which they do not realize at present, the time will undoubtedly come when they will look back to their Scout days as among the profitable of their youth.

The prizes for the best set up cadets among the Norwood High School squad went to Andrew McGee first, Paul Irwin second, and Eric Finlay third. Incidentally, it may be remarked, that most of the Cadets are graduates of the Scouts Patrol.

Hanna May Be Unable To Fix Potato Price

Advises Montreal Women to Lay in Supply at Present Price

MONTREAL, Oct. 11. — Despite the fact that Canada has a surplus of ten million bushels of potatoes this fall potatoes are not going to sell for the proverbial song, as present prices show. And there will be no price fixing by W. J. Hanna, the Food Controller, as regards the necessary tubers.

Here are Mr. Hanna's exact words as spoken before the Housewives: People should avail themselves of the present cheap markets and put in a fair supply. This would do a great deal towards regulating the market. If we fix the price of potatoes, next spring up comes the question of potatoes again. The producer must get out what he puts in or he will not plant again, and next year we shall want potatoes as badly as we did in 1916, if the war continues."

Margarine On Free List.

Mr. Hanna had one grain of comfort to give the overburdened householders. It is that there is a possibility that margarine will be put on the free list in the near future and that its manufacture would be allowed in Canada. The Examiner endeavoured to secure a definite pronouncement from Mr. Hanna on this matter, but the best he would do was to be somewhat indefinite. He stated that the matter was now being considered at Ottawa, and that as the demand for butter overseas was so great that the farmers would not be able to supply the demand and thus inferentially would not have to fear a reduction in price, he had hopes that the ban on oleo would be lifted.

Sugar Outlook Dark.

The housewives were thrown into a great state of alarm by what Mr. Hanna had to say about sugar. The outlook is so dark, he said, that it is possible the manufacture of candies of all sorts will be forbidden and that several thousand people will thus be thrown out of work. His department is working with Mr. Hoover to see if a supply can be secured for Canada, but he was not at all optimistic as to the outlook.

Mr. Hanna said the amount of raw sugar available for the refiners in Canada and the United States was so small as to be the subject of alram in both countries. During the past ten days a crisis had developed, but drastic measures were being taken by the Department of Food Control at Ottawa and Washington to ensure a steady supply. Cuba, since the war began, was the world's main source of sugar, and the United States was in close contact with the island and Canada was not.

The Food Controller said that arrangements had been made whereby Nova Scotia apples would be delivered to the retailers in Quebec and Ontario, which were suffering a shortage from the poor crop this year.

CATTLE PRICES FIRM GOOD ACTIVE TRADE

Week's Supplies Light and Generally of Poor Quality—Hogs Held Firm

Cattle prices continue firm at prices prevailing the past few weeks. There has been some determination in quality, unusual at this season when farms are being cleaned up of the rough cattle still out at grass. But the light supplies as a whole and the scarcity of real choice butcher cattle keeps the general level of prices high as compared with former seasons.

Heavy steers of export quality command good prices, as shown by the sale this week of one good load of heavy export at $12.75. More of the same kind would have sold equally steers and heifers sold around $11, but there were few at that price, the bulk of the best butchers available at the present time fetching not more than $10.50, and from that down to $9.25 for medium stuff. Butcher cows continue to hold firm, choice cows selling from $8.75 to $9.60.

Good stockers and feeders have been in good demand at firm prices all through the week, particularly anything in the short-keep class.

Choice veal calves hold steady to firm.

Hogs held firm and strong all through the week, though it was said the feeling was easier towards the end.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 610 cars, with 8,268 cattle, 693 calves, 9,320 hogs, 9,525 sheep and lambs, and 707 horses.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

CHAPTER VII.

John Barton, first mate of the trading ship Thanksgiving, owed his Puritanism to the stern teachings of his father, his capacity for adventure to a long line of English ancestors, who had prayed, loved and fought with equal and unflagging sincerity. Devon folk they were, in whose hearts sang the song of the sea. They had reason to both love and hate it, for it had vouchsafed them fortune and honour on the one hand, while claiming bitter and ceaseless toil on the other. Few of the Bartons lay in English churchyards; the ocean lanes provided a fitter resting place for their adventurous spirits.

Roger Barton, his father, finding the atmosphere of England under the first Charles little to his liking, had sought fortune and freedom of conscience with those of his faith along the granite coasts of New England. The setting was well suited to their austere outlook on life; Puritanism, which would have languished and grown lax under the warmth of more tropic skies, found here a soil well adapted to its growth. The icy blasts from the north chilled alike the luxuriance of nature and the frivolities of the hearts of men.

John Barton was trained in a rigorous school. While a youth of sixteen he had seen the sea reach forth a gray and furry paw, to snatch his father from the deck of his fishing smack to the depths of the North Atlantic. This had not served to drive from the boy's heart the lure of the ocean: at twenty he was foremast hand on a coasting ship, at thirty first mate of a New Bedford trader bound for the fabled Indies. The prospect filled him with inward joy. Strange tales had come from these golden islands to the south, along with the cargoes of sugar and rum; tales, indeed, to fire the heart of youth in spite of all the outward veneer of mortification of the flesh with which training had surrounded it. The elders were not sparing in their warnings; Sodom and Gomorrah were recalled insistently to his mind; daughters of Babylon, children of the Evil One, he would find on every hand—their rum was excellent, but their morals were not to be brought home with it. The young man pictured to himself a veritable maelstrom of riotous existence, nor was the picture far removed from the truth.

His first impressions of the new world into which fate had swept him were by no means disappointing. They had made port early in the evening of an August day. The hot breath of the tropics rose in Barton's nostrils, thawed his austerity, brought a new spring to his soul. The Testament his mother had so carefully placed within his canvas bag lay unopened, forgotten even, now that the pages of the book of life itself were spread before him. The same love of adventure filled him that had before now sent so many of his forebears out upon the world's widening paths, to fame, to fortune, or to the devil. His mother had turned down many pages in the little Testament. The Indies, travelers asserted, were an ungodly place, her son would have need of spiritual consolation. The matter had been discussed more than once, between herself and Samuel Willoughby, the Thanksgiving's captain. He had been a lifelong friend of her husband; she placed her boy in his care.

With Willoughby, and their chaplain, a thin-lipped, bigoted old man named Uriah Cotton, there had been discussion of these matters on the afternoon of their arrival. They felt, perhaps, that some warning was necessary, that the young man entrusted to their care might not stray from the strait and narrow path.

'Tis no place for Christian men, my son," Cotton had informed him, a propos of their destination.

Willoughby gave a great laugh. He was a big, bluff man, with the free heart of a sailor.

"Right you are, friend Cotton," he rejoined, "though I find a goodly profit in the place. These bucaneering gentry live like princes. I've seen many lands, from Bristol to the Guinea Coast, but a wickeder place than this same Port Royal I have yet to look upon."

"I have heard," said Barton, eagerly, "that the country thereabouts is marvelously beautiful."

Captain Willoughby frowned.

"Ay, beautiful enough, to look upon, and black as the bottomless pit beneath. Women you will find, handsome as Jezebel herself, with hearts of flint; streets paved with gold, and not a drunken sailor but staggers under the weight of his ill-gotten doubloons, when the pirate ships come back from their cruisers. No city in the world, my son, so rich and so wicked. A godly man finds himself as much out of place there as would a mackerel in the middle of Fleet Street."

'See that you take heed, and profit thereby," Cotton added grimly.

"Only last year," Willoughby went on, "they laid one of my comrades, Salvation Green, a pious man from New Bedford, by the heels, and would have hanged him, but for the interference of their leader, Captain Morgan. As it was, they gave him a crack across the skull, the mark of which he'll wear till he goes to claim his last six feet of earth. Ten mortal weeks he lay in his hammock, babbling like a child, and all because he made bold to defend some wench from the blows of a drunken buccaneer. Beautiful, indeed, the Indies, but with the fires of hell beneath, and a good place to get away from as soon as the Almighty grants you safe passage."

They anchored just after sunset. Under a royal purple night sky, as soft and impenetrable as a canopy of velvet, the city of Port Royal lay like a glittering diamond crescent on the motionless sea.

With Captain Willoughby, Barton made his first visit ashore. The day had been one of cruel heat, when all who might kept close behind their thick stone walls, or within the shady confines of their cool green patios, but as night fell, the fresh breath of the trade winds cooled the scorching stones of the streets and gave to the place renewed life.

With a murmur that increased as the evening wore on, the town awoke to its nightly debauch. The taverns, of which there were more than a score, became crowded. The streets were filled at an early hour with parties of half-drunken men, and women whose jewels, gowns, and painted faces bespoke no honest employment.

Here and there, at some convenient corner, a swaggering buccaneer, scorning the slow methods of tavern drinkers, had set up his private runlet of sack or rum upon a pair of improvised skids, and was dealing out its contents to all comers with prodigal generosity born of a muddled brain and a pocket crammed with doubloons.

In the great square of the market place a merry throng whirled in a drunken dance about the slave block, upon which the musicians were perched. A huge bonfire near-by gave a ghostly pallor to the moonlight. There had been during the past week a great influx of the Brethren of the Coast from Trinidad and St. Kitts; an expedition of more than ordinary proportions was being planned, having as its object the capture, not of a single treasure ship, but of an entire fleet. Morgan, with visions of a new island empire dancing in his brain, was no longer content with the smaller ventures that had distinguished his predecessors.

When Barton crept into his berth that night, his mind was a welter of amazingly new impressions. Life seemed whirling to a gayer tune, against a back-ground of tropical beauty, picked out with gold and blood. He wondered what adventures the fates had in store for him, in this new epoch of his existence; had they been willing to lift even the corner of the curtain that shrouded the future, his cravings would have been amply satisfied.

On the following day, and for many days thereafter, the business of unloading The Thanksgiving's cargo, of getting it to the market place, absorbed his attention. He had become somewhat accustomed to the strangeness of his surroundings. Projected with amazing suddenness into this crater of madness, spell-bound by the contrasts it presented to the rigid life of his native land, he began by finding the novelty of the situation abhorrent, and ended by liking it. In other words, the spell of the tropics gripped him, as it had gripped many a stronger man before; he began to find the laughing faces of the painted women alluring, the open doors of the taverns, with their clamour of song and gayety, inviting. A certain protest against the iron bonds of his faith and training rose within him, even as his youthful blood sang to the tune of a new and more vital life. It needed but the chance meeting with Ramona to bring all the divergent forces of his nature to a fixed and definite focus.

Cough Nearly Gone in 24 Hours

Anyone who tries this pleasant tasting home-made cough syrup, will quickly understand why it is used in more homes in the United States and Canada than any other cough remedy. The way it takes hold of an obstinate cough, giving immediate relief, will make you regret that you never tried it before. It is a truly dependable cough remedy that should be kept handy in every home, to use at the first sign of a cough during the night or day time.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 55 cents and you have 16 ounces of the most effective remedy you ever used.

The quick, lasting relief you get from this excellent cough syrup will really surprise you. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

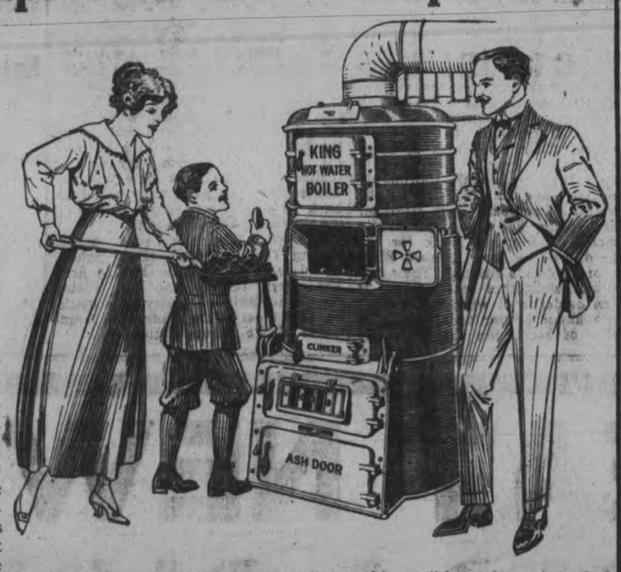
To avoid disappointment ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

The Simplest Boiler to Operate

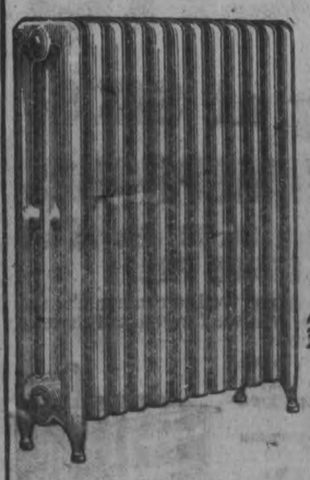
A Woman or a Child Can Manage a

KING BOILER

without the Least Trouble



A man feels an immense satisfaction in knowing that he can leave town on business and have the heating of his house cause no trouble or exertion or anxiety to his wife and family. Hot Water Heating is the most efficient and the easiest to manage. No Hot Water Boiler could possibly make a stronger appeal for preference than the



KING HOT WATER BOILER

It is well made throughout and the tight fitting doors prevent gas and particles of dust from escaping. It is so clean in operating that "ash day" has no terror for one's "good clothes" where the King Boiler is used. The King Boiler gives quick heat and that means a saving of fuel. Coal comes high now and it is important to remember that the King Hot Water Boiler will "pay for itself" in the fuel it saves.

IMPERIAL RADIATORS

The difference in Radiators in various heating systems is important. The Imperial Radiators have full sized channels and every inch of radiator surface is heating surface. In addition, they have a grace and dignity of design that make them more attractive in appearance than radiators have ever had before. Don't wait for autumn's chill to remind you—get your improvements for next winter's heating arranged at once—Do it Now.

MEN AND WOMEN TO EARN MORE MONEY

The most powerful single influence in greater production, and consequently in greater earning power, is the energy of the worker.

To work his or her best, the worker must be in possession of perfect health. So many who start the day's work with full vigor, tire as the day's work goes on and are forced to make frequent stops to relieve an aching back.

This backache is not due to the work, but to defective kidney action, and will disappear if treatment with Gin Pills is resorted to.

We have a number of testimonials on file from men who have had to give up work on account of backache, rheumatism, and the various ills that follow poor Kidney action. Gin Pills enabled these people to resume steady work again, with the vigor of youth and all the happiness of unfettered activity.

We will gladly send a free trial of Gin Pills to all who feel the need of this tested remedy, or we urge you to buy from your dealer on the strict understanding that your money will be returned by us if Gin Pills fail to benefit your particular case, accepting your word on this matter. Japanese Dinners.

In the matter of eating it is agreed that the Japanese cuisine is not of the richest in nutritive quality. It is no inexpensive; Japanese dinners are elaborate in preparation, artistic in presentation, but for satisfying the inner man are far inferior to European or even Chinese cooking. The chief characteristic of a purely Japanese dinner is to please the eye, not the palate or stomach. It is a national joke that one must eat a meal before going to or after returning from a Japanese dinner.

Oh, how much labor and expense are lavished on a gochiso (entertainment) to make it nice to look at! This is all sheer waste and luxury and is to be condemned. Providence has kindly put in the power of every Japanese to live in the most economical manner, so the Japanese dinner is a blasphemous abuse of providential beneficence. It is an anachronistic relic of feudalism, reminiscent of the morbid tastes of idle, luxurious overlords! A monstrous fact is that these customs are not going out of fashion.—Saito Man in Japan

Island of St. Thomas.

Commercially, the most important feature of our recently acquired Danish West Indies is the fine harbor at Charlotte Amalie, on the island of St. Thomas, according to a commercial survey of the islands by agents of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the department of commerce. This survey emphasizes the convenience of the harbor as a distributing center for all of the Lesser Antilles.

It lies on the direct line of communication between Europe and the Panama canal, as well as in direct line for vessels plying between the Atlantic ports of the two Americas or between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of these continents. It is 1,400 miles from New York, 1,020 miles from the Atlantic entrance of the Panama canal and 480 miles from La Guaira, the chief port of Venezuela. Its location commands the Virgin passage to the Caribbean sea, the easternmost gateway to that body of water.

LUX

An exquisite "newness" for all woollens

Far otherwise when you let LUX wash them. They come out of the wash with a soft, fleecy "new" feeling, as well as being absolutely clean—quite unshrunken, and quite unthickened.

How is it done? Allow 3 tablespoonfuls of LUX for each gallon of water, which should be near the boiling point. Put the woollens in and stir them about with a stick. Then let them soak until the solution is cool enough for you to squeeze the woollens with the hands—when the dirt will run out. Then rinse in 2 or 3 relays of tepid water and hang to dry.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Life Habits: Life is but a mass of habits. The motions through which our bodies move in doing a certain act, fashion in the nervous system a path or channel; paths which will become deeper in accordance with the number of times the act is repeated. If we observe the nervous system, we find how often so-called functional diseases seem to keep going just because they once happened to begin. Epilepsy, Neuralgia, Insomnia, and convulsive affections of various sorts, are examples of this kind. Joints that once have been attacked by rheumatism or gout, mucous membranes that have been the seat of catarrh, are more apt to be affected again.

Over-eating—the one habit to which almost 90 per cent. of us are subject—is one of the most disastrous to health of the body. Sydney Smith has said: "Some men dig their graves with their teeth."

Worry, worry, worry, is the habit stamped upon the faces of the American people. "It is not work that kills men," says Beecher, "it is worry. Work is healthful, but worry is rust upon the blade." "Do not anticipate trouble," advises Franklin, "or worry about that which may never happen."

Equally important as right eating is right breathing. Our lungs take from the air not only oxygen, but wisdom, love and vital mental power. The shallow breather literally robs himself of health, happiness and success.

Cleanliness is more of a habit than we at first think. The cleanliness of the mouth is most important. Cheerfulness enables one to change apparent misfortunes into real blessings. He who has formed a habit of looking at the bright, happy side of things, has a great advantage over the one who sees no good in anything. "Of al virtues," says S. C. Goodrich, "cheerfulness is the most profitable." There is good philosophy in the saying, "Laugh and grow fat." Without cheerfulness there can be no healthy action, physical, mental or moral.

The habit of doing a right amount of work each day will do much to promote life. When asked how he had preserved so well his strength of mind and body, Peter Cooper said, "I always find something to keep me busy."

We are beginning to see that the body as well as the mind has rights that must be respected, and are discovering that though the pale, sickly student may win the most prizes in school, it is the strong, sinewy one who will win the most prizes in life. A pound of energy with an ounce of talent will achieve greater results than a pound of talent with an ounce of energy.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from the readers of this publication, if the same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Most people will at the present time want to know where is the silver lining to the present war cloud that hangs over three-fourths of the people of the world, but if you stop and think of the wonderful co-operative plans that have already been put in action, and those that are in the making, you will realize that if this terrible war results in the killing of speculation in food and other necessaries of life it will not have been in vain. If it results in the permanent disarmament of all the nations, and the welding of all the people into one co-operative mass, all with an equal chance at the good things of life, then this war will be the greatest blessing given to man during the last 1900 years.

If you have anything the matter with you that cannot be corrected by a little care in your diet, tell the Home Health Club all about it, and I will show you the way to overcome it.

HER SECRET.

We occasionally meet a woman whose age is as beautiful as the bloom of youth. We wonder how it has come about—what her secret is:

Here are a few of the reasons:

She knows how to forget disagreeable things.

She kept her nerves well in hand and inflicted them on no one.

She mastered the art of saying pleasant things.

She made whatever work come to her congenial.

She retained her illusions and did not believe all the world wicked and unkind.

She relieved the miserable and sympathized with the sorrowful.

She never forgot that kind words and a smile cost nothing, but are priceless treasures to the discouraged.

She did unto others as she would be done by.

She never missed an opportunity to tell her friends and neighbours to subscribe for this paper and impress them that the Home Circle Department alone is worth many times the subscription price.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

THE OLD HOME.

Boys, do you ever sit down and talk for an hour over the scenes, and adversities and the successes of childhood? Do you ever take time to look back over the hill of life and call up the days of ye olden times when you were at home under the protecting care of a fond father and a devoted mother? Do the early days spent possibly in a pioneer home, ever occur to you as the happiest home of your eventful life?

These questions are for the "Old Boys," those who have passed the meridian of life and now are on the down slope, and who from natural causes, will soon pass into the unknown beyond, where they are to enjoy the rewards that come of a well directed life.

Boys, think of the old home where were father, mother, and the charming brothers and sisters whose whole aim was to keep home happy and make life a pleasure rather than a burden. You remember father's corner behind the hire fireplace, do you not? See him as he sits and nods in the twilight of the dim fire and dreams of the day when his boys will be Senators and will not have to stand the bitter trials of the dark forests or the treeless prairies.

Father and mother, brothers and sisters! The old home! What depths of meaning lie in those words. There is comfort in them. They recall the innocent prattle of younger brothers and sisters. They recall the kindly directed efforts of the seniors to secure the joy and peace that comes from the fraternity of home with its bonds of affection.

The dim old forest and the wide expanding prairie are there, too. The low mumering rill with its beautiful song is there. We were all there when we were young, but now we are old and all that we can do is recall, recall, recall.

Do this boy and see if you do not appreciate more fully all that you are and have. It is but just that you should affectionately look upon the past.

* * *

Sunshine in the lives and souls of people is just as potent in the realm of home as the sunshine that drives darkness from our world and brings that warmth which is essential to life and growth in the vegetable kingdom. There is a convincing and vivifying power in soul sunshine; for, as has been well said, men and women, youth and children, seek the friendship of the sunny-faced.

* * *

"The old woman!" A nice pharse to be used about the dear old soul who kept her vigil over you in your infancy, kissed away your tears in childhood and remained your trusted friend in maturity. Is this all the love you have for the silver haired mother who bathed your scorching brow all through the long sleepless nights of affliction, when your brain was wild with burning fever? Is there no other term you can find for her whose love has followed you through every trial, tribulation and misfortune of your life? Has mother, through all these years of labour, watching and waiting, been wasting her love on a worthless bunch of clay, who, in the rosy dawn of manhood has no other term more fitting than "the old woman" by which to address or speak of his mother.

* * *

Were we good we should be beautiful. We all feel this. There are plain fatures so charming with the sparkle of good humour, that we love them. There are blemished faces so sweet that they are pleasanter to look upon than the most perfect. After all it is in the expression that the actual charm lies. So that were some one to promise the secret of beauty for twenty-five cents and a post-paid envelope, he would scarcely be an imposter should he return the golden rule with instructions to learn and practice it. If we only could do this earnestly and truly for one generaton the next might wonder whether it were not a fable that such a thing as ugliness was ever known upon earth.

* * *

No boy, no girl, can ever come to be utterly bad who remembers only love and tenderness and sweetness as associated with father and mother in the old time home. Give them manly and womanly example, give them training, give them the inspiration of devoted lives, give them these higher deeper things. Do not care so much as to whether you are accumulating money, so that you can leave them a fortune. We really believe that the chances are against that being a blessing for a boy. But leave them an accumulated fortune of memories and inspirations and examples and hopes, so that they are rich in brain and heart and soul.

* * *

When a man has established a home, has a wife and children the most important duties of his life have fairly begun. The errors of his youth may be obliterated, the faults of his early days may be overlooked, but from the moment of his marriage he commences to write an ineffable history; not by pen and ink, but by deeds, by which he must ever afterwards be reported and judged.

* * *

A trade is a good thing to have; it is better than gold—brings a larger premium. But to make a premium, the trade must be perfect—no silver-plated affair. Determine in your mind to be a good workman, or let the job out. Learning a trade is different from eating mush and milk—mechanical education does not slip down without chewing. Never slight your work, never. Every job you do is a sign. Poor signs are against success.

Strong People Needed

The need for people to be healthy is urgent. Those whom illness has put outside the ranks of robust men and women feel their position keenly. They are handicapped in every walk of life and weak men and nerve-worn women need more earnestly than ever to put their health right and become active and strong. Many who began "patching" months ago are as ill now as on the day they began vainly tinkering with common drugs. Every ailing man and woman should remember that the ills of debility, nerve exhaustion, indigestion, sleeplessness, neuralgia, and depression come from a faulty blood supply. Worry, over-work or other causes have impoverished the blood and left the life-stream impure. The nerves thereby are starving and the whole system is languishing for new blood. In his condition many thousands have won back strong nerves and new health and strength through the new rich blood Dr. Williams Pink Pills actually makes. In a weak or bloodless condition it is not only a waste of time and money, but also a further menace to your health to tinker with common drugs. Follow the example of so many thousands by giving Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and they will transform you into healthy, active, men and women.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Boys are not naturally selfish, and every mother who has not a willing, efficient helper in her boy, is herself to blame, and must not only suffer the consequences of her mistake herself, but the future wife will have them to bear also. For your own sakes, mothers, and for the future wives of your boys, spare no pains to impress upon them the magnitude of woman's work. After they have been accustomed to helping in all the ways they can about the house, (and there are few things they will not be the better for having learned to do) they will not think housekeeping "just puttering around."

The Tie-On Blouse Continues In Favour

Fasnion Accepts the Button, Fringe and Tassel

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—New York, Fifth Avenue — and September! Could there be a more glorious combination? The very air is charged with magic. As we walk briskly along that wonderful thoroughfare, we view with kindly eyes the passing throng, seeing all the attractions and the human failings that are a part of this kaleidoscopic scene, happy in their happiness and glad that they, too, are alive. A well-dressed crowd is always a study in psychology. Here we can trace the influence of passing events in the nation's affairs; for the times, and the spirit of the times, are clearly reflected in the costumes of the women.

There are creations, marvelous gowns, furs and coats, to be seen, but about each there is a subdued elegance of good taste. Under the glamour of these snappy days, one can see the ever-present feeling of the seriousness of the war. We simply can not dress inappropriately when these happy-go-lucky youngsters in khaki throng our streets and act as our escorts to places of amusement.

Blue Serge Walking Costume

The Battle of the Bustle.

There is a restraint about everything, from the sleeves, which are long and tight in street costumes, to the skirts, which are narrower than last year, and which promise to be longer. There is one important question which has not as yet been settled. A fierce battle is waging between two factions, for the bustle and against it. After all, it is up to the women, themselves, in the end, and only they can decide whether a style is "to be or not to be." Fashion authorities may launch a mode, but if the women won't wear it—it dies, and something else quickly takes its place.

The Dress and the Suit.

At present, indications are that the dress and coat will be more popular for street wear than the coat suit. This is a rule that is easily set aside, and there will be many suits worn this year. Indeed, it is an American costume, and the American woman always feels that there are occasions when only a coat suit should be worn. However, dresses to be worn on the street without a coat, these first cool days, are holding the centre of the stage. Blue serge leads, as it always does, but tricotine, gabardine and wool jersey as well as the heavier woolen materials in various colours and combinations of colours, are equally smart.

The Tie-On Waist and the Straight Skirt.

The illustration shows one of the many clever designs for the tie-on blouse. The surplice line is so generally becoming that I, for one, am glad to see that it continues to be a fashion favourite. The panel effect in the front, with its braiding design is another feature. This dress was developed in blue serge, with the collar and braiding in beige colour. At first glance, one sees the simplicity of the costume, an effect gained by the absence of trimming. A dress of this type is equally suitable for morning or afternoon.

The world grows old, and the stars will cease to illuminate it and the waters to refresh it, and the mountains to guard it and its long story of sin and shame and glory and triumph will soon turn to ashes; but influences which started in the early home roll on and roll up through all eternity blooming in all the joy, waving in all the triumph, or shrinking back into all the darkness. Father, mother, which way are you leading your children?

I wonder what's wrong with my Tea?

My! This certainly IS good Tea

The woman on the left bought some "cheap" tea. You can see she's not pleased. She's sorry now she tried to save a few cents by buying the "cheap" tea.

How different with the woman on the right. The fragrance of her tea tells her how good it is. She paid a few cents more for Red Rose Tea than the other woman paid for her "cheap" tea—and besides Red Rose will prove more economical in the end!

Because of the rich flavor and vigorous strength of the Assam teas of which Red Rose chiefly consists, it will make 250 cups to the pound, or about a fifth of a cent a cup. So cheap that the very poorest can afford it, so good that the rich can find nothing better.

HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMILY

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Trouble Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

HATTIE WARREN

Port Robinson, Ont., July 8th, 1915.

"We have used "Fruit-a-tives" in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Now she is the healthiest one in the family and has no signs of the old ailment. We can not say too much for "Fruit-a-tives" and would never be without them".

EVERYDAY READING

The time is not now if it ever was, when men and women can be relied upon as being righteous, because they are religious or have their name on a roll book of some religious organization. The truth concerning who comprises the real church of God is possibly better understood to-day than heretofore, but needs to be made yet more clear. We must recognize righteousness wherever it may be found. There is need of a national repentance and a national acknowledgment of the supremacy of God. Who shall send forth the convincing call to the people to repent in this our country? Neither sex have a monopoly of right or wrong doing. It is saddening to see the ever increasing number of women who dress in an immodest and suggestive way. Many of those brazened-faced ones claim to be Christians. We see the immodest dress in the house, on the streets, in the Church, and especially in the church choirs. There is perhaps nothing in our nation to-day doing more harm than the immodest dress of thousands of our women, who so array themselves that they appeal to and awake the lowest and most dangerous impulse and desire in humanity. They give the mind no place of escape. In the school, in the parlour, at the table, in the store, in fact everywhere one is amazed and appalled by the startling and daring immodesty. And what makes it still more sad and evil is: Mothers are directly and indirectly, by example and authority, compelling their loved ones to dress in this immodest fashion. It is heart rending to see beautiful, pure young girls ruthlessly robbed of the bloom of maiden modesty. They tell us woman is doing her part in the uplifting and serving of humanity. We heartily acknowledge all done by the pure and noble women of our land. But why should not some of those pure ones more publicly and definitely cry down this blasting, blighting evil of to-day. The outcome of the increased continuity of this evil must bring dire disaster. Pure women ought to get together and pass definite resolutions of a practical nature, aiming at stamping out this evil. Fathers, husbands, brothers ought to hold indignation meetings; newspapers ought to protest. Think you it strange that thousands of our precious girls and boys every year are being lost to purity, and to all that makes life what it ought to be? We emphatically say, No! we do not think it strange.

Ths writing may seem to show up only one side of the evil existing in our land. However, we send it forth as an awakening call: Without repentance, judgment and destruction must come. Who will be a brave one and face this and other glaring and presumptuous sins?

VICTOR.

FRENCH AVIATOR VERSUS GERMAN SUBMARINE.

Not a week passes without some official note of the part played by hydroplanes attacking with success enemy submarines. In the course of interesting cruises ally pilots scan the sea in search of U-boats which are visible to the experienced eyes of the observer. The photo shows a French machine throwing a bomb on a submerged German submarine. The track of the U-boat can be seen in front of the exploding bomb.

The Ideal Car for All Seasons

WINTER cold and drifting snow do not mar the comfort of motoring in a Ford Sedan, the car that completely protects you from every weather at all times.

High winds cannot blow you "to pieces". Irritating dust and rain can be entirely shut out, while on warm, pleasant days the windows may be lowered, so that the air circulates freely.

The Ford Sedan is a dignified business and family car. It gives the motorist the utmost protection and comfort. Simply to ride in it, is to want it.

RECIPES WORTH KEEPING AT HAND.

PUMPKINS.

Canned pumpkin: Cut the pumpkin in halves, remove coarse threads and seeds. Cut the halves in slices pare and cut in small pieces. Place the pieces of pumpkin in a cheesecloth bag or dipping basket and immerse in hot water for a few minutes. Remove and quickly plunge in sold water. Pack tightly in hot jars, and place in rack in boiler. Fill jars to overflowing with boiling water, adding one teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Adjust rubbers and covers, but do not fasten securely. Add sufficient warm water to come to the tops of jars and sterilize for two hours, timing from when water reaches boiling point. Remove jars, tighten covers and invert to cool. Covering jars with paper will prevent bleaching.

Pumpkin preserves: Remove rind and seeds from small, sweet variety of pumpkin. Cut in small pieces and cook until tender. Drain and weigh. Allow equal amount of sugar to that of pumpkin and two ounces of green ginger root and two lemons to each pound of pumpkin. Cut lemon in thin slices and crush ginger root. Cover both with cold water and let stand overnight. In the morning cook until lemon rind is tender. Add the sugar and more water, if required, and boil five to ten minutes. Then add pumpkin and let simmer until cubes of pumpkin look transparent. Skim the pumpkin to jars, reduce syrup and pour over the pumpkin. Seal.

To dry pumpkin: Remove rind, seeds and soft part of pumpkin and cut in strips not more than one-quarter of an inch thick. Drying may be done by means of the sun, artificial heat or air blast. To dry in the sun is perhaps the most satisfactory, as there is no fuel expense, and no likelihood of scorching, as may happen in the oven or over a stove unless carefully watched. Select a bright, sunny day and place the strips of pumpkin in trays, protecting them from insects by means of netting. Turn or stir several times. Bring the trays in toward evening and repeat until pumpkin is thoroughly dry. Dried pumpkin makes excellent filing for pies.

WAR ELIMINATING WASTE.

British Cities Now Finding Comparative Wealth in Garbage Piles.

War, which wastes so much of the products of human labour, has, curiously enough, put a stop to other kinds of waste.

Waste fats from the army cookhouses, for instance, are now carefully saved and converted into glycerine. From one factory alone a thousand tons of glycerine has been obtained in less than a year from this refuse, enough to provide propellant charges for more than twelve million 18-pounder shells.

Portsmouth cleansing department collected in three weeks five thousand bottles, over seven hundred glass jars and even more stone ones, seven or eight tons of old tins and about four hundredweight of old iron, all valuable commodities as prices rule nowadays.

Hampstead was recently paid by a contractor £500 merely for the privilege of being allowed to search for scraps among its 25,000 tons of house and street refuse.

Southwork has installed a plant for crushing refuse, so as to form a poudrette, as it is termed, which is sold to farmers for manure at about half-a-crown a ton.

Many other boroughs have followed suit in refuse saving, with the result that waste products that were formerly burnt, leaving behind only more or less useless clinkers, are now turned to good account.--Pearson's Weekly.

The meanest men in the world are those who have allowed themselves to drift away from their mothers and forget all about them. The best and bravest men in the world are those who have never been so proud as when doing something pleasant for the kind old mother.

FROM among a dozen talking machine exhibits, from hundreds of other splendid exhibits, from a thousand interesting items, Toronto Saturday Night, one of Canada's foremost Journals, found the Re-Creation Concerts, given at the Toronto Exhibition by Hardy Williamson and The New Edison, in unison, worthy of such detailed compliments. The very fact that they were so impressed by these concerts proves more conclusively than words that The New Edison is not a "talking machine" but a wonderful musical instrument that Re-Creates the real music.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

A NATION MADE OVER

All Great Britain's Industries Harnessed for War.

The British army has undergone changes of a far-reaching character since the outbreak of war in 1914, and it now possesses many branches unheard of in pre-war days. Every resource afforded by the manifold capacity of this great industrial community has been harnessed to the war chariot, says a British statement from official sources.

There are certain respects in which the problem by which the British army is faced is unique; and one of the most striking of these is that it must be capable of campaigning in any part of the world and in any climate. In the case of armies like that of Germany, on the other hand, the problem of preparation for war was relatively simple. The ground on which the army was destined to fight was known; it was an army designed to do battle in a particular theatre—Europe. In consequence everything could be, and was, planned along certain well-defined lines.

In the present war the importance of field works was apparent at a very early stage, partly owing to modern artillery and partly to the confirmed entrenching habit of the Germans. One of the cardinal instructions given by the German commanders to their troops on first invading France and Belgium was—"make trenches everywhere." In fact all the continental powers had in addition to their corps of engineers large numbers of trained pioneers, organized in battalions, and suitable for use either as fighting troops or in the construction and maintenance of field works and communications. The absolute importance of the last-named can perhaps only be realized by one who has seen the roads during an advance.

But, while the continent was to this extent prepared for trench warfare, as was natural in the circumstances, it was otherwise with Great Britain. In the British service only the Indian army possessed pioneer regiments, these troops being always necessary in conducting campaigns in the hill country. When the need for this class of troops became evident, steps were taken to form pioneer battalions for the expeditionary force. From the first they proved their value.

The pioneers are prepared to fight or work as may be required. They perform such services as the construction and repair of communication trenches, fire trenches, and dug-outs, the digging of trenches and wiring. Their duties are manifold, and there is no form of usefulness at the front which the pioneer does not at one time or another find himself called upon to undertake. His activities range from carrying up ammunition to retrieving the wounded or holding a fiercely disputed trench or sap.

In the great advances on the Somme and in Artois the pioneers performed work of the greatest importance. The duty of consolidating the captured ground and connecting it up with the old front line of the attackers, largely fell to them. In many places they took part in the advance as infantry, in others they kept the advancing lines supplied with ammunition and water, and beat off counter-attacks. Their losses have been heavy, but they have accomplished their tasks in the face of every obstacle.

As a rule, the pioneers remain in the vicinity of the trenches all the time their division is in the line, and do not go back for rest, except at long intervals.

The pioneer is as yet a new type in the British army, but he has long since passed the trial stage, and has proved his worth and steadfastness. His metal has been tried in the crucible of war and very thoroughly it has stood the test.

Drunkenness Decreased.

During February of this year the weekly convictions for drunkenness in London fell considerably below the lowest level of 1916, and in many areas were reduced to proportions not previously attained. The Metropolitan police area showed a total of 409 for the week ending February 25, against a weekly average of 560 in 1916 and of 997 for 1915. Manchester gave an average for the four weeks of February of 30, as compared with 50 for 1916 and 83 for 1915. Edinburgh figures have fallen to 44, as compared with 75 last year. Glasgow had only 180 convictions for drunkenness, compared with 522 in 1915 and 319 in 1916. Aberdeen and Dundee are also s[illegible] factory. The general result is that [illegible] January and February, 1917, in the scheduled areas there has been a decrease of about 21 per cent. from the weekly average for 1916.

Dangers are light if they once seem light, and more dangers have deceived men than forced them.

"When you and your wife have a difference of opinion," said the father who was giving advice to his newly married son, "and you are right and you are unable to persuade her that you are right, you must compromise. To illustrate my point, I will give you a little experience of my own. One summer your mother wished to spend the season in Maine while I was anxious to go to the Adirondacks."

"And how did you compromise, father?"

"Well, we stayed from Friday to Monday in the Adironacks and spent the rest of the summer on the Maine coast"—Yout's Companion.

Health is the source of beauty, and every rule for beauty is simply a rule for health. A girl cannot have a firm, elastic body, a clear skin, a fine colour and bright eyes unless she exercises, sleeps and eats profusely and sufficiently. All these outward charms appeal to the eye, but how much deeper and more lasting is the impression when there is beauty of character as well. It is not strange how persons who seem plain and unattractive to the casual eye, seen often, become absolutely beautiful to us in their revelation of character? And how some whom we consider beautiful at first, when better known, seem only ugly and unattractive, because of some defect of character. Character will out. We may try to hide our defects but it is useless. We may deceive for a time, but ere long we are known and valued for what we really are in spite of all our efforts and pretense.

Ouch ! ? ! ? ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow and simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn stops the soreness at once and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any drug store but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millthis announcement since the inaugurlions of American women will welcome ation of the high heels.

Grape Jam—Remove grapes from the stems and wash. Separate the pup from th skin and heat the pulp over a slow fire until it softens and changes colour a little. Remove the seeds by pressing pulp through a sieve. Add the skins to the pulp, weigh and allow an equal quantity of sugar to that of the skins and pulp. Mix together and cook fifteen minutes. Turn into glasses and seal.

Grape sweetmeat—Wash and remove the skins from four pounds of grapes. Cook the pulp until soft and put through a sieve to remove seeds. Add the skins to the seedless pulp, and cook fifteen minutes. Slice cross wise through the peel and pulp one orange. Add the orange, two pounds of sugar and three-quarters of a pound of seedless raisins to the grapes and cook all together until as thick as marmalade.

Spiced Pickled Grapes.—Remove the skins from seven pounds of grapes. Put the pulp in a porcelain lined kettle and let simmer until softened. Remove the seeds by pressing through sieve. Grate one nutmeg add it with one and one-half tablespoonfuls of ground cinnamon cloves to the seedless pulp and four pounds of sugar. Let all simmer together slowly for two hours. Turn into smal, jars and seal.

Grapes preserved in sealing wax—Select choice speciments of freshly gathered grapes. Do not separate from bunches. Melt the end of a stick of sealing wax in a candle flame and completely cover the ends of the grape stems with the hot wax. This excludes the air and retains the juice. Pack the grapes in a wooden bax, separating the bunches from each other by layers of cotton batting. Store in a cool place.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Mattresses shoud always be covered with protectors.

'BOTTOMS UP' NOW 'SPURLOS VERSENKT'

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Although it is hard to believe, American diplomatists have a sense of humor, just as other Americans.

This is demonstrated by a new toast which is being used where the glasses click in clubs and in private homes, the adoption of a line from the message sent by Count Luxburg, German Charge d'Affairs at Buenos Ayres, through the Swedish Legation and the Stockholm Foreign Office, to Berlin.

"Spurlos versenkt," says the man who pours the drink, which translated is in effect—

"Sink without leaving a trace."

Pros and Cons of Ragtime

THE pros and cons of ragtime are still current. Charles L. Buchanan, writing in "The Seven Arts," is skeptical, though he admits quite frankly that he "enjoys ragtime as heartily as a good laugh." He admits that:

"Ragtime with its subtle, interior rhythms, its slouchy hanging back for the infinitesimal fraction of a second on one note, its propulsive urging forward on another, is the ultimate medium for the expression of a certain kind of action."

But enlarging upon the subject of nationalism in music, and the extent to which rag music should enter into the composition of ambitious themes, Mr. Buchanan remarks:

"To say that our future operas and symphonies will be written in ragtime is the equivalent of saying that our future poetry and drama will be written in the colloquialisms of Mr. George M. Cohan. No disparagement is intended either to Mr. Cohan or to ragtime. Mr. Cohan's gifts are as vivid and vital in their way as Mr. Paderewski's are in his. An equitable judgment does not emphasize the one at the expense of the other; it accepts both for their individual inherent worth. But it does not commit the error of confusing the relative importance of their contribution."

And again this writer is at pains to distinguish between American ragtime and the folk music, for example, of Russia and Scandinavia and of Ireland. To him:

"There is an irreconcilable difference between a people's song that has grown out of an unsophisticated soil and a patois of the pavement that has grown out of vaudevilles and cabarets. I should no more like to think that the American temperament was conclusively revealed and summed up in this musical slang than I should like to think it revealed and summed up in the vernacular of Broadway. . . . I like to think that the heart and backbone of this country are more accurately expressed in the rural, wistful lilt of this folk music than it is in the kind of sound that beats its brazen way into one's ears above the strident glare and glamour of cafes and dance halls."

On the other hand, in the same number of "The Seven Arts," the one-time musical prodigy, Hiram Kelly Moderwell, puts up an energetic defence of American ragtime. He speaks, indeed, with real enthusiasm:

"Some time ago a singer asked me to suggest some typical American songs for her programmes. She had done valuable service in introducing to American audiences the folk music and the newer songs of Russia, and was going abroad to perform a reciprocal service for America. She was to appear before audiences quite ignorant of American music and eager for new and vivid impressions. I suggested a group of the best ragtime songs. She thought I was trying to be funny.

"To the professional American musicians, ragtime simply does not exist. They give it no more recognition than if it were the beating of tom-toms outside a side-show. Not recognizing its existence, they cannot distinguish the better from the worse. Because most of the ragtime pieces they hear are feeble (as Heaven knows most American music is feeble) they lump the whole art in one and call it 'vicious' or 'vulgar.'"

Mr. Moderwell presents a typical programme of ragtime, which he submits to the mercies of "any singer who has the courage to use it." The groups are arranged according to the same general laws of symmetry which govern the preparation of usual concert programmes. Here is Mr. Moderwell's idea:

Novelists and Schoolgirls.

Scott never mentions a schoolgirl. Imagine Thomas Hardy fashioning a schoolgirl out of Wessex clay, or George Meredith venturing to describe Diana of the Crossways in those early years. Arnold Bennett would have created a little miniature old wife, as Van Eyck and Memling paint babies like miniature old men. H. G. Wells would depict her as incipient temptation to lead Mr. Britling, for instance, into one of a dozen romantic adventures. Galsworthy would try to fit her into an ethical system, into a niche of social justice or matrimonial ventures. Mr. Howells, one may imagine, might have essayed the task; but he would have tried to meet the difficulty of getting the right values—as a painter dabs blues on yellows to make a green—by adding to a primness, reminiscent of the Vicar of Wakefield, a few delicate hoydenish touches. As there is no such thing as a schoolgirl on the Continent, French, and Italian novelists do not mention her. Indeed the schoolgirl, as we see her, is an American product and modern.—H. D. Sedgewick, in The Atlantic.

PRICES ARE STILL ON CLIMB

Many Articles Have Advanced During the Past Week

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs will appear in Canadian Grocer this week:

Changes have been numerous in grocery commodities during the week and wholesalers remark that the upward swing of the pendulum seems not to have reached its highest point as yet. Changes made by the manufacturers and first-hand dealers are in turn passed along to wholesalers. lines in which advances have been recorded include canned peas, stove polish, metal polish, cocoanut, shortening, essences, baking powder, Epsom salts; sardines, salt, baking ammonia and oil of lemon, chewing tobacco, proprietary medicines. One brand of tomato soup registered a decline.

Provisions of various kinds are in firm market with advances recorded in a number of meat lines. Butter is in firm position, due to the rumoured possibility of heavy exports of butter this fall. Eggs held in steady market. Chickens were in good supply for the Thanksgiving period, but wholesale dealers found it difficult to get help to prepare them for the market, and in consequence consumption was not as heavy as it would otherwise have been. Honey gives evidence of greater firmness.

New prices on canned tomatoes and corn have not yet been announced, but the canning interests assert the pack will be short. Canned salmon is increasing firm market owing to the lightness of supplies. Canned peaches, plums and pears are reported in good supply and full delivery will in all probability be made by the canners. Sugar is a scarce article as refiners have been unable to get sufficient stocks of raw sugar. Flour prices remained unchanged except for Ontario winter wheat flour, which was slightly lower in some quarters. The Food Controller and milling interests have not yet agreed as to what the new prices will be under the regulation providing for a 25c per barrel clear margin of profit for the millers. Business in grocery lines is reported fairly good.

"A Happy Circumstance for Russia"

Philadelphia Record: "The government of the republic of Russia is the provisional government under a new name. It is still Mr. Kerensky. This is a happy circumstance for Russia because Mr. Kerensky is a man of patriotism and immense will, but it is not certain that he is any stronger as the head of the republic than he was before as the dictator of the provisional government."

When should you go out to tea and praise your neighbour's muffins, when you have forgotten to tell mother how good hers were? Why should you announce how much Mr. Wilson over the way knows, when father is a great deal better informed man, and it has never entered your little head to whisper quickly to him how much you appreciate his wisdom? You keep your ability to discover faults for the home while the eye that should look for virtues is closed tightly until you go out.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Wild West Girl Abroad

By DELIA BREWERTON

Helen Gorton was a ranch girl. She was born on her father's ranch and lived on it till she was fourteen years of age, then was sent east to school. She was no great student, not because it was hard for her to learn, but because she was pining for the wild life of the west.

At eighteen she returned to her home and resumed her former habits. She was an excellent shot and rider and could stand any amount of exposure. By a campfire under a tree she slept more comfortably than in a bed.

Helen was obstinate. When she was twenty and announced to her father that she was going to Europe to visit those countries of which she had heard so much he knew that it would be useless to attempt to stop her.

When Helen departed she was escorted to a railroad station some twenty miles distant from her home by a dozen or more cowboys, each one of whom would have attacked a regiment of wildcats to win a smile from her. When the train moved off they were drawn up in line beside the track on horseback and fired a salute from their revolvers, which she returned from one she carried slung to her waist under the skirt of her dress.

Helen first saw the old world in the Pillars of Hercules, two mountains, one on either side of the strait of Gibraltar, and laugled not many miles from the base of Vesuvius. When a month had passed she had not yet left Naples. She made acquaintances rapidly, but so unconventional were her ways in that land of conventionality for women that members of her own sex, even though they understood her and looked upon her as being a thoroughly good girl, did not dare countenance her.

This troubled her. Why it was that innumerable men were markedly attentive to her and few women seemed to care to be intimate with her she could not understand. One elderly American lady who realized her innocence endeavored to caution her by telling her that in a land full of criminals it was not safe to go about alone. Helen did not know what fear was and, misunderstanding the purport of the caution, continued to go about without a chaperon.

But one day her eyes were opened very suddenly and very wide. While visiting Pompeii with a party she overheard an Italian prince make disparaging remarks about "that American girl," it being plain that he referred to her. She was not only wounded in spirit, but indignant, the former feeling giving place to the latter. She had once confronted a grizzly bear, which, for reasons best known to itself, retreated on sight, but had been brought down by a ball from her rifle. She did not regard Prince Leonardo di Giuda as formidable as the grizzly, and she was not sufficiently versed in foreign ways to know that it was not considered a lady's part to protect her good name by a man's methods.

Helen concealed the fact that she had overheard the slurring remark and finished her visit to Pompeii without any one knowing that she was hot with indignation. On the way back to Naples she asked one of the gentlemen of the party, an Italian, what he would do to a man who had spoken contemptuously of a woman he loved and respected. He replied that he would call the man out under the code duello.

The next morning Di Giuda received a note written in a feminine hand and signed "H. G.," asking him to meet her in a certain retired spot that she named on the outskirts of Naples that night at 11 o'clock. Without the signed initials Di Giuda would have looked upon the note as a trap to enable some one to rob him. He was not sure the note was genuine; but, with his opinion of Helen Gorton, he thought it very probable it was. He decided to grant the interview.

At the hour named, well armed to guard against treachery, he drove up in a carriage to the appointed place and, alighting, walked into a field dimly lighted. No one was near, and, realizing the character of many of the lower grade of people of Naples, he kept his hand on his revolver. Suddenly a figure stepped out from behind a bush and, throwing back a cloak, revealed a woman.

"Signorina Gorton?" exclaimed De Giuda.

"I am."

"I assure you I feel highly honored at your request to meet you. What can I do for you?"

"Sign this paper."

She handed him a paper and produced a light from under her cloak by which he read it. It was an acknowledgment that he was beneath contempt to have attacked a woman's reputation without cause.

"I will not sign that," he said.

"Very well," replied Helen, stepping from him some ten paces; "you may draw. I will not shoot you down like a dog."

The man attempted to argue, but a bullet grazing his cheek admonished him that the case was serious. He would gain nothing by fighting a woman. He chose the lesser of two evils—he signed.

What use Helen made of the paper is not known, but there was a sudden revulsion in her favor. She was there after accepted by her own sex and courted by men. When she returned to America she married a ranchman.

Pitch.

The Hebrew word pitch in the authorized version of the Scriptures (Genesis vi, 14) is connected with "gopher wood." It signified in the first instance the gum or resin that exuded from that tree; hence it was transferred to all inflammable substances and especially to sulphur, which is found on the shores of the Dead sea (Genesis xix, 24).

Let An Expert Deal With Corns

Ask who makes it before you use a method for ending corns.

Harsh methods are not sanctioned now. Mussy methods are unnecessary. Soreness never need occur.

Blue-jay was invented by a chemist of high repute. It is made by a concern of world-wide fame as a maker of surgical dressings. Its action is gentle and results are sure. It acts on the corn alone, not on the healthy tissue.

Apply it as you wrap a cut finger. That ends all pain, all discomfort. In two days the corn disappears. Sometimes an old, tough corn needs a second application. But no corn can resist this method. It is sure to go.

Millions of people know this. At the first sign of a corn they apply a Blue-jay. Corn pains never bother them.

You will always do likewise when you see the results. One trial will convince you. It means so much, and costs so little, that we urge you to make it now.

Deal with one corn tonight.

B&B Blue-jay Corn Plasters
Stop Pain Instantly
End Corns Completely

BAUER & BLACK, Limited, Makers of Surgical Dressings, Etc. Toronto, Canada

How Blue-jay Acts

A is a thin, soft pad which stops the pain by relieving the pressure.

B is the B&B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe and makes the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

BELGIAN CHILDREN SUFFER BY PARENTS' DEPORTATION

All who have followed the daily news from Belgium must have wondered as to the plight of the little children.

So heavy has been the death roll among the parents, with thousands of Belgian fathers still in the trenches, other thousands in military prisons of Germany, it is obvious that a vast number of children must be in total ignorance as to where their fathers are.

And now within the last few months Germany has contributed a new horror to the situation by the deportation and slavery of huge sections of the Belgian working population.

As a very natural consequence there are tens of thousands of little Belgian waifs without father or mother even to guide them to the bread line where they may obtain their daily ration of a bowl of soup and a slice of bread.

Overwhelming as the situation is, every effort is being made to cope with it and contributions to the Belgian Relief Fund are being used for two special purposes. The first is the Belgian Children's Health Fund. This relates to children whose health has broken down under the pitifully inadequate ration, and enables the Dutch authorities to remove such children to Holland for proper feeding and care for a short period.

The second fund is the Belgian Orphans' Fund, and by means of most economical administration it is found that for every $8.70 contributed a Belgian orphan can be fed, clothed and educated for a month.

Full details concerning these worthy objects may be obtained from the local committee of the Belgian Relief Fund who will gladly receive contributions to the cause.

For ten years, said the new boarder, my habits were as regular as clockwork. I rose on the stroke of six, and half an hour later was at breakfast; at seven I was at work; dined at one; had supper at six, and was in bed at nine-thirty. Ate only plain food and hadn't a day's illness all the time.

Dear me! said the hearer, in sympathetic tones, and what were you in for?—Tit-Bits.

WAR BURDEN IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Oct. 12. — Besides the military organization she maintains overseas, Canada keeps up a considerable establishment at home. Coast defences have to be looked after at Halifax, Sydney, Quebec, St. John, and Esquimault. Again, Canada has the duty of guarding at home internment camps, railway bridges, etc., requiring a large number of men, besides hospitals and camps.

In addition to this, there is in home waters the Canadian Naval Service, which since war began has absorbed 5,300 Canadians as officers and men, with its associated services all under direct Canadian control.

Although far removed from the central seat of war, Canada is under the necessity of keeping up a healthy military organization at home because this is a world war and, in its many ramifications, may raise its horrid head from any point of the compass. The first guarantee of efficient activity at the front is efficient organization and perfect order at home.

Bathe Internally

Over 500,000 People Are Now Doing So

For many years physicians have agreed that the vast majority of human ills were caused by the accumulated waste in the Lower Intestine; that in our present way of living nature could not remove all this waste without assistance, no matter how regular we might be, and that the poisons from this waste circulating through the blood pulled us away down below par and were responsible for many diseases of a serious nature.

During this time the "J.B.L. Cascade" for Internal Bathing has, because of their recommendation and those of its users, been steadily growing in favor.

Recently however the startling news which has been covering the countr that great surgeons and specialists have been operating on the Lower Intestines for the most chronic and serious diseases, has caused Americans to become thoroughly awake to the importance of keeping this lower intestine free from all poisonous waste matter, and over 500,000 are now using Internal Baths.

If you try the "J.B.L. Cascade" you will find yourself always bright, confident and capable—the poisoned waste makes us bilious, blue, dull and nervous. Internal Baths are Nature's own cure for Constipation—just warm water properly applied. Drugs force Nature—the "J. B. L. Cascade" gently assists her.

Call and see it at the Warne Drug. Co. or ask there for "Why Man of To-day is only 50 per. cent. Efficient." A booklet of great interest which is given free on request. If you prefer write for booklet to Dr Chas. A. Tyrrell, 163 College Street, Toronto.

How The Czechoslovak Regiments Died

(Slav Press Bureau)

NEW YORK CITY.—On July 27th a despatch from Petrograd reported that in the fighting at Tarnopol, Galicia, three regiments of Czechoslovak volunteers, abandoned by Russian troops and expecting execution for treason at the hands of Germans and Austrians, resisted until the last the officers blowing out their brains and the soldiers rushing where shells were bursting the thickest. The Slav Press Bureau is now in receipt of a description of the tragic occurrence by a correspondent who is now in Kiev, Russia. From this description, the following graphic paragraphs are taken:

"They were betrayed — betrayed with those Russian divisions who did not forget their duty; traitors gave up to the enemy men who, forgetting all else, for the sake of the Slav cause, went to the front to offer their lives, but not to offer them in vain.

Who betrayed them? Russian soldiers? No! They ceased to be soldiers the moment they refused to fight.

How did it happen?

So simply and so quickly, as if it all were played under the direction of an invisible conductor.

The Czechoslovaks, unsuspectingly, stood not far from the front, resting. This rest was necessary because they had carried the burden of the offensive of June 19th.

At that time they threw themselves like lions against the Germans. Covering the barbed wire entanglements of the enemy only with overcoats, they climbed over these improvised bridges and, like a terrible wave, penetrated into the German trenches.

The Austrians called the June offensive a "Czech offensive on the Austrian front." Such a title was found in the "Vossissche Zeitung," taken from Austrian prisoners.

The Germans recognized in this article the heroism of the Czechoslovaks: "The Czechasllovaks fight like tigers," said the 'Vossissche Zeitung.'

"We shall revenge ourselves on the Czechoslovaks, we shall punish them ruthlessly," cried the Germans, but, at the same time, they could not deny that they understand for what the Czechoslovaks fight—what they are trying to get.

But there came terrible days of treason, and all hopes and dreams collapsed.

The message that something ill-omened was happening in the army, was brought by the Cossacks.

They decided to make clear the situation, but events came like lightning. It was too late even to save themselves.

From the front and from the flanks the shots rumbled. What could they do? In despair and anger, with clenched teeth, the Czechs threw themselves forward, refusing to retreat under any conditions.

But what may the most desperate heroes do when the enemy is several times stronger?

The terrible moment approached. The Czechs fought superhumanly. Only one thought was in their brains —"The Germans must not get us alive."

One regiment was surrounded—it was impossible to surrender because the Czechs—the former Austrian soldiers, then prisoners in Russia, and now revolutionists, could expect nothing but the gallows from the Germans and Magyars.

Officers were blowing out their brains—the soldiers were throwing grenades under their own feet. The Czechoslovak lions were dying—dying the death of heroes.

Only the Cossacks, bathed in blood, defended themselves, and in a comradely manner, rescued weak and wounded Czechs from the German lines.

The old flag-bearer, J. Heyduk, by escaping in an automobile, barely saved the flag of the old Czech regiment, the flag which had been blessed in Kiew at the beginning of the war. It was not yet known what happened to the banner of one of the regiments. There are rumours that the Czechs themselves destroyed it only to prevent it from falling into the hands of the Germans.

The remainder of the Czechs arrived from Tarnopol. There were pitiful remnants—in all one battalion of the former three regiments.

And do you think that their spirit was broken—that, because they were reduced in numbers they would deteriorate morally? Never! Seeing that no one was holding back the enemy, they turned around, and, together with the Cossacks, a handful of Czechs drove back troops of triumphant Germans for some miles.

"We saw," relates a Czech soldier who was wounded in this battle, "what the Germans did with our few prisoners who were unable to end their lives. They killed them. The Germans at one place hanged three Czechs on the branches of a tree.

"But we revenged our brothers. We had German prisoners whom we forced to take down the corpses of our comrades, bury them, and then the Germans were hung on those very trees. An eye for an eye! The Germans, themselves, made us so ruthless.

"I am a cultured man," relates the soldier, "I am a teacher, but I did not feel the least bit of compassion when the Germans were dyng."

The story of this wounded Czech creates a powerful impression—not because of these horrors of which his every sentence speaks so eloquently, but because of the enthusiasm which pervades him.

"Only a handful of us is left, but we shall fight to the end. We shall fight until others take our place. The Germans will pay heavily for the battles before Tarnopol! We shall be victorious! Bohemia will be free!"

Beautiful 1918 Maxwell Now On Exhibition

Without altering the world champion motor, the famous perfected clutch and transmission or the mighty axles, the Maxwell builders have produced a new wonder car, far superior in construction and in appearance to anything yet turned out by the Maxwell factories—we have this new and beautiful car—come and see it.

The car is larger and roomier, for one thing—the wheelbase has been increased six inches.

It is also a stronger and more rigid machine for the road.

The frame is now six inches instead of three inches deep.

And the body rests directly on this powerful frame instead of on brackets extending from the sides, as in the past.

Do you know what that means?

It means this: The firmness with which the wheels grip the road and the steadiness of the car at high speed give you a sense of security such as you have been able to enjoy before only in cars shackled with a battery of shock absorbers.

This New Car is 50 Pounds Lighter

There's a marvel of engineering for you, friends!

The car is made bigger and stronger—and yet actually lighter.

More than that—it means greater economy.

They mean greater comfort—greater economy, by lessening wear and tear on the car.

Maxwell Now Has the Style of the Costliest Cars

It has a sloped windshield and rakish lines never before produced in any car costing less than $2000.

We're proud to sell it.

You'll be proud to own one.

FOE LANDS TROOPS IN THE GULF OF RIGA

GERMANY'S SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN IS WANING

VON CAPELLE'S RESIGNATION PROOF THAT GERMANY'S SUB. CAMPAIGN IS A FAILURE

Other Evidences Trickling Out of Germany Indicate a Gradual Realization by the Public That Under Sea Boat Warfare Is Not Successful---Germans Unsuccessfully Attack French Positions on the Aisne---Foe Lands Troops on Island in the Gulf of Riga.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, October 13.—The strongest proof that Germany's submarine campaign is waning, is London's interpretation to-day of the news of the German Minister of Marine Von Capelle's resignation.

Berlin despatches, received via London, declared the man whom Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz, father of sea-frightfulness, picked as his successor in submarine ruthlessness, had formally asked his retirement of Chancellor Michaelis and that Michaelis had telegraphed this resignation to the Kaiser. The same despatches indicated that Michaelis himself was prehaps tottering to a fall.

The direct cause of Von Capelle's retirement was undoubtedly his Reichstag revelations of the German naval mutiny. The naval chief was blamed first for permitting conditions to exist in the navy under which such a mutiny could grow, and secondly, he came in for the Radical's displeasure when he joined what apparently the Liberal elements in Germany have begun to realize was an attempt at a coup to bolster up Michalis' fight for Vice-Chancellor Helfferich. Other evidences have been trickling out of Germany of late indicating a gradual realization by the public of the failure of the submarine warfare, despite the glowing optimistic statements of Government heads. One reason for the outbreak at Wilhelmshaven, according to one report, was the naval policy of forcing sailors to work in submarines. One Holland despatch asserted that a number of sailors who refused this hazardous duty had been severely punished.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, October 13. — The Germans' best friend is the Flanders mud. Its sticky slime, yards deep in places, reached out a viscid embrace to-day to slow up Field Marshal Haig's resumed drive along the Passchendaele Ridge. It was smeared everywhere. British soldiers bedaubed with it looked like gnomes grubbing in some outlandish ploughing of the field of death. To-day with the first objectives of the British advance attained and held, the troops began to marvel at their own achievement, considering the tremnedous difficulties this mud wallow presented.

The front over which Haig threw his men was along the Passchendaele Ridge from the rear of Houthulst Forest southward six miles. Passchendaele is the culminating point in the ridge of that name, and it was toward Passchendaele the British made their greatest advance, despite the ooze.

It was fair all day Thursday, but at 10 p.m. came a downpour of rain. There was no let up in this drenching sheet until dawn, after the British assault. Throughout the night the German artillery was active against the central and southern portions of the battlefield Haig had chosen, especially at Broodseinde, Anzac ridges and around the Roulers-Ypres railway. A number of gas shells were thrown over by the Germans between 4 and 4:30 Friday morning, just when the British barrage fire started. As soon as the enemy saw the attack start he loosed a tremendous rata tap tap of machine gun fire, but the German artillery was slow and erratic.

While the land soldiers wriggled and slid and fought through the mud below, the aerial soldiers, British fighting aviators, whistled through the air directly above the enemy, machine-gunning them along line after line.

GERMANS CONTEMPLATE ATTACK ON PETROGRAD

Have Landed Troops on Cesel and Dago Island in the Gulf of Riga and Outflanking of Russian Line Is Threatened by New Move

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 13.—The Germans have landed troops on the islands of Cesel and Dago in the Gulf of Riga, according to a despatch from Petrograd. This may mean a campaign to capture the Russian capital.

Cesel and Dago islands are at the entrance to the Gulf of Riga and provide easy access to the mainland over small intermediate islands. They are off the coast of the Russian Province of Esthonia. Dago island is about two hundred miles from Petrograd. Its position derives additional importance from the fact that it is almost at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland at the head of which is Kronstadt which defends Petrograd.

Cesel island is nearly one hundred miles north of Riga which the Germans captured recently. The landing of German troops in Esthonia would threaten the outflanking of the Russian line and probably compel a retreat on a wide section of front, if indeed it did not open the way to Petrograd itself. A railway line follows the coast all the way from Hapsall, opposite Dago island to Petrograd.

A CALL TO ARMS FOR WAR VETERANS ON MONDAY NIGHT

Every member of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association is reminded that the regular semi-monthly meeting will be held on Monday night next in the recreation room at the Armouries, and is urged to be present, inasmuch as business of the greatest importance in connection with the War Veterans' campaign for permanent headquarters will be dealt with.

This is a call to arms to every member of the club, and they are asked to put aside everything else for Monday night and be on hand ready to assist in this, the greatest task the Veterans have undertaken since they have been organized.

The big drive for funds is to start soon, and every member is expected to assist. Monday's meeting should be the biggest in the history of the Association.

Unfit for any duty	129

There were eighteen candidates examined at the Armouries this morning, nearly all farmers, and the squad was about the finest in physique that the local Medical Board have examined, no fewer than fifteen men being placed in Class A. Many of these men intend to claim exemption on the ground that they are needed on the farm. This afternoon's session of the Board will be a short one as the Board does not meet until 4 o'clock.

Yesterday the local Medical Board examined fifty-three candidates, making a total for the past four days of 210. The percentage of Class A men was high again yesterday, sixty-four per cent. of the candidates for examination being placed in that category. There were seventeen examined in the morning, of which thirteen were Class A men, twenty-one in the afternoon, of which eleven were found fit for the trenches, and fifteen at night, ten receiving A classification. Three out of the fififty three were pronounced fit only for duty in Canada, and a round dozen were rejected outright.

Davidson, who arrived home from overseas one week ago and spent his ten days' leave with his parents, 169 Charlotte street, has returned to Toronto, accompanied by his sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. G. Foley, of 81 Bertmont avenue, Toronto. Driver Davidson has been overseas three years, and one year ago, on the fourth of October, 1916, he was wounded in three places in the right leg and was buried alive with his horse on top on him in a trench, and

PTE. EBBS DECORATED

Peterborough Soldier Who Was Behind the German Lines For Six Days and Nights is Awarded the Military Medal

RIBBON PINNED ON

Pte. J. W. Ebbs, the Peterborough soldier, and former member of the 93rd Battalion, who with a wounded Canadian officer was behind the German lines at the outskirts of Lens, for a week, has been awarded the Military Medal for his share in the exploit.

His wife, residing at 129 James street, has received a letter from him stating that he was called out in front of his battalion, the 87th Grenadier Guards of Montreal, and the Military Medal ribbon pinned on his breast by the colonel of the battalion.

It will be remembered that Pte. Ebbs during an attack made by his platoon against a section of German trench was first over the German position. He dashed into a house back of the captured trench and found that a shell had torn a large hole in the floor opening a way into the cellar. Pte. Ebbs' officer was close behind him and as he reached the house, the upper part of which was occupied by the Huns, was wounded in the neck. Pte. Ebbs dragged him into the cellar and dressed his wounds. Then he cautiously investigated the situation and found that the machine gun fire of the Germans stationed in the house had been so deadly that the attacking platoon had been nearly wiped out. Worse than that the Germans had retaken the lost trench, leaving Pte. Ebbs and his officer behind their lines. They lived for six days in the cellar with one tin of bully beef as their only food, and were finally rescued when the Canadians attacked again and captured the position.

Pte. Ebbs stated in his letter that his battalion had recently attended the unveiling of a big monument at Vimy Ridge to the memory of the brave Canadians who had fallen at that historic spot. The Peterborough soldier was photographed in front of the monument.

Winter Has Set In On The Italian Front

UDIKE, Italy, Oct. 13.—Winter has prematurely but definitely set in throughout the battle front, preventing operations on a grand scale. Snow with high winds is prevailing along the Trentino, while the Isonzo and Carso lines are inundated by rainfalls until the valleys have been transformed into lakes of mud much like the Flanders battle front. The torrents here are so swollen that they often are impossible of passage. The Italian troops are enduring terrible hardships, but are ready to face any eventuality.

A HINT TO CITY BUYERS

It would be a great convenience to merchants and to the customers themselves, if the residents of the city would think ahead a little and avoid doing any ordering of goods for Saturday delivery, except in case of absolute necessity.

Saturdays the city is filled with country customers, and city people should, as far as possible, leave the field to them. If city people give or 'phone orders for Saturday delivery they will find merchants busy with country customers, and delivery of town orders becomes difficult, especially when scarcity of help reduces delivery staffs. Nearly all city customers, by a little thought can foresee their needs and order what they want before Saturday. By so doing they will get better service and delivery of orders, and do a great favour to the merchants. It seems to be only thoughtlessness that makes many people postpone orders till Saturday. This is war time and we should all work together for each other's good.

ALL CLASS ONE MEN ARE NOW AUTOMATICALLY SOLDIERS

Proclamation is Published To-day and Local Post Office Has Exemption Forms and Report Forms Ready For the Men Who Are Affected.

MAY STILL VOLUNTEER

The proclamation calling Class One to the colours under the Military Service Act, was issued to-day, and a copy of the formal announcement is published on page fifteen of the Examiner to-day. All men of this class, that is single men, widowers without children, and men who have married since July 6, between the ages of 20 and 34 years are now automatically soldiers and will remain so until exempt.

Post Office Is Ready.

"We are waiting for the proclamation," said Postmaster Edgar when interviewed this morning regarding the issuance of exemption forms. This morning Postmaster Edgar received instructions to issue exemption forms as soon as further instructions were received from Ottawa, or as soon as the proclamation appeared in the press. The arrival of the noonday papers brought with them the necessary authority and this afternoon the issuing of exemption forms was in full swing. No extra help will be provided at the local post office. A portion of the present staff may be asked to work a few evenings before the rush is over. In some of the larger cities it will be necessary to employ extra help to take care of this phase of the work. From now on exemption forms will be available at the local post office and those who intend to seek exemption should lose no time in meeting this requirement.

May Still Volunteer.

According to the latest instructions promulgated by the Department of Militia, voluntary recruiting will continue on its present basis even after the issuing of the proclamation and the handling of men under the Military Service Act, though definite instructions have been laid down with which Class One men must comply before they can be signed on. Any Class One man who goes up for his physical examination and finds that he is liable for overseas service in grade A, and that he is subject to being called out in the first draft, may still escape drafting by volunteering for the infantry; but in such case, before being accepted, he must produce to the military authorities his counterfoil to show that he has complied with the regulations, and must accompany this with a certificate from his employer that the latter does not intend to apply to the tribunals for his exemption. Any man who reports for service at once, without applying for exemption, may come under his head, and the authorities are hoping that a good many men, upon realizing that they are liable anyway, will declare their willingness to serve at once without waiting for the period to expire at the end of which they would be drafted. This is more likely to appeal to the younger men in grade A, as indications are that they will be the first to be called out, if only a portion of the 100,000 is to be put into uniform. As the information has been advertised by the Military Service Council that grades B and C men will not be called out for some time, the authorities do not anticipate any great rush from those classes.

Any man coming outside Class One, that is, from eighteen to twenty years of age, married men from twenty to forty-five, single men from thirty-four to forty-five, and widowers from twenty to thirty-four with children, will have the opportunity of enlisting exactly as they have had in the past, and they will have the added advantage of being able to choose their own branch of the service. Class One men no longer have the opportunity of choosing their own service, as all Grade A men are for infantry alone, but any man outside Class One whose physical condition might make him fit for the infantry will be able to choose and will be accepted for the infantry or for any less hazardous branch of the service.

RUSSIAN MEMBER OF 93RD ARRIVES HOME FROM FRONT

Pte. Zacho Who Was Popular With Officers and Men Alike Was Transferred to the 80th Battalion and Was Wounded Last March

S. M. I. SEWELL HOME

Pte. John Zacho, a Russian member of the 93rd Battalion, and one of the first men to enlist here with the Peterborough County unit, in August, 1915, arrived home from overseas on the 5.35 G.T.R. train, last evening, and was met by Mayor Duffus, Ald. Duncan and City Clerk Armstrong.

Pte. Zacho had lived in Peterborough for a number of years before war broke out, and as he has no relatives in Canada he looks upon this city as his home.

Although he could not speak very fluent English when he enlisted his grasp of the language improved rapidly and he was quick in learning his drill. He was a member of No. 1 Platoon, A Company, and was considered one of the steadiest and most reliable men in Col. Johnston's battalion, being popular with officers and men alike.

On reaching England with the 93rd he was transferred to France in a draft to the 20th Battalion, and was through the Somme and subsequent fighting with that unit.

At Vimy Ridge, last March, before the big push of the Canadians, Pte. Zacho was wounded in the hand and arm by shrapnel, and was invalided to England, where he has been for some time in hospital. He has to undergo treatment at Kingston.

"Not so bad," he said to the Examiner, when asked how he liked France. "Plenty of shells there, though," he added with a smile.

Pte. Zacho was driven in Mayor Duffus' car to the store of Mr. Abramson, George street. The latter had befriended the Russian soldier during his residence in Peterborough.

Pte. Zacho will be given a warm welcome home by his former comrades in the 93rd who have returned from the front.

REPORTED DEAD LOCAL MAN MAY BE A PRISONER

Canadian Soldier in Germany Writes to Red Cross to Say That F. Stanley Was Captured With Him on June 2 ot Last Year

RELATIVES HOPEFUL

Although her husband, Corp. Fred Stanley, of the 4th C.M.R., missing since the battle of Zellebeke in June of last year, has been officially presumed dead by the military authorities at Ottawa, Mrs. Fred Stanley, Stewart street, has received a letter that has aroused some hope that he may still be alive and a prisoner in Germany.

The communication was from the Red Cross authorities at Geneva, Switzerland, and was to the effect that a letter had been received from a Canadian soldier in Germany, stating that F. Stanley of the 4th C.M.R. had been taken prisoner with him on June 2, 1916, and that he had last seen him in a German prison camp.

As far as is known here there was only one F. Stanley in the 4th Canadian Mounted Rifles, so that Corp. Stanley's relatives are very hopeful. They are endeavouring to get into communication with the Canadian prisoner who wrote to the Red Cross.

Corp. Stanley enlisted here with the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles and went overseas with that unit afterwards being transferred to the 4th C. M.R. He was reported missing after the battle of Zillebeke, and the only information his relatives were able to get afterwards that he had been wounded during the battle. His brother, Lance-Corp. Horace Stanley, was killed in September of last year at the Somme. His father, Sergt. Wm. Stanley, and another brother, Sergt. Albert Stanley, are both in France.

The Examiner Contest Over In Two Weeks

The Boys Have Been Working Hard and Obtained Good Results

The Examiner Newsboys' Contest will be over in two weeks' time, and seventy-five dollars is going to be paid out to boys who have put in a little extra time getting new Examiner customers for themselves.

There are three or four boys who are quite close in the matter of gains so far, and it will depend altogether on how hard they work for the balance of the contest who is going to win. If you want to win the $25.00 prize, or any of the other good cash prizes, just get busy the next couple of weeks and see how well you will be repaid for your trouble.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

I talked to Private J. Cooty, a thoroughbred Russian, who enlisted in the 93rd, was wounded at Vimy Ridge, lost his thumb and had his arm shattered. He was on the train coming home here. "What are you going to do?" I asked. "I'm going to try and get back at the Huns again, if they only let me," he replied with a grim shake of his head. That's the stuff that heroes are made of. 1d

THE BEST EQUIPMENT.

The war teaches us new lessons, or rehearses old lessons with intensified emphasis. We never realized the wisdom and necessiay of saving as we do to-day, though the abstract virtue of saving has been recognized since the world began. With good reason we are conducting a national campaign of saving and, at the same time, learning the practice of thrift. Whether signing food-saving pledge cards is the best way is a matter of opinion. If we had for generations inculcated the lessons of saving and thrift we should have had a nation as universally edcuated in the art of saving and in the art of spending. We should in that event have had no necessity to issue food pledges; the people knowing how, and recognizing the necessity, would be food savers without special injunction.

Great Britain is learning the lesson late in the day, and is organized to do by stampede what the people should have been taught to do from principle. A special company of instructors is to be organized to teach children food economics.

Whatever principles and practice of economy and thrift are useful to win victory in war are of equal value and necessity in winning the victories of peace. In this connection, in view of proper equipment of our people for the best achievement—the best use of means to this end—the teaching of thrift and saving to the rising generation is most important. The best available means to this end is the Penny Bank in the schools—a practical saving educator and thrift trainer. The latest report of the manager shows that in the school savings banks of Canada there is a total deposit to the credit of the pupils of $392,303, and that the average monthly deposit per pupil in forty schools of Canada is 25 cents, or $3.00 per year. The pupil despositors could be multiplied to include, say, two million children. At the present average rate of deposit the total Penny Banks deposits would amount to something like nine millions a year, virtually loaned to the government at three per cent—enough to provide for a pretty liberal pension list for our soldiers when the war is over.

While our present work is to win the war—and God send that the new government will help us fill the bill—we must prepare for the future, which does not mean a year, a decade, or a generation. Money is the vital condition of war success; and money rightly used is the vital condition of national progress. If we have a nation trained in thrift—the right way of using money—we shall have the best possible equipment of success.

The percentage of rejections as unfit for fighting among 1,300,000 United States soldiers is sixty per cent. The rejections for the same cause in Peterborough among 422 examined has been 56 per cent.

TREAT ALL ALIKE.

In spite of ourselves, all who think, call and recall to mind the sacrifices we are all in some degree, making on account of the war. The sacrifice ranges from the supreme sacrifice—life—and the almost equal sacrifice involved in loss of limbs, disfigurement and disablement, to mere sacrifice of means and luxury and leisure among the home stayers.

Of course, there cannot be equality of sacrifice any more than there can be equality of service, in the matter of individuals, but there can be removal of disparity of sacrifice as between classes. The burden of it should not be allowed to fall upon those who are least able to bear it and those best able to bear it, not only be relieved from bearing adequa' and proportional burden of financial sacrifice, but be permitted to make great profits out of the agony of the war.

Upon this page is printed an article from the Toronto Star, which demonstrates the big profits made by several "big interests" concerns. It will be seen that these big concerns have not only made big profits, but have put by big reserves for a "rainy day." For the most part the big profits made are due to war conditions. Nearly everybody else is making sacrifices. The profiteers are not making sacrifice; they are making money—"hand over fist."

This is not right. The situation in regard to disproportional sacrifice could be equalized by turning over "excess" profits, beyond a reasonable figure, to the public treasury, by means of a special tax.

There is, however, no danger of this being done under the present regime. The government calls upon everybody to save and scamp in table and toilette—to eat sparingly—live on "bran mash" rations; in a word to sacrifice severely, in the interests of war winning, while the "big interests" that make great profits, some of them out of the food of the people, are allowed to escape with a trifling war tax, so absurdy inadequate as to leave profits of from 8 to 25 per cent., and leave surpluses of from $150,000 to $500,000. There's not much equality of sacrifice or service in conditions like these; there is grievous wrong permitted. As the Star says:

> "There is nothing to prevent the government from appropriating a large share of the prfiots to the public use."

We know from past experience the Borden government has been dominated by the "big interests" that put it in power. This is not an assertion confined to partizan opponents. Even a staunch Conservative journal like the London Free Press, declares in effect that "the government is dominated by the money interests." This fact, and similar ones, constitute the strongest argument for a union government, a government not dominated by the moneyed interests—a government not saturated with partizanship from core to skin, but one that will make the ground work of its policy and practice, the winning of the war; that will make the yoke bear equally upon all shoulders—the broad as well as the bov'ed, the high as well as the humble.

If the new "union" government now in the making, is worth its salt; if it places national interests above money interests; if it plays no favourites; if it administers to the welfare of the people and places every consideration subordinate to the work of war winning, Canada will be behind it to a man; and Canada will do what she has not been permitted to do in the past—her best.

It is claimed that criticism of public men keeps big men out of public life. If the politician had the pluck to stand as much mud as the soldiers in Flanders, he would be fit for his job.

A MUNICIPAL "MOVE."

The following significant resolution has been adopted unanimously by the City Council of Port Arthur:

"Whereas, the food situation has become acute to the extent that it is deemed that the success of the Allies depends upon the most strict economy of all food products;

"And whereas the women of Canada have been urged to use the most strict economy in their households;

"And whereas the large majority of the citizens of Canada have expressed their opinion in favour of the total prohibition of the manufacture of spirituous liquors, thereby saving to the Empire immense quantities of grain

"Therefore, be it resolved that this Council take an emphatic stand in demanding that there be total prohibition of the manufacture of spirituous liquor, thus saving to the Empire immense quantities of grain and other food products, and demand that the wishes of the majority of the people be respected, and that prompt action be taken, and that this resolution be sent individually to each member of the Dominion House and to each member of the Senate, requesting them to reply, stating their stand on this vital question, and a copy of this resolution, with a copy of all replies, be kept on file."

This resolution is significant, because it is, perhaps, the first example of a municipality taking the responsibility of declaring itself so formally and emphatically upon a matter of Dominion legislation. It is significant, also, as the only such stand taken to demand the taking of obviously proper and patriotic action.

The resolution of demand is strikingly consistent. How can the government expect to have respected its demand upon the people to save—to abstain from beef and bacon, in the interests of providing greater quantities for export, when it permits the destruction of millions of pounds of food grains that could be used in feeding more hogs and beef cattle, in the preparation of drink, that, in itself, is a great factor in producing waste of manhood and manhood efficiency?

The longest session of a Canadian parliament has closed, without the government introducing amongst other measures to help win the war, legislation to prevent the double waste of food in the employment of millions of pounds of food grains to make intoxicating drinks. In refusing to take such action, the government shows a deplorable lack of interest in a vital means of helping win the war, or an equally deplorable excess of solicitude for the big interests concerned in the profits made by the distillery and beer-making concerns.

Then, again, the government is at fault in not following the example of the United States in enacting legislation to prevent the importation of strong drink into prohibition provinces. The greatest obstacle to the perfect working of prohibition in Ontario is the permitted importation of strong drink. It allows access to liquor, which keeps alive the appetite for strong drink in the confirmed inebriate and promotes the formation of drinking habits among those who but for the facilities provided for securing a home supply, would not be exposed to the temptation.

If people would think about these things, they wiuld imitate the example of the city council of Port Arthur, and unite in a demand that the government should practice what it preaches, and purge itself of the inconsistency of demanding the last scrap of saving from the people while it permits a greater waste than a year of popular saving can overcome.

If the request of the transcontinental railways to raise freight and passenger rates fifteen per cent., is granted, it wil cost the people of Canada enough to pay the interest on the notional debt a year—forty million dollars.

Relation of Popular Sacrifice To The "Sacrifice" Of The Profiteer

Strength and stability, it is said, are shown in the report of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company for the year ending August 1, 1917. The net earnings for the year, after deducting enough to pay the war tax, were $569,747, as compared with $525,141 in the previous year. Out of the net earnings a dividend of 7 per cent on preferred stock and a dividend of 8 per cent. on common stock was paid. A balance of $142,757 was carried to surplus account, which now stands at $831,883. Like other prosperous concerns, this company is not only paying good dividends, but laying money by for any possible lean years in the future. The argument for maintaining and increasing the excess profits tax is strengthened by the reports which appear from day to day.

The Granby Consolidated Mining Company, having large copper holdings in British Columbia, pays a dividend of 10 per cent. It is also piling up a large surplus. In 1914 the surplus was $2,739,913, in 1916 it was $6,587,471, and in 1917 it was $10,790,305. Evidently this concern is not being worn out by war sacrifice.

The Ogilvie Flour Company has declared a bonus of 15 per cent. on common stock, along with the regular quarterly dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum—25 per cent. in all. In the previous year the bonus and dividend together amounted to 12 per cent. The milling business is in a fairly prosperous condition, and could pay more war taxes without groaning under the burden.

The William Davies Company last year made a gross profit of $1,827,000 on a capital stock of two millions. A profit of $1,279,903 remained after making deductions for depreciation of factories, etc. Mr. Hanna says that he cannot interfere with the profits of the big concerns by regulating prices, because that would injure the little fellows. But laying this aside for the moment, there is nothing to prevent the Government from appropriating a large share of the profits for the public use.

The Laurentide Paper Company increased its net earnings from $1,244,000 to $2,220,000 in a year. A sum of $268,000 was reserved for the business profits tax. After making this and other deductions, there were net profits of $1,720,000, which is at the rate of 17 per cent. on the common stock.

The Nova Scotia Steel Company earned $2,104,000 in 1916, after writing off war taxes, doubtful accounts, depreciation, and improvement of plants. In six months of this year its net income was $1,596,470. Its net surplus of cash and quick assets for working capital is $5,500,000.

A large part of these profits are made, not only during the war, but because of the war. The war represents not sacrifice, but gain. The effect must be to injure the morale of the people of Canada, and increase the prevailing unrest. Patriotism would be stimulated by the spectacle of sacrifices made by all classes. But at present the sacrifice is grossly unequal. Many give their lives. Others come back crippled, gas-poisoned, with shattered nerves, and impaired powers of application to labour or business. No amount of kindness or consideration on the part of the community can repay them. If profits during the war were seriously diminished the sacrifice would be light compared with that made by hundreds of thousands of men. But what we are witnessing in the case of these and other companies is either no sacrifice at all, or dividends paid out of human blood. —Toronto Star.

CANADA

GEORGE the FIFTH, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come, or whom the same may in anywise concern—GREETING:

A Proclamation calling out the men comprised in Class 1 as described by the Military Service Act, 1917

E. L. Newcombe.

The Deputy Minister of Justice, Canada

WHEREAS it is provided by our Militia Act of Canada, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, chapter 41, Section 69, that our Governor-General of Canada in Council may place our militia of Canada or any part thereof on active service anywhere in Canada, and also beyond for the defence thereof, at any time when it appears advisable so to do by reason of emergency;

And Whereas that part of our militia of Canada known as the Canadian Expeditionary Force is now engaged in active service overseas for the defence and security of Canada, the preservation of our Empire and of human liberty; and it is necessary owing to the emergencies of the war to provide re-enforcements for our said Expeditionary Force in addition to those whose inclination or circumstances have permitted them to volunteer;

And Whereas by reason of the large number of men who have already left agricultural and industrial pursuits in our Dominion of Canada in order to join our Expeditionary Force as volunteers, and by reason of the necessity of maintaining under these conditions the productiveness or output of agriculture and industry in our said Dominion, we have determined by and with the advice and consent of our Senate and House of Commons of Canada that it is expedient to secure the men so required, not by ballot as provided by our said Militia Act, but by selective draft; such re-enforcement, under the provisions of the Military Service Act, 1917, hereinafter referred to, not to exceed one hundred thousand men;

And Whereas it is accordingly enacted in and by the provisions of an Act of our Parliament of Canada, holden in the 7th and 8th years of our reign, and known as the Military Service Act, 1917, that every one of our male subjects who comes within one of the classes described and intended by the said Act shall be liable to be called out on active service in our Canadian Expeditionary Force for the defence of Canada, either within or beyond Canada; and that his service shall be for the duration of the present war and demobilization after the conclusion of the war;

And Whereas the men who are under the provisions of the said last mentioned Act, liable to be called out, are comprised in six classes of which Class 1 is, by the provisions of the said Act, defined to consist of all our male subjects, ordinarily, or at any time since the 4th day of August, 1914, resident in Canada, who have attained the age of twenty years, who were born not earlier than the year 1883, and were on the 6th day of July, 1917, unmarried, or are widowers but have no child, and who are not within any of the following enumerated

EXCEPTIONS:—

1. Members of our regular, or reserve, or auxiliary forces, as defined by our Army Act.
2. Members of our military forces raised by the Governments of any of our other dominions or by our Government of India.
3. Men serving in our Royal Navy, or in our Royal Marines, or in our Naval Service of Canada, and members of our Canadian Expeditionary Force.
4. Men who have since August 4th, 1914, served in our Military or Naval Forces, or in those of our allies, in any theatre of actual war, and have been honourably discharged therefrom.
5. Clergy, including members of any recognized order of an exclusively religious character, and ministers of all religious denominations existing in Canada at the date of the passing of our said Military Service Act.
6. Those persons exempted from military service by Order in Council of August 13th, 1873, and by Order in Council of December 6th, 1898;

And Whereas it is moreover provided by our said Military Service Act that our Governor-General of Canada in Council may from time to time by proclamation call out on active service as aforesaid any class of men in the said Act described, and that all men within the class so called out shall, from the date of such proclamation, be deemed to be soldiers enlisted in the military service of Canada and subject to military law, save as in the said Act otherwise provided; and that the men so called out shall report and shall be placed on active service in the Canadian Expeditionary Force as may be set out in such proclamation or in regulations; but that they shall, until so placed on active service, be deemed to be on leave of absence without pay;

And Whereas it is also provided by the said Act that at any time before a date to be fixed by proclamation an application may be made, by or in respect of any man in the class to be called out, to one of our local tribunals, established in the manner provided by the said Act in the province in which such man ordinarily resides, for a certificate of exemption from service upon any of the following

GROUNDS OF EXEMPTION:—

(a) That it is expedient in the national interest that the man should, instead of being employed in military service, be engaged in other work in which he is habitually engaged;

(b) That it is expedient in the national interest that the man should, instead of being employed in military service, be engaged in other work in which he wishes to be engaged and for which he has special qualifications;

(c) That it is expedient in the national interest that, instead of being employed in military service, he should continue to be educated or trained for any work for which he is then being educated or trained;

(d) That serious hardship would ensue, if the man were placed on active service, owing to his exceptional financial or business obligations or domestic position;

(e) Ill health or infirmity;

(f) That he conscientiously objects to the undertaking of combatant service and is prohibited from so doing by the tenets and articles of faith, in effect on the sixth day of July, 1917, of any organized religious denomination existing and well recognized in Canada at such date, and to which he in good faith belongs;

And that if any of the grounds of such application be established, a certificate of exemption shall be granted to such man.

And Whereas moreover it is enacted in and by the provisions of an Act of our Parliament of Canada holden in the 7th and 8th years of our reign, and known as the War Time Elections Act, that certain persons thereby disqualified from voting, with such of their sons as on polling day are not of legal age, shall be exempt from combatant military and naval service;

And Whereas it is further provided by our said Military Service Act that applications for exemption from service shall be determined by our said local tribunals, subject to appeal as in the said Act provided, and that any man, by or in respect of whom an application for exemption from service is made, shall, so long as such application or any appeal in connection therewith is pending, and during the currency of any exemption granted him, be deemed to be on leave of absence without pay;

And Whereas our Governor-General of Canada in Council has determined to call out upon active service as aforesaid the men included in Class I as in the said Act and hereinbefore defined or described;

Now Therefore Know Ye that we do hereby call out the said Class 1, comprising the men in our said Military Service Act, 1917, and hereinbefore defined or described as to the said class belonging, on active service in our Canadian Expeditionary Force for the defence of Canada, either within or beyond Canada, as we may, in the command or direction of our Military Forces, hereafter order or direct.

And we do hereby strictly command, require and enjoin that each man who is a member of the said class shall, on or before the 10th day of November, 1917, in the prescribed form and manner, report himself for military service, unless application for his exemption shall then have been made by him or by another person entitled to apply on his behalf; wherein our loving subjects, members of the said class, are especially charged not to fail, since not only do their loyalty and allegiance require and impose the obligation of careful and implicit obedience to these our strict commands and injunctions, but moreover, lest our loving subjects should be ignorant of the consequences which will ensue if they fail to report within the time limited as aforesaid, we do hereby forewarn and admonish them that any one who is hereby called out, and who without reasonable excuse fails to report as aforesaid, shall thereby commit an offence, for which he shall be liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for any term not exceeding five years with hard labour, and he shall nevertheless, if we so require, be compelled to serve immediately in our said Expeditionary Force.

And we do hereby proclaim and announce that for the greater convenience of our subjects, we have directed that prescribed forms, for reporting for service, and for application for exemption from service, may, at any time on or before the said 10th day of November, 1917, be obtained at any post office in our Dominion of Canada; and that reports for service and applications for exemption from service, if obtained at any of our said post offices and properly executed, shall be forwarded by our postmaster at the post office from which the same are obtained to their proper destination as by our regulations prescribed, free of postage or any other charge.

And we do further inform and notify our loving subjects that local tribunals have been established in convenient localities throughout our Dominion of Canada for the hearing of applications for exemption from service upon any of the statutory grounds, as hereinbefore set out; that these our local tribunals so established will begin to sit in the discharge of their duties on the 8th day of November, 1917, and that they will continue to sit from day to day thereafter, as may be necessary or convenient, at such times and places as shall be duly notified, until all applications for exemption from service shall have been heard and disposed of; also that men belonging to the class hereby called out who have not previously to the said 8th day of November, 1917, reported for service, or forwarded applications for exemption through any of our post offices as aforesaid, may make applications in person for exemption from service to any of our said tribunals, on the 8th, 9th or 10th day of November, 1917.

And we do hereby moreover notify and inform our loving subjects who are within the class hereby called out, that if, on or before the 10th day of November, 1917, they report themselves for military service, or if, on or before that day, application for exemption from service be made by them or on their behalf, they will not be required to report for duty, or be placed upon active service as aforesaid, until a day, not earlier than the 10th day of December, 1917, which will, by our registrar for the province in which they reported or applied, be notified to them in writing by registered post at their respective addresses as given in their reports for service, or applications for exemption from service, or at such substituted addresses as they may have respectively signified to our said registrar; and we do hereby inform, forewarn and admonish the men belonging to the class hereby called out that if any of them shall, without just and sufficient cause, fail to report for duty at the time and place required by notice in writing so posted, or shall fail to report for duty as otherwise by law required, he shall be subject to the procedure, pains and penalties by law prescribed as against military deserters.

Of all of which our loving subjects, and all others whom these presents may concern, are hereby required to take notice, rendering strict obedience to and compliance with all these our commands, directions and requirements, and governing themselves accordingly.

In Testimony Whereof We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Canada to be hereunto affixed. Witness: Our Right Trusty and Right Entirely Beloved Cousin and Counsellor, Victor Christian William, Duke of Devonshire, Marquess of Hartington, Earl of Devonshire, Earl of Burlington, Baron Cavendish of Hardwicke, Baron Cavendish of Keighley, Knight of Our Most Noble Order of the Garter; One of Our Most Honourable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Knight Grand Cross of Our Royal Victorian Order; Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of Our Dominion of Canada.

At Our Government House, in Our City of OTTAWA, this TWELFTH day of OCTOBER, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventeen, and in the eighth year of Our Reign.

By Command,

Thomas Mulvey

Under-Secretary of State.

Mr. R. L. Dobbin's Address On The Erection Of The Central Span Of The Quebec Bridge

4

Amongst engineers the name Quebec has for many years been associated with a great prospective engineering triumph. Twice the hopes of success have been dashed. Just ten years ago the south half of the first bridge collapsed under its own weight, dragging seventy men to their death, and causing a loss of $8,000,000. The investigation and discussion which followed destroyed the first project to its roots, and an entirely new design was developed under new leaders, appointed by the Government.

In 1911 a contract was let to the St. Lawrence Bridge Company on their own design, the now famous K-truss.

The new structure proceeded without important difficulties until September 11th of last year, when the critical job of erecting the suspended span was undertaken. You all know the result of the attempt, and will remember the shock that went all over the continent, when the wires flashed the news that the suspended span had, while being hoisted, fallen into the river.

One must admire the courage and persistance of the engineers and contractors in instantly deciding to proceed after such a calamity.

It is not my purpose to describe this evening the design or erection of the bridge as a whole, but to touch very superficially on the erection of the suspended span, of which work I was an eye-witness, both in 1916 and 17.

Before proceeding it might be wise to include here some figures pertaining to the size of the bridge. The cantilever arms are each 580 feet long, and together with the suspended span, which is 640 feet long, make the total clear span 1800 feet, the longest of its kind in the world. The famous Forth bridge, its nearest competitor in length, has two 1610 feet clear spans. The total length of the Quebec bridge including the approach spans is 3239 feet, while the Forth bridge is 5,439 feet long over all.

Cantilever arms, exclusive of main posts, 12,000 tons.

Anchor arms, exclusive of main posts, 17,000 tons.

Suspended span complete, 6,000 tons.

Main posts, each, 1,200 tons.

Erected by Hydraulic Jacks.

The method chosen for the erection of the suspended span was most ingenious and daring. It is the first span ever hoisted by hydraulic jacks, and is by long odds the largest span ever hoisted by any means. Its weight as erected was 4,831 tons, and the distance hoisted was 150 feet.

The span was erected down the river at Sillery, about three miles from the bridge, on a temporary foundation, and was moved to the bridge site on six steel scows. These scows were floated under the span and allowed to settle on the bottom at low tide. Valves were opened in the bottom of the scows filling them. When it was decided to proceed with the floating of the span, these valves were closed, and the scows rising with the tide, raised the span off its supports. Tugs then took hold of it and guided its course up the river until it was in position at the bridge site. Seven tugs in all were required to control it, as the current made by the tide was running up the river at a rate of about six miles per hour.

The operation of floating the span was timed so that the span would arrive at the site on the rising tide, and be connected to the hanger chains before the falling tide set in. As the tide fell the weight of the span was transferred to the chains, and finally the scows were released, and floated away down stream of their own accord.

The apparatus for the lifting of the span was practically the same both years, with the exception of some small details. The hanger chains were composed of links about 27 feet long, made up each of four 28 x 1 1-2 inch plates. The links were connected to one another with pins, and were drilled at six foot intervals to take the 12 inch jacking pins, except at the bottom where a slot 4 ft. 9 in. was provided.

Under each corner of the span was a lifting girder which was pin connected to the bottom ends of the hanger chains.

The chains passed upward through a set of upper and lower jacking girders to which they were alternately connected as the jacks between the upper and lower girders were operated. The upper are the movable girders, while the lower are rigidly connected to the cantilever spans.

The load of the suspended span was transferred to the lower lifting girders through a simple plate bearing, made entirely of rolled steel. This consisted of a key fitting in grooves machined in a pair of plates, one of which was riveted to the girder and one to the span corner. There were four of these altogether. The upper surface of the key was a cyclinder of 24 in. radius, and bore against the flat planed surface of the upper shoe plate.

This arrangement was necessary to allow for a certain amount of swing both traversely and longitudinally caused by the wind or the mooring tackle.

It was this detail that was finally decided to have been responsible for the disaster last year. That time a steel casting was used forming a seat for two pins at right angles to one another. It was of such a shape that it was impossible to calculate the stresses in it, and in order to be sure it was made of extra size. This caused no doubt internal stresses of such a magnitude that it collapsed under the load.

Each lower jacking girder, carried two 1,000 ton hydraulic jacks, together with the four auxiliary or follower screw jacks. The former were provided with rocking seats, so that they might accommodate themselves to any deflection of the girders under load.

The rams of the hydraulic jacks were 22 inches in diameter and were supplied with water by four air-driven, direct-acting double plunger pumps, 18 x 2 x 16, two on each cantilever span. The pressure used was 4,500 lbs. per sq. in.

The screw jacks were provided as a safety device in case anything should go wrong with the pumping system for the hydraulic jacks, or the jacks themselves, so that they failed to maintain the necessary pressure to hold the weight of the suspended span. These screw jacks were provided with counter-weights so that their operators were easily able to follow the upward movement of the upper jacking girders. The screws were 12 inches in diameter.

The hanger chains passed between cross pin bearing diaphragms rivetted into the jacking girders. These chains as was stated before were bored every six feet to receive the 12 inch jacking pins, while the cross diaphragms had holes every 2 feet. These holes were not true circles, but were oval in shape, having clearances of 1-2 in. transversely, and 7-8 in. vertically.

Each operation of the jacks lifted the span two feet. During the upward stroke the 12 in. pins engage the hanger chains through the diaphragms in the upper jacking girders. At the finish of the stroke the pins are entered in the diaphragms of the lower jacking girders to engage the hanger chains. The upper pins are then removed, the jacks and the upper girders lowered, the upper pins again entered, the lower pins removed, and the jacks again operated. As each 27 foot length of chain passed up through the upper jacking girders it is disconnected and removed. The jacking pins are counterweighed so as to facilitate their removal.

Hanging from the ends of the cantilever spans are steel trusses, hinged at the upper ends so that they can be swung back out of the way of passing vessels in the channel. The function of these is to keep the span in position, and counteract the effect of heavy winds. They were connected by 1 1-4 in. cables to the span, which ran vertically to the floor of the cantilever spans, where they ran through the drums of electric hoists, so that the slack could be taken up as the span rose.

The progress during the earlier part of the erection of the span was about the same this year as last. The span was floated safely about 6 a.m. and after an uneventful trip up the river was safely connected to the hanger chains about 9.00 a.m. Jacking commenced at once, and by 10.30 the scows had floated free. This was about a half an hour ahead this year than last year, as the scows were released about 10.00 o'clock in 1916.

How the 1916 Span Fell.

In 1916, five lifts had been taken on the north end, and six on the south end, when something gave way, and the span sank into the river in a few seconds. The south-west end sank first, and it was afterwards determined that the bearing casting at this end failed. In doing so it kicked out the supporting girder from under it, dropping the corner of the span into the river, starting transverse rotation of the whole south end, finally ending in the sinking of the whole span.

As it fell it turned over to the west, and plunged to the bottom of the river, where it lies a mass of twisted steel, 200 feet below the river surface. As the load was suddenly released from the ends of the cantilever arms these whipped back and forth to a maximum distance of about 18 in., throwing everybody on the spans off their feet. These vibrations lasted for some seconds, then gradually subsided, leaving the anchor and cantilever spans in same condition as before they had taken the weight of the suspended span. It has been established by close inspection that these parts of the bridge were apparently uninjured in any manner after having been subjected to a great deal more severe strain than they will ever be subjected to in service.

Work was immediately started on another span to replace the lost one, and it was completed in 10 1-2 months, no mean feat in itself when one considers that in addition to the fabrication of the span, all the steel had to be specially rolled, it being nickle steel.

This year the jacking proceeded without accident. Altogether 12 lifts were made the first day, and then the span was anchored for the night with heavy tackle to the mooring trusses. It had been decided to work only during daylight, differing from last year in this respect.

22 lifts were made on Tuesday and 26 on Wednesday. The fine weather which had prevailed up to that time now changed and Thursday morning the wind had risen to 25 miles per hour. This did not stop the work, however, although it caused considerable deflection in the span from the vertical. When the span was hanging free, the wind held it from 5 to 7 inches off the centre.

The balance of the 75 lifts necessary for the whole job were made and the hoisting completed at 4.00 p.m. with all the pins driven connecting the upper and lower sets of permanent eyebars.

It is expected that the first train to pass over the bridge will be about th end of the month

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

THE WAR COUNCIL

Speculation at Ottawa as to the Personnel of This Important Body —Borden, White, Meighen and Mewburn Considered Certainties

NO FINAL DECISION

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.— Union government is slated to move another step forward to-day with the swearing in of Mr. Frank B. Carvell, and that will be about all. Hon. J. A. Murray's entrance to the ministry is likely, but not yet certain. He will further consult his eastern friends and will probably join the ministery early next week.

There is considerable speculation as to who will form the war council, but two members of the government stated definitely to-day that no final decision has been reached. It is indicated, however, that all other things being equal, the east, centre and west of Canada will be represented on the new body in as equal proportion as possible. The four ablest Conservatives in the ministry are Messrs. Borden, Meighen, White and Foster. Sir Robert is an easterner, so is Sir Geo. Foster, though he sits at present from Toronto. As the Premier will undoubtedly have a place on the Council, Sir George is thus eliminated. That leaves White and Meighen. White is an Ontario man, and as Finance Minister would be entitled to a place anyway. Meighen is Borden's right hand man and a westerner. If Borden, White and Meighen are the three finally chosen, the east, centre and west will be represented.

PICKING THE LIBERALS.

Picking the Liberals is a more difficult task. Rowell and Mewburn are both Ontario men, and the Minister of Militia will naturally be on the Council of War. It is noted, however, that Mr. Rowell's position in the cabinet does not involve the administration of a department, and thus he would be free for Council duties. From the west Messrs. Sifton and Calder are available, and the former would probably have the preference. From the east as between Messrs. Carvell and Murray, Carvell is the likely choice. Mr. Murray, if he comes into the government, does so somewhat reluctantly, and has a physical handicap which may somewhat limit his activities. A friend said of him today: "He is a slow thinker, but a very sure one. When he makes up his mind it is after much deliberation, and he is then as firm as the rock of Gibraltar."

Members of the Government said today that they knew nothing of Sir George Foster going to the Senate except what they had read in the newspapers. It is, however, not unlikely that Sir George will run in an eastern constituency, thus leaving his Toronto riding to a newcomer. It may be significant that one of his constituents is N. W. Rowell. The way would thus be opened for Mr. Rowell to seek election in the riding which Mr. Foster now represents.

FIRST AND PARAMOUNT ASSURE SECURITY TO POLICYHOLDERS

"Perhaps I'll take out a policy next year", you say.

Your life is just as uncertain during this year as it will be later. Don't leave your family's future in doubt for another day.

Twice recently we've seen instances of men who have died within a year of their having been solicited for life assurance.

In one case the man put the matter off—to-day his widow is almost penniless. The other man purchased a policy—paid only one premium—and his widow received three thousand dollars. Comment is unnecessary.

We've a booklet called "The Creation of an Estate"—that we'd like to send you —if you've interest enough to write for it.

SERGT.-MAJOR SEWELL.

Sergt.-Major Instructor Sam Sewell who, before he enlisted, was employed with B. F. Ackerman & Co., arrived home last night on a six months' sick furlough. He was welcomed on behalf of the city by Ald. G. H. Duncan.

Sergt.-Major Instructor Sewell enlisted here with B Squadron, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, and went overseas with that unit. When the 8th was broken up he was transferred to the Canadian Ordnance Corps at Ashford, and has been in charge of a large military workshop employing saddlers, shoemakers and tent makers. He was successful in passing the examination as Artificer Staff Sergeant, and for some time has been acting as Sergeant Major Instructor.

Sergt.-Major Sewell's wife and family are at present in England, where they went after he went overseas, but he expects them back in Peterborough before long. When he left England his wife had received word to be ready to sail at twenty-four hours' notice.

Sergt.-Major Sewell speaks very highly of the treatment accorded the returned soldiers at Halifax. "The Red Cross people were splendid," he told the Examiner.

Justice Masten Satisfied That Wilson's Invalid Port Has Been Used as a Beverage

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Oct. 13.—Mr. Justice Masten to-day dismissed the motion to quash the conviction of the Warne Drug Co. of Peterborough for the sale of Wilson's Invalid Port Wine, as a contravention of the Ontario Temperance Act. In doing so Justice Masten stated he "was satisfied that the compound in question is capable of being used as a beverage and has actually been used as such."

GRAND WORK OF THE PETERBORO' BRANCH OF CANADIAN RED CROSS

With the multiplicity of worthy objects for which funds have been provided by the citizens of Peterborough for the past three years, one organization stands out prominently in Peterborough as having done a grand work for the soldiers overseas.

The Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Red Cross is one of the best organized institutions found necessary as a result of the war. The active work is taken care of by an enthusiastic committee of women aided in the financial end of the work by an Advisory Board of men from different walks of life in the city.

The work accomplished by the women is wonderful. The money subscribed is used throughout the year to purchase materials necessary for the making of field comforts and hospital supplies for the Peterborough boys at the front. Case after case of things necessary are made here and sent overseas, and many a Peterborough wounded boy at the front has had comforts that it might not be possible to have were it not for the work of the ladies of the Peterborough Red Cross Association.

There is a number of Red Crose institutions in the city doing excellent work, the majority of which work with the Peterborough Branch is forwarding their supplies, but the latter is the parent body, and has assumed and taken care of a great responsibility.

It is about this time of the year that the appeal for funds to carry on this great work is made, and there is no doubt but that the efforts of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Red Cross is so well recognized by the citizens of the city as being essential to the care and comforts of our boys overseas as to make it possible for the Council to realize any objective the Committee might feel is necessary to finance this noble work.

Lieut.-Col. Mills In Command Of 57th Regiment

Has Taken Over the Stores and Armouries To-day

Lieut.-Col. Gillespie, of the staff of the D.A.A. and Q.M.G., No. 3 Military District, and Lieut. Hughes, officer in charge of barracks, were in Peterborough to-day for the purpose of turning over the Militia stores and the Armouries to Lieut.-Col. Joseph Mills, the new commanding officer of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers.

Lieut.-Col. Mills was the senior major of the 57th Regiment before going overseas with the 2nd Battalion. Lieut.-Col. Clegg, the O.C. of the 57th, went overseas at the same time, and both these officers were seconded the command of the battalion, falling upon Lieut.-Col. Walker. Both Lieut.-Cols. Mills and Clegg are now home, but as the latter's term of office as commanding officer of the Rangers has expired, Lieut.-Col. Mills now takes over the command, and is now in charge at the Armouries.

Boy In Court For Theft Of Basket Of Grapes

The small boys of East City have been giving more or less trouble to residents and merchants over the river. One of them pedaled up to Anthony's fruit store on a bicycle, picked up a basket of grapes and made off to the gang with the spoils they had dared him to take. This morning found him in Police Court, where his bravado cost him $3.70, of which 35 cents represented the value of the grapes, and the remainder was charged to the cost of doing police business.

TO REMOVE FIRST SIGNS OF OLD AGE

"The infallible first sign of age is the sagging cheek muscles," says Mme. Cavalieri, whose fame as a beauty culturist is scarcely less than that of a song-stress. "These are more difficult and serious to treat than wrinkles," she continues. "The sagging muscles indicate they have grown too weak to remain in place; they must be assisted, strengthened."

The best way to strengthen them is by bathing the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. This creates a freer circulation to the parts, besides causing muscles and skin to contract. Saxolite, procurable at every drug store, has long been known by complexion specialists to possess remarkable tonic and astringent properties, valuable in treating flabby tissue and wrinkles.

BRITAIN IS READY NOW FOR REPRISAL RAIDS

Canadian Press Despatch:

LONDON, Oct. 13.— The morning newspapers suggest that the government is ready to begin carrying out reprisal air raids on Germany. This belief is based on the assignment of Lieut. David Henderson, Director-General of military aeronautics to special work and the sending of Major General W. S. Brancker, director of the aero organization for the army, to a command abroad.

KERNESKY IS CONFINED TO HIS BED

Russian Premier However is Not Thought to Be Dangerously Ill

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Oct. 13. — Premier Kerensky is slightly ill and has been confined to his bed since his arrival at General Staff Headquarters at Mehilev. The Premier is reported to be in no danger. He telephoned to-day to Vice Premier Konovaloff saying that he was much pleased over the condition of the army, in which there was much better feeling between the officers and men. The Premier expects to visit all fronts before returning to Petrograd.

COWAN'S COCOA—
"Perfection Brand" Purest and Best

"EVERYWOMAN"

A story as old as time itself when the first race children lived their loves—a drama as new as the unfolding of the future, is coming to The Grand Opera House next Saturday, October 20.

No play in recent years has reached the same high and undisputed heights as "Everywoman," the mighty spectacle which Henry W. Savage is offering to our theatregoers.

The story of the pursuit of love—the story, indeed, of every woman—is this exquisite blend of drama, poem and opera, with its subtle philosophy running like a fresh current beneath the shifting scenes of human life.

Symphonic music of colour and beauty forms a rare and charming setting for this quest of love in drama form. Scenic effects of beauty and picturesque naturalness, going overseas with the 2nd Battalion to the splendid production. Simple idyl of everywoman's home, riotous rehearsal on a bare theatre stage, luxurious banquet scene in the new home of "Everywoman," the actors mass swirling scene on the gay white way on New Year's Eve—all these are the back-grounds for that quest of "Everywoman."

Indeed, the appeal of this unique play is one of so broad a nature that only a soul utterly dead could fail to catch its throbbing human cry. Pathos, humor, comedy, tragedy, satire and wit, lights and shades, cast their varying influences through the play.

Entertained as one is—for "Everywoman" is far from being a dreary or tedious preachment—the lesson carried across the footlights is, in our material times, a priceless gift. As the old moralities live in literature, so "Everywoman" will endure in the history of the drama, for it is a thing apart from the average output for the stage, the lines—the verses are exquisite. There is no cheap sentimentality. Indeed the announcement that "'Everywoman' is the supreme dramatic achievement of the age" is not exaggeration.

There are so many characters, all capably portrayed, that enumeration is almost impossible, for every phase and tendency and emotion of human life passes before the footlights. Then, too, there are choruses and choruses.

Indeed "Everywoman" with its fine appeal to the better nature of humanity; with its interest for those who love swirling colour and artistic effects, is a splendid production, such costumes lavish and rich—offer their claim to favour is manifold.

Henry W. Savage has given the drama a wonderful staging. George Whitefield Chadwick has written exquisite music, and through all there breathes the genius of the author, Walter Brown, who begs us through the lines of "Nobody":

"Be merciful, be just, be fair,
To every woman every where,
Her faults are many. Nobody's to blame."

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAS. SUTHERLAND)

"Jacob's Vision," Genesis 32nd Chap.

Jacob and Saban after an angry parley, they part as friends, God is often better to us than our fears, and strangely overrules the spirits of men in our favour beyond what we could have expected; for it is not in vain to trust in him. As Jacob journeyed on the Angels of God met him in some visible and glorious appearance to encourage him with the assurance of the Divine protection, especially from the power and anger of Esau. They had invisibly attended him all along, but now they appeared to him, when he had greater dangers before him, than those he had hitherto encountered, when God designs his people for extraordinary trials, he prepares them by extraordinary comforts. Jacob sends a kind and humble message to Esau. While Jacob to whom the promise belonged, had been in hard service Esau had become a Prince and had established his authority in Mount Seir, which was afterwards called by his name. He calls Esau his lord, himself Esau's servant, to intimate that he did not insist upon the pervogatives of the birthright and blessing he had obtained for himself, but left it to God to fulfill his own purposes in his seed. Yielding pacifies great offences—Eccl. 10-4. We must not refuse to speak in a respectful and submissive manner, even to those who are unjustly exasperated against us. We have every reason to think that Esau's resentment revived at this message, and that he set out with malicious intentions, though God suffered him not to fulfill them. Jacob received a very formidable account of Esau's warlike preparations against him, and though a man of great faith, yet he was now greatly afraid. A lively apprehension of danger, and quickening fear arising from it, may be found with humble confidence in God's power and promise. Christ himself in his agony was sore amazed. Times of fear should be times of prayer; whatever frighten us, should drive us to our knees and to God. Jacob had lately seen his guard of angels, but in this distress he applies himself to God, not to them, he knew they were his fellow-servants. Rev. 22-9. Nor did he consult Saban's tirap him; it was enough to him that he had a God to go to. This prayer is the more remarkable, because it won him the honour of being an Israel, a prince with God, and the father of the praying remnant, who from hence are called the seed of Jacob to whom God never said; Seek ye my face in vain. There cannot be a finer model for genuine prayer than this. Here is a thankful acknowledgment of former unmerited favours; a humble confession of entire unworthiness, an unaffected description of his fears and distress, an unreserved reference to the Lord, renouncing all other dependency, and resting all his hopes on him. There is an explicit mention of the very words, both of the Lord's promises and commands, as pleading for him, and engaging the glory of God on his behalf. The best we can say to God in prayer, is what he has said to us. God's promises, as they are the surest guide of our desires in prayer and furnish us with the best petitions, so they are the firmest ground of our hopes, and furnish us with the best pleas. Lord, we depend on the word thou saidst, the word upon which thou hast caused me to hope. Psa. 119, 49. There is more anxiety in Jacob for the preservation of his family than himself, but especially of his children, in whose lives the promises seemed chiefly concerned. These things should be noticed by us, and imitated when we approach the Lord in prayer. Thus he made the name of the Lord his strong tower and could not but be safe. Two things, it is evident, Jacob pleaded in this very great distress; one was the covenant that God made with Abraham, that is, the covenant of grace, also he appeals to the particular engagement he had himself male unto God. He pleaded these two things in this his greatest distress. Jacob prayed to God to deliver him from the hand of Esau, for he feared him; but neither did his fear sink into despair nor did his prayer make him presume upon God's mercy without the use of means. When we have prayed to God for any mercy, we must second our prayers with our endeavours, else, instead of trusting God, we tempt him. We must so depend upon God's providence, as to make use of our own prudence. Help thyself and God will help thee. God answers our prayers by teaching us to order our affairs with discretion. To pacify Esau, Jacob sent him a noble present. Though he had purchased the birthright, and the dominion had been expressly promised him in the blessing he understood them in their temporal sense, as belonging to his posterity, and was satisfied with the spiritual benefits for himself. We must not despair of reconciling ourselves, even to those who have been most exasperated against us. We ought not to judge men unappeasable till we have tried to be reconciled to them. Jacob again sent Esau a very humble message, which he ordered his servants to deliver in the best manner. They must call Esau their lord, and Jacob his servant. We have here the remarkable story of Jacob's wrestling with the angel and prevailing which is referred to in Hosea 12, 4. Very early in the morning a great while before day, Jacob had helped his wives and his children over the river, and he desired to be private, and was left alone, that he might again more fully spread his cares and fears before God in prayer. He did so, renewing his earnest supplications. There may be urgent cases when even the night itself may not seem too long to pour out our hearts before God. While thus employed one in fashion of a man appeared to him and engaged in wrestling with him. When the Spirit helpeth our infirmities and our intense, earnest, and vast desires can scarcely find words to utter them and we still mean more than we can express, then prayer is indeed wrestling with God. However tried or discouraged, we shall certainly prevail; and prevailing with Him in prayer, we shall prevail against all our enemies that strive with us. Nothing requires more vigor and unremitting exertion than wrestling. It is an emblem of the true spirit of faith and prayer. They who wrestle in prayer will always prevail with God. Jacob's thigh was put out of joint. He with whom he wrestled thereby intimated that though he suffered himself to be prevailed upon, it was the effect of his mercy and gracious acceptance of those prayers which he had taught and enabled him to make. We are told by the prophet Hosea how Jacob wrestled. He wept and made supplication; prayers and tears were his weapons. It was not only a corporal but a spiritual wrestling by the vigorous actings of faith and holy desire. Jacob kept his ground through the struggle, continued long. This discouragement did not shake his faith. (To be continued).

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), October 13.—There was a heavy rain throughout the night which is still continuing. No counter attacks by the enemy have developed thus far on the battle front. On the rest of the British front there is nothing to report.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 13.—The German forces last night made several attacks on the French positions north of the River Aisne. An official statement issued this afternoon by the French War Office says that all the assaults were repulsed.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, October 13. — Australian troops to-day forced their way still nearer to Passchendaele, the key point to the ridge of that name. In their new positions the men from the Antipodes dashed back German counter attacks with the greatest ease. The assaulting enemy troops did not even reach the British lines. .....

Advice to Married Men by "HENPECKED HENRY"

If your wife thinks she can cook, don't tell her what you think.

Don't belong to a club, that's your wife's privilege. Have a latchkey, but keep it to yourself.

Always let your wife buy your neckties, she knows what you ought to wear around your neck.

When your wife talks, listen. You don't have to hear.

Results Of Greater Production Labours Reported To Ald. Dobbin

Citizens Are Requested to Report Their Experiences to Ald. Dobbin —Information is Desired by the Department of Agriculture.

MR. W. J. PERRY'S GARDENING

The returns are coming in. The call for information as to the Greater Production benefits brings to the surface instances of thrift and gain that are most commendable. Shows what we can do when we try and are put to it. Here is a sample of results:

Mr. W. J. Perry of the United Cigar Store, (the stores, it may be explained are united, not the cigars), gives his experience and the avails. He rented two lots and paid for the use of the ground, $5.00. Good money, well spent.

He realized as follows:

12 bags of potatoes.

1 bag of nice hard beans (the small white).

The vegetable garden gave, in addition:

1 bushel of beets.
2 bushels of carrots.
1 bag of turnips.
2 bags of tomatoes.
2 bushels of parsnips.
1 peck onions.

And, in addition, lettuce, radishes, and beans for summer use; also all the general vegetables we required during the summer months.

And yet we mourn of the high cost of low living. When a man can fall to and equip himself with so much provender and it be generally followed, the potato profiteer views the uprising with cold chills down his avaricious spine.

And there are many others.

Discussions, among men, are now as to yields. That is in proportion to amount of seed potatoes immured in the earth, with hopes of abundant crop.

The general idea is that the avails are as eight to one. That is, one peck of seed should bring, and has brought, eight pecks of potatoes. A few of the stated averages come about seven to one.

But general experience is that there has been unearthed a surprising amount of small potatoes, in proportion to the larger sizes. The proportion varies with the quality of the ground under cultivation. It is conceded among those who have used ground other than their own that some fertilizer is needed next season, assuming that the citizen will go to it next summer. So, if you are inclined, make your arrangements this fall; either stable manure or a commercial fertilizer will answer. The latter is the more convenient to make use of.

Comparison of Words.

It will be interesting and instructive, as well, to compare the results from tillage in the South Ward and in other parts of the city. The South gives most excellent results in such things as celery and plants of the esculent varieties. Rhubarb, for instance, grows with the velocity of a hotel rotunda palm, that often gets a single night. Gets them by express, a single nigh. Gets them by express. Tomatoes, for instance, are shy in the North Ward. Why, no fellow can understand. Better see Aldermen McIntyre and Langford about it.

The eternal question as to what we shall do with our girls has been shelved by the other important query, is it well to plant, as seed, the small and whole potatoes. Because, you see, if the small tubers are good for seed they can be saved. If not, given to the neighbour to boil and feed to the hens. We cannot follow the example of the folk in Georgia, where "the potatoes grow small over there, and they eat them, skins and all." The attention of the able Mr. Hanna might be called to this opportunity to issue a new and revised food economy card.

There will be further comment and disclosures. A little cheerful publicity will encourage others to go at it again and to induce others to fall in line next season. Enough is known of the amount of roots raised to be able to say with every assurance that not this season at any rate will the potato profiteer get a ghost of a show. All we need now to ensure happiness and contentment is to get at it, if we can, and grow coal.

being rescued was taken to Blighty on October the seventh, 1916. He is suffering from curvature of the spine, and is in a plaster of Paris caste.

To-morrow Driver Davidson enters the Convalescent Hospital in Toronto for further treatment. He was tendered a splendid reception in Toronto, being met by Mayor Church and aldermen and conveyed in a private car to the Y.M.C.A., and from there to the C.P.R. local train, where he entrained to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Davidson in Peterborough, and on arrival here he was met by all his relations. Mrs. Davidson wishes to thank Mr. Green and Miss Lebarr of the music store, for lending music, and Mr. Gus White for flags, and all who turned out in any way.

OTTAWA, Oct. 11.—Official notice will be published throughout the United States on Saturday calling the attention of Canadians to the first call under the Military Service Act.

All British subjects, who have resided in Canada since the declaration of war and are of military age, are liable to military service under the act; and the notice will call the attention of Canadians resident across the line to this provision.

While the first class is not technically called up till the official proclamation is published throughout the Dominion on Saturday, medical boards are everywhere working to the limit. Up to the week ending October 6, there had been 28,609 men examined, of whom 12,597 were placed in medical Category A—men qualified from the medical point of view for general service overseas. Last week alone, there were 15,951 examinations. The Toronto military district headed the list in number of examinations. London came second with Montreal a close third.

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star says: A meeting to organize a Great War Veterans' Association for Northumberland County, was held here on Wednesday evening. Lt.-Col. W. H. Floyd occupied the chair, and Private E. Hircock acted as secretary. It was decided to organize an association here, but as the meeting did not have full information of the Associations aims, a committee, consisting of Lt.-Col. W. H. Floyd, Capt. H. McCullough and Pte. Hircock, was appointed to secure this information. When this information is secured another meeting will be called to complete organization. About fifteen returned soldiers were present at the meeting.

QUEBEC, Oct. 11.—A large number of Canadian families who have been staying in England in order to be close to relatives on active service, returned to Canada this evening on board a Canadian Pacific ocean steamship service liner, which docked at the breakwater shortly after six o'clock. The vessel had a total number of 1,312 passengers, and carried 2,000 bags and packages of mail, besides a general cargo for Quebec and Montreal.

Of the passengers 250 were Canadian army men, 178 of whom are due to go before the medical boards at the Quebec Discharge Depot to receive their discharges. The remainder are on leave.

One family of five or six members, affected with diphtheria, were taken from the ship at Grosse Isle and brought to the detention hospital. Apart from a case of measles on board one of the passenger steamers sometime ago, this is the first time this season that any passengers had to be removed from a vessel passing the quarantine station.

BOWLING On Water St. Alleys

Frontenacs Defeated by the Grocers.

Last night in the Five-pin League at the Water St. Alleys, the Grocers annexed all three games from the Frontenacs. The Grocers won the first two games by small margins, but the pace was too strong for the Frontenacs and the third game was also an easy win for the Grocers. The total pinnage was: Grocers, 2139; Frontenacs, 1971. Fitzpatrick was high man for the three games with 487 for a total, while A. Ross was high for the Frontenacs with a 438 total.

The scores were as follows:

Grocers.

Gillespie	118	127	173	418
R. Ross	129	121	150	400

CARVELL SWORN IN

Liberal Member for Carleton Becomes Minister of Public Works

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—Frank B. Carvell, of Carleton, N.B., definitely joined the union government shortly after one o'clock to-day. He was sworn in as Minister of Public Works, the portfolio taken by Col. Ballantyne last week, the first Liberal to enter the new government. Col. Ballantyne now becomes Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the portfolio vacated by Hon. J. D. Hazen. The announcement of changes was made after a meeting of the Cabinet Council this morning.

Mr. Carvell will be the only representative of the Province of New Brunswick in the Cabinet. His name was one of the first considered in connection with the union government proposals when they were first mooted some months ago. There were no definite developments this morning in regard to representation of Nova Scotia in the union goverment. The belife continues to prevail, however, that either Premier Murray of Nova Scotia or Hon. W. S. Fielding will be the member for Halifax, will become Minister of Labour.

A woman never looks better than her Hair

Thousands of woman owe their youthful appearance to NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE. No matter what may be her age, a woman with a nice head of hair, hair that is soft, glossy and fluffy, always looks younger than she is.

HERPICIDE makes the hair beautiful with that sheen and shimmer which is so attractive and always indicates a healthy, natural growth. It keeps the scalp free from dandruff and the hair from falling out.

There are remedies said to be "just as good," but HERPICIDE is "the genuine original dandruff germ destroyer."

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold at all drug stores and toilet goods counters. Guaranteed by The Herpicide Co.

Recommended and applications made by the best barbers and hair dressers.

INFORMAL SOCIAL AT KNOX CHURCH

The basement of Knox Church was occupied last night by a representative gathering of men of the church. The body was the Brotherhood Bible Class, and the object was to have the men take an interest in the class by attending in larger numbers on the Sabbath afternoons.

The chair was occupied by the president, John Anderson, and after a few remarks, called on the following brethren for their views regarding the work and organization of the class: Messrs. White, Carpenter and Hillier. These gentlemen, in fitting phase, voiced the opinion that individual canvassing was the most acceptable plan to increase membership. Other interesting little speeches, full of advice and help, were made by Rev. Mr. MacKenzie and Messrs Yale Farquharson (Chatham) Gillespie and Bartley.

Mr. H. B. Cowan was principal spokesman of the evening—his learned and interesting address being much appreciated. The theme of his talk ran along the lines as to how members of the Brotherhood were to be treated: were they to have recreation provided for the time spent in the class, or were they to have religion placed before them as their main guide? Mr. Cowan showed that the latter plan was the best and most definite, and that all classes should have that as the basic principle of their work.

At an interval of the proceedings light refreshments were served and enjoyed.

Another feature added much to the evening's gathering, namely, Victrola selections. The thanks of the meeting were voiced for Mr. Britton's kindness in loaning the instrument from "Heintzman Hall," Hunter Street.

Giants Take Early Lead

Drive "Reb" Russell From the Box in First Innings

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—The weather for the fifth world's series baseball game to-day was clear and cold. It promised slightly warmer for the afternoon; there was no threat of rain.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Although the world's series stands two and two, and the utmost importance is attached to to-day's conflict, scalpers' tickets were far below the prices demanded for the first two games a week ago. Only one game will be played in Chicago this trip. The sixth game will be played in New York, and the seventh, if there is one, in which ever of the cities the toss of a coin determines. Playing on the home grounds to-day was counted on by Chicagoans as a factor in their favour, each team having won its victories at home.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.— The Chicago White Sox and New York Giants met here this afternoon in the fifth game of the world's series. The batteries announced were:

New York—Salee and Rariden.
Chicago—Russell and Schalk.

First Innings.

New York.— Burns walked on four pitched balls. Herzog singled to right field and Burns dashed to third. Cicotte and Williams went out to warm up. Burns scored on Kauff's two-bagger to right field fence, Herzog going to third. Russell was taken from the box and Cicotte was sent in. Cicotte had only a few seconds to warm up in the outfield before taking his place on the rubber. The crowd booed Zimmerman when he came to bat. Weaver took Zimmerman's grounder and Herzog was run down between third and home, the play being Weaver to Schalk Kauff moved on to third. McMullin took Fletcher's hot smash and threw to Schalk, who touched out Kauff as he slid into the plate. Zimmerman scored on Robert's single to centre. On Felsch's throw to the plate Fletcher went to third and Robertson to second. Holke failed to reach first. Two runs, three hits, no errors.

Chicago.— John Collins popped to Zimmerman on the first ball pitched. McMullin strolled to first. Sallee's curve broke wide and he could not seem to control it. Collins singled to centre, McMullin going to second. Perritt was warming up. Jackson flied to Burns. Fletcher booted Felsch's grounder and the bases were filled. Gandil popped to Holke. No runs, one hit, one error.

Second Innings.

New York.— Rariden singled past Collins. Sallee forced Rariden at second, Gandil to Weaver. Burns struck out. Weaver made a bobble on Herzog's grounder, Salee moving on to second Collins threw out Kauff at first. No runs, one hit, one error.

Chicago.— Fletcher got Weaver's smash and threw him out. Fletcher also threw out Schalk. Cicotte walked, Sallee worked a cross-fire ball all through the inning. John Collins fouled out to Rariden. No runs, no hits, no errors.

OBITUARY

THOMAS GRAHAM.

The sad death of one of the old pioneers of Manvers, in the person of Thomas Graham, while not expected, cast a deep gloom over the community, says the Millbrook Reporter. He was trying to dig his potatoes in his garden on Thursday evening last and apparently took a "stroke" and was found by his sister, Mrs. Blakely, in a semi-conscious condition. She had him removed to the house but he passed away before morning. The late Mr. Graham was one of the highly respected residents of the township, where the Graham family has stood for honesty and uprightness in all their dealings. The Methodist church, to which Mr. Graham belonged, will greatly miss his fianancial and personal presence and aid. One brother, Mr. W. S. Graham, Mount Pleasant, and one sister, Mrs. Blakely, are all that are left of the family.

MRS. FREDERICK BILLINGS.

Mrs. Frederick Billings, of this city, late of Buffalo, N.Y., died on the 11th instant in the latter city.

Deceased was 42 years of age, her maiden name being Hannah Barrie. She was born in Peterborough and moved to Buffalo some years ago. She is survived by her husband and six sisters, Mrs. John Couch and Mrs. Preston, Toronto; Mrs. Boswell and Mrs. Williams, of Maine; Mrs. Matthew Jamieson and Mrs. E. Stevenson, Peterborough, and one brother, Mr. Jos. H. Barrie, formerly of this city, now with the Toronto News.

The remains were brought to the city last night and the funeral held from the residence of the deceased's sister, Mrs. E. Stevenson, 310 Edinburgh street, at 3 o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. A. J. Thomas of George Street Church, officiated.

HUN MUTINY SAVED RUSSIA

A Least Six Important Units of Kaiser's Fleet Affected.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The inactivity of the German fleet in the Baltic Sea recently when there were obvious opportunities for attacking Russia, according to a despatch to the Daily Chronicle from Amsterdam, was due to the mutinous outbreak in the German navy.

The outbreak affected at least six important units of the fleet, putting them out of action and causing the authorities to doubt the discipline and loyalty of the crews of other large ships. It was impossible, the despatch adds, to take stern measures on a large scale against the offenders, because that would have increased the evil.

Columbus Day Was Celebrated

Columbus Day was celebrated by the Peterborough Council of the Knights of Columbus by a social held last night in aid of St. Vincent's Orphanage. Although the weather was decidedly unfavourable, there was a fairly large attendance. During the intermission, Mr. V. J. McElderry delivered an address on the life and the achievements of Christopher Columbus, and Miss Gertrude Clancy and Mr. Ed. Bartley sang very acceptably.

The winners in progressive euchre were Mrs. F. Fairen and Mr. John Malane. Miss Marion Gorman played for the dancing. The "At Home" realized $35 for the Orphanage.

Mayor Duffus Will Represent Militia Dept. In District 276

Mayor Duffus has been notified of his appointment as the representative of the Militia Department in District No. 276, one of the two Peterborough districts in which the local exemption tribunals will preside. He will go to Kingston in a short time, where the duties of the apointees of the Department will be fully explained to them. It is understood that these duties will be generally to act in the interests of the Militia Department, opposing exemption claims that may be regarded as weak and based on trivial and insufficient grounds.

Xmas Boxes For Soldiers Overseas

Collection boxes will be placed at the various entrances to Knox Church to-morrow to receive the contributions of those who were not able to give last year for the purpose of sending Christmas boxes to Knox Church soldiers overseas. This will be the last opportunity to contribute for this purpose.

Will Carry Wilson Invalid Port Case To Higher Court

When informed to-day of Mr. Justice Masten's decision, dismissing the appeal of the Warne Drug Company against Magistrate Dumble's fine of $300 for the sale of Wilson's invalid port, Mr. G. N. Gordon stated that he would carry the case to the Appellate Division. He intimated that the Wilson business at stake demanded the fullest consideration of the involved question of law.

Col. Johnston To Give An Address

Lieut.-Col. Johnston will address the Knox Church Brotherhood tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Christmas Cut-Out Puzzle

$100 in Cash Prizes to be awarded to Clever Young People

BOYS and Girls of Canada, I am Uncle Peter of EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD. My business is to devise puzzles for your fun and education. The cut-out puzzle I have for you this time is a beauty. You'll think so, too, when you get at it!

A Train Load of Toys

SANTA CLAUS has a train load of toys for you this Christmas; Every car contains one kind of toy, and the name is on each car, but the man who painted the name on each car got the letters all jumbled. Worse still, the man who coupled the cars got them in the wrong order!

Now I want you to straighten things out for Santa Claus! I want you to re-arrange the letters forming the name of the toys in each car and to put the cars in their right order behind the locomotive. I want you to cut out each car, solve the puzzle of the name on each car; and then arrange the cars in their right order. Then I want you to take pen and ink and a piece of paper, and give me your solution.

How to Solve this Puzzle

I'LL give you a little start. Car No. 6, "DOES ILL," contains "Dollies." The other cars may contain gloves, candy, baseballs, animals, bicycles, building blocks, skipping ropes, nine pins, engines, skates, Noah's Ark, perfume, lanterns, tools, footballs or something else. It is for you to find out!

And here is something to help you get the cars in their right order behind the locomotive: the first letter of the name of each Christmas present in the cars, when these first letters are all put together, will spell out the name of a great Nation in Europe—one of the Allies; a nation whose navy controls the oceans.

Now it is for you to solve the Puzzle!

You must be Clever to Win!

NOW, Boys and Girls, see if you can solve my puzzle. If you can, and will observe the simple conditions carefully, you may win one of these Fifty-three Cash Prizes:

$25.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl who sends us the best reply.

$15.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl sending the second best reply.

$10.00 Cash to the Boy or Girl sending the third best reply.

DOLLAR BILLS. Fifty bright, new, crisp $1.00 bills to the fifty next Boys and Girls with the 50 next best replies.

TO qualify your entry for these prizes, I want you to perform a very small and pleasant service for me—Show a copy of EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD to just two friends, and get them to know and want this great Canadian monthly magazine for Canadian women.

I'll send you a copy of the latest issue of EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, post free, on receipt of your entry. Your mother or big sister, or aunt, or cousin, or neighbor will count as one of the two friends to whom I want you to show EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, and that will leave just one other friend!

NOTE.—If you would like to have this train of cars in colors, and of larger size, on fine white paper, as printed in EVERYWOMAN'S WORLD, send a 3c. postage stamp to me to pay postage for mailing it when you are sending your solution to the puzzle, and I shall tell you at the same time how you may win a Shetland Pony and Cart, or a bicycle, or other fine prizes in a pleasant contest more interesting than this one.

RULES. In making your entries please observe the following very simple rules:

1. Write your answers in pen and ink, using only one side of the paper.
2. Put your name, address and age, in the upper right hand corner of each sheet.
3. Only young people under 17 may compete.
4. Contest closes Christmas Day.
5. Judge's decision will be final. Prizes will be awarded immediately after Contest closes.
6. The Prizes will be awarded for correctness and neatness of replies, and general carefulness as well as the simple service qualification for which extra cash or premium prizes will be given to you.

Begin This Very Evening!

BEGIN this very evening! It may take you many evenings—it depends on how clever you are! There are fifty-three cash prizes; and in addition I have other fine rewards for every boy and girl who qualifies his or her entry in this fascinating competition. Write me personally, and I'll tell you about them. Wouldn't you like $25.00 cash? Wouldn't you like a Shetland Pony? or a bicycle? These fine prizes will go to my young friends—and I'd like you to get the best of them. Address your entry as follows:

JUSTICE AND THE AUSTRIAN MILITARY COURTS

(Special Correspondence of the Slav Press Bureau.)

GENEVA—After three years of rigid censorship, which prevented the publication of any information dealing with the methods employed by the Austrian courts and their treatment of those who were suspected or accused of treason, the world is gradually beginning to acquire at least a limited knowledge of the truth. From reports that have recently reached here it is very clear that the military courts of Austria were systematically employed for the purpose of getting rid of all persons who were opposed to the war or who in any way dared to criticise any action of the Austrian Government. As early as the fall of 1915 a large number of Czech deputies in parliament, editors, professors, and other political leaders, was sent into internment camps without ever having been tried. These men were removed purposely to deprive the Czech people of leaders who could guide their opposition against the blind subservience of Austria to pan-German schemes.

Smejkal, a tailor of Vienna, was condemned to six months of imprisonment at hard labour for saying that "the government refuses to open Czech schools in Vienna."

Tesar, a gardener's assistant, was condemned to sixteen months of imprisonment for saying, "I know nothing concerning the matter of the Emperor's coronation as King of Bohemia."

Mr. Cipera, of Moravia, member of the Home Defense, was condemned to three years of imprisonment at hard labour for saying that "the German Emperor is responsible for the war."

Dr. Hoffner, the private physician of the children of the late heir apparent, wrote to his son-in-law that "the portions of bread that were officially fixed for the working classes were, according to his experience, entirely insufficient for the labourers, and for any persons employed at hard labour." For this assertion he was condemned to the loss of his diploma and to eight months of hard labour.

Engineer Bartos failed to rise in a station restaurant in Brno at the singing of the "Wacht am Rhein" and was accused of insulting the Emperor. The waiter was the only witness on the part of the prosecution, and, in spite of the fact that several witnesses, among them two German teachers and a professor of gymnasium, proved that the Austrian national hymn was not played at all, the engineer was condemned to a year's imprisonment at hard labour and a loss of his engineer's diploma.

Mr. Emil Spatny, editor of the Ceske Slovo, of Prague, was interned in September, 1914, without any statement of the grounds of his internment, and the following year he was transferred to Gollersdorf, in lower Austria, and while there he took part in a celebration which the interned Czechs had arranged in honour of the memory of John Hus. He was later accused of saying that "they expected to be liberated by a certain state, but that they were disappointed." At the investigation there was no one to prove this accusation aside from a man named Davidosky and a waiter named Janny. In the course of the trial it was proved that the crown witness, Davidovsky, had previously served two terms in prison for fraud, that he was examined six times on the suspicion of being a spy, and that, according to expert physicians of Vienna, he was a "Psychish Minderwertig, fabulos, grosser Lugner." Nevertheless, in spite of this, his testimony was accepted. As regards the testimony of Janny, it was also accepted, although there were several witnesses to prove that Janny was not even present at the above-mentioned celebration. On the strength of the testimony of the above two, Editor Spatny was condemned to fourteen years of hard labour. In 1916 he was transferred to Mollersdorf and placed in solitary confinement.

The treatment to which the political prisoners are subjected is characteristically Austrian. The inhuman treatment has been largely responsible for an enormously high percentage of deaths among the prisoners condemned for political offenses. In 1916 61 out of 350 prisoners died in the state prison of Mollersdorf. Between the 1st of January and the 1st of May, 1817, 101 prisoners died in the same prison. This means that under existing circumstances one out of every six prisoners is virtually condemned to death. Robbers, highwaymen and murderers are given various privileges in and about the state prisons, while political prisoners are treated with the utmost inhumanity, so that as a result of it they are dying by hundreds.

All of this goes under the name of justice in Austria, even under the present so-called "enlightened policy" of Emperor Charles.

NEGRO LABOUR COMPANIES.

24 Organizations to be Formed from Drafted Men Who Volunteer.

WASHINGTON. — Army orders authorized the immediate organization of twenty-four labour companies "by voluntary enrollment of conscripted coloured men after their mobilization," or, if sufficient men are not obtained in this way, by voluntary enlistment of negroes.

Each company will have four white officers, a Captain, two First Lieutenants and a Second Lieutenant and 200 enlisted men. Negro non-commissioned officers will be obtained by transferring qualified men from the Ninth and Tenth Cavalry and the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Infantry of the regular army.

Put a little salt in the water in which greens are washed, and the insects will rise up to the top. Be sure to rinse quickly in plain water.

REFUSES TO GIVE UP COCCHI.

Italy Bars Extradition of Murderer of Ruth Cruger.

ROME.—After long consideration the Italian Government has decided not to grant the extradition of Alfredo Cocchi, who killed Ruth Cruger in New York. The Government expresses regret that it is unable to meet the wishes of the American authorities.

Emmanuel Fino, a lawyer, who has been acting as representative of the New York District Attorney, is endeavouring to arrange the sending of Cocchi to the United States under arrest to give testimony in regard to his reported associations with members of the New York Police Department.

KILLED IN ACTION.

"Fallen in action," was the message brief,
That Sudden smote, a mother's heart with grief,
But ah! one whit to alleviate the pain,
The message brought, a thousand words were vain.

Sad flowed that widowed mother's tears like rain,
Then for her only son in battle slain,
Dead, dead, her Gilbert, on a foreign shore,
And she will see his face, on earth no more.

An only sister, too, is doomed to mourn,
Lonely, for him who never will return
And sorrow's pall is o'er the once bright home,
Of his glad boyhood by Ontario's foam.

In many a heart is left a vacant place,
And a dark shadow, that no sun can chase,
Oft to the memory of a comrade dear,
Will friendship, pay the tribute of a tear.

When first in luckless hour the war began,
Foremost was he in duty's onward van,
Aye, scorned, his soul inactive to remain,
While tryants forged, oppression's galling chain.

In martial trappings, happy, young and gay;
With hope and courage, high, he marched away,
Now on his country's altar, down has laid,
Life, costliest sacrifice, for freedom paid.

And sleeps the hero, on a distant strand,
Far from loved kindred, and his native land,
A simple cross, records the soldier's name,
(For King and country's cause) from whence he came.

Nor monumental marble, does he need,
To tell his fame, or for remembrance plead,
For while on spark of patriot fire remains
To warm the blood in true Canadian veins.

Shall grateful fame, recount with honest pride
How nobly, gallant Edwards fought, and died,
And honour, too, her fairest laurels twine
To make his name, with fadeless lustre shine.

O'er his lone grave, no fleur-de-lis may nod,
But hostile strangers tramp the barren sod,
Still God's blue sky, will smile above him there,
And angel's guard, the spot, with tenderest care.

Then weep not as bereft, of hope's sweet cheer,
The rudely blighted, all your fond hope's here,
Soon ye shall meet, upon a blissful shore
Where war, and pain, and parting are no more.

Lovingly inscribed to Mrs. Bert McCullough, on the death of her brother, Captain Gilbert Edwards, who was killed in action, by her cousin, Mrs. A. F. Calder.

Cheese Factory Near Lakefield Was Destroyed

Both Factory and Dwelling House Were a Total Loss—Covered By Insurance

The cheese factory and house adjoining at Phelan's Corners, Lakefield, owned by F. G. Kendall were totally destroyed by fire on Saturday night at 10 o'clock. The contents of the house in which Mr. Kendall resides and of the factory were saved.

The Cause.

The cause of the fire is not definitely known, but is believed to have been started from a coal dropping from a fire which had been lit at noon in the boiler room. A bucket brigade rendered first aid, but could do little or nothing on account of the headway the fire had already gained.

Covered by Insurance.

The buildings, which are worth about $10,000, are pretty well covered by insurance.

Contractor Has Gained 20 Pounds

"I Now Know What a Wonderful Thing Tanlac Is" Says Windsor Man

"I have gained twenty pounds by actual weight and now I know for myself that Tanlac is something wonderful." William S. Pickell, who made this remarkable statement, is a well-known paint contractor and resides at 51 Windsor Ave., Windsor.

"About a year ago," continued Mr. Pickell, "I began suffering from stomach trouble and going down hill. My appetite went square back on me and I always had to be very careful about what I ate. I was very easy to take cold and was annoyed a great deal by a hacking cough caused by the irritated condition of my throat. I fell off to one hundred and thirty-eight pounds and felt run-down and tired all the time. My sleep was broken, I was very nervous and just felt worse than I can describe. Many days I simply felt like giving up entirely and it was by mere force of will that I kept at my work.

"I had read so much about Tanlac that I concluded to see if it was good for me and what it has done in my case proves its value in building up people who are all run-down like I was. I have a fine appetite now and eat just anything I want with no bad after effects. My sleep is sound and restful and I don't have that tired feeling any more. I now weigh one hundred and fifty-eight pounds—have made an actual gain of twenty pounds already—and have just finished my second bottle of Tanlac. I really feel like a different man, and two bottles of the medicine have done my daughter a world of good, too. I expect to take a few more bottles and am telling all my friends how fine it is."

A HAPPY MAN OR WOMAN

A happy man or woman is a better thing to find than a five-pound note. He or she is a radiating focus of good will; and their entrance into a room is as though another candle had been lighted. We need not care whether they could prove the forty-seventh proposition; they do a better thing than that, they practically demonstrate the great theory of the livableness of life.

Capronis At Cattaro Cause Great Havoc

Italian Aircraft Bomb Destroyers, U-Boats, and Munition Depots at Austrian Base.

WASHINGTON.—Details of the successful air raid which a squadron of Italian airplanes of the Caproni type made upon the Austrian naval base of Cattaro, in the Southern Adriatic, reached Washington in a semi-official despatch stating that it was a complete success. The raid, which was participated in by Gabriele d'Annunzio, the poet, who is now a military aviator, was intended to prevent the concentration of Austrian submarines and destroyers to prey on Entente shipping. Here is the semi-official report on the raid:

"The Italian command having learned that the Austrians were concentrating naval forces at Cattaro, gave orders to a large squadron of Caproni airplanes to raid this Austrian naval base of the Southern Adriatic. The squadron left its base at midnight, crossing the Adriatic over a course of 230 kilometres (180 miles) and flying at an altitude of 12,000 feet. When the squadron reached Cattaro, the planes descended to a few hundred feet over the destroyers and submarines anchored in the bay. Several successful hits were scored and fires started. Great fires were also caused in munition depots and military buildings by bombs dropped by other Italian airplanes.

"The Austrian batteries opened a tremendous fire against the raiding Capronis, which, however, remained over Cattaro until 3 o'clock in the morning, when, having accomplished their mission, they returned to their base. Gabrielle d'Annunzio took part in the raid."

An Italian military critic repeated that the objective of Italian offensives against Austria was Lubiano (Laibach) and while titanic struggles must precede its capture, he said, the value of its capitulation to the Entente cause justified Italy's past efforts and her plans for future campaigns to reach it.

The fall of Lubiano would isolate Croatia from Austria-Hungary, and as the Croatians desire independence or inclusion in the proposed Jugoslav-Serbian State, the capture would go far toward making the realization of that aspiration possible. It also might be expected to have another far-reaching political effect, this authority asserted. He said it would open the gates of Hungary to the Italian armies and produce great dissatisfaction with the further conduct of the war by Austria and possibly result in a new attitude of Hungary, forcing Austria to conclude peace.

A despatch received here from Rome stated that the Trentino paper La Liberta, which is now published in Milan, reproduces an Austrian document containing the sentence by the Court of Innsbruck of forty-four soldiers of the Irredente Provinces who at the beginning of the war had been sent to the Galician front, where they were made prisoners by the Russians. As soon as their identity as Italian subjects of the Irredente Provinces was established the Russians set them free and returned them to Italy. The Innsbruck court has tried them and sentenced them to death, but the sentenced Italians were declared to be safe in Italy.

Pte. Jim Beatty A Possibility As A Candidate

Well Known Cobourg Member of 2nd Battalion is Likely to Run

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star says:

Private James M. Beatty who went overseas with the First Canadian Contingent, and is home on sick furlough, has stated that he intends running at the next Dominion election as a "win-the-war" candidate. Private Beatty says all he stands to lose is his $200 election deposit, and he believes he will save that. As soon as he receives his discharge he intends going on a lecturing trip through the county, giving his experiences at the front, and by this means he expects to raise enough money to pay his election expenses. If Private Beatty carries out his present intentions it will make a three-cornered fight in Northumberland. Mr. Charles A. Munson, M.P., has been renominated by the Conservatives, and Mr. Sam Dudley has been nominated by the Liberals, he being the only one who would take the nomination.

BRITAIN'S ARMY BILL HUGE.

Present Annual Value of Purchases Aggregate Over $1,750,000,000.

According to official statistics, the value of purchases for the Imperial army during the war has exceeded 700,000,000 pounds sterling, including 200,000,000 pounds on behalf of Great Britain's allies. The present annual value of purchases is about 350,000,000 pounds, including 100,000,000 pounds for the allies.

Cloth, 105,000,000 yards; flannel, 115,000,000 yards; knives, forks and spoons, 35,000,000; bacon, 400,000,000 pounds; cheese, 167,000,000 pounds; jam, 260,000,000 tins; preserved meat, 500,000,000 rations; boots, 35,000,000 pairs; smoke helmets, 25,000,000; horse shoes, 40,000,000.

The Army Contracts Department utilizes three methods of purchase for these huge supplies—competitive tendering, requisition of output and control of material. Skilled investigators are employed to visit contractors' works and check details, and their investigation results in considerable savings. In one instance on twelve months' contract totalling 1,500,000 pounds sterling, reductions were made amounting to 400,000 pounds.

Eat Less Meat—Eat More Whole Wheat— that is the way to save money, save strength, save health and save food. Cut out the expensive indigestible foods. The whole wheat is the most perfect food given to man. But be sure you get the whole wheat grain in a digestible form. Shredded Wheat Biscuit is 100 per cent. whole wheat and is made digestible by steam-cooking, shredding and baking. It contains more real body-building nutriment than meat, and costs much less. Delicious for any meal with milk or cream, and fruits.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"
By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

And then the fates, through the medium of Portuguese Joe's pistol, had set a gray mist before his eyes. It was full two weeks before he again opened them, and when he did so, it was upon new and singularly unfamiliar surroundings.

He lay in a massive oaken bed, which stood in a room of no great size. It was apparently an interior room, for its walls held no window, although a flare of sunlight swept in through the open door. On every side his eyes beheld hangings of brocaded satin. A great lamp, of sunningly wrought silver, hung above his head. On the floor was a carpet of curious design, the like of which he had never seen before. There were stags in it, and creatures with horns, and multi-coloured birds, on a background of deepest crimson. For a moment he wondered whether he had not in some inscrutable way been transported to Paradise.

Through the open doorway he could see a larger room, floored with alternate tiles of black and white marble. A great table, of carved oak, stood in its centre, and about it were chairs, massive, dark with age, their seats and backs covered with gold and purple leather. Against the opposite wall stood a cupboard of blackened oak, its shelves heavy with flagons and platters of silver and gold. The wide rough planks that composed the walls were hung with rugs of gorgeous colours, against which shone weapons of steel, bits of inlaid Spanish armour, and a flag whose deep crimson and gold bore the arms of Castile.

Directly against the opposite wall stood a couch of rattan, over which was thrown a coverlet of yellow linen, embroidered in scarlet. Near it was a chest covered with faded red velvet, crossed by the dull brass of many riveted straps. There was also a crucifix of ivory and silver before which burned a tiny lamp. Barton gazed upon his new surroundings and wondered what stroke of fate had brought him to so strange a place.

Upon a chair near his bed he saw the clothes in which he had set forth two weeks before from the town. He did not know that two weeks had passed; in fact, he knew nothing, save that he had wandered into an enchanted garden, and now found himself in a land of dreams. He turned his head on the satin-covered pillow and once more slept.

Many hours later Ramona appeared in the curtained doorway. The Puritan had thrown wide the coverlet that lay over the bed; in the yellow lamplight he seemed a figure of warm marble, motionless save for the faint heaving of his chest.

The girl stood for many minutes on the threshold, her lips parted, her eyes bright with tears. A flood of moonlight, like a silver banner, came through the unglazed windows of the larger room, throwing into deeper pallor the dull whiteness of her cheeks. She had fought with death for many days, now at last it seemed that she had won.

The young man lay upon his side, his broad shoulders very still, his arms thrown out before him. His fair skin shone like ivory in the yellow lamplight. She was conscious of a feeling of joy, as she saw the gentle curves of sinew and muscle, the tapered waist, the strong yet narrow hips. With an attitude almost maternal she drew the coverlet about his unconscious form, then stooped and kissed him on the forehead. Love, in spite of its fires, had given to her heart a grave tenderness, a deep desire to serve. In silence she sat beside the bed.

Thoughts singularly complex filled her soul. Into the wilderness of her life had suddenly come, from the great world without, a new and hitherto unknown experience. Love, that had seemed so unbelievably remote, had suddenly filled the vacancies of her heart and given to life a new and deeper meaning. Strange, almost terrifying emotions possessed her. Her desire to keep this man with her, for all time, against the world, was savage in its intensity. She refused to contemplate the hour when, restored to health, he would go from her, leaving her in a loneliness more poignant than she had ever known before. She determined to fight with her utmost breath to keep the happiness that had come to her, to defend it against all the forces that she knew would seek to wrest it from her.

On the very day after Barton's arrival these forces had begun to manifest themselves. Early in the forenoon Lucia had come to her with the news that two strange men were approaching the gate that gave entrance to the garden. She met them on the steps of the house, unwilling that they should come within.

The two men gazed at the girl, in her flowing white robe, her red silk stockings, with stern and forbidding curiosity. Neither offered any salutation; the younger of the two took a step forward.

"I am Samuel Willoughby, of the trading ship Thanksgiving," he announced gravely. "We hail from the city of New Bedford, in the colony of Massachusetts. We seek one of our comrades, John Barton by name, who left our ship yesterday at sundown, and has not yet returned. All through the night we have sought him, but in vain. We fear some ill fortune has befallen him, for he was not one to desert his comrades on the eve of departure. Have you seen aught of him?"

"Why should you think to find him here?" asked Ramona, her voice very thin and trembling. A fierce jealousy flared in her heart. These men, it seemed, had come to take from her all that life now held to make its living possible.

"The landlord of the Turk's Head tavern tells us that the young man made inquiry of him concerning the abode of one Ramona de Lara, mistress of the buccaneer known as Ormiston, the Firebrand. Are you that woman?"

Ramona bowed her head.

"I am," she whispered.

"Have you then seen him whom we seek?"

A tumult of emotions possessed the girl's soul. What right had these sour old men to take from her the man, love of whom now dominated her being. He was, she well knew, too weak, too ill, to be removed. To acquaint his comrades with his presence could serve no good purpose, the only result would be to spread abroad the knowledge of her secret until it was known to all the town. The thought filled her with terror. Ormiston, returning from his expedition, would learn of it, and in his savage rage would seek vengeance not alone upon her, but upon Barton as well. Well she knew the relentless nature of the man. Trembling with indecision, she prayed for help, for guidance.

There had been an awkward pause.

"Have you seen him, daughter of evil?" croaked the older of the men.

His words, and more particularly the manner in which he spoke them, roused the girl to sudden rage.

"No!" she cried. "I have not seen him. There was talk last night of a sailor, wounded in the road below. It is reported that he made his way back to the town."

"Have you th n tempted him to his doom?" exclaimed the older man, glowering upon her with thin-lipped anger.

"I owe no account of my affairs to you," she cried. "I have not seen the man, I tell you. Let that suffice."

The two Puritans regarded each other with grave uncertainty. Their search had come to a sudden and most unsatisfactory end.

"Come, friend Cotton," said the younger of the two, touching his companion's arm. "Let us go." He turned toward the gate.

"Jezebel," Ramona heard him mutter, as they passed through the gate. She stood for many minutes, watching them, as they slowly descended the hill. Then at last she turned and went into the house.

"Mi Madre," she whispered, as she crossed the sunlit room. Then falling on her knees before the crucifix, she asked the good God to forgive her for the lies she had told. Through the door of the bedroom came the breathing of the sick man, heavy and troubled.

HUSBAND SAVED HIS WIFE

Denison, Texas. — "After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept dragging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's stepsister told my husband if he did not do something for me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. G. O. LOWERY, 419 W. Monterey Street, Denison, Texas.

If you are suffering from any form of female ills, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

Tadpole to Pollywog.

Here's a story about a frog—a real heart-interest story, about how he "finds" himself. In The New Statesman Mr. J. Arthur Thomson says:

"Peculiar half-finished little creatures the new-hatched larvæ are—mouthless, limbless, blind, covered with microscopic cilia, with just the beginnings of a first set of gills. They attach themselves by a horseshoe-shaped cement-organ to water weed, and subsist for some time on a legacy of yolk.

"It is an often-told story how these newly hatched larvæ develop into true tadpoles, with open mouth, gill-clefts, and a second set of gills; how the limbs bud out; how the lungs develop and the two-month-old pollywogs learn to use them, taking gulps of air at the surface; how the circulation changes from a piscine to an amphibian type, and how after nearly three months have passed there is a striking metamorphosis, the outcome of which is a tiny frog.

"The substance of the tail is broken up and dissolved, as if a pathological process had become normalized; the amœboid phagocytes which play such an important role in inflammation have their share in changing the tadpole into a frog."

To Sweep Garden With.

Princess Mary likes an open-air life, and has been often seen riding with the King during his Majesty's early morning rides, both in London and at Windsor. She made her debut in the hunting field when she was only eleven, attending a meet of the West Norfolk Foxhounds on her chestnut cob.

As the only daughter in a family with five boys, the Princess has shared her brothers' games and recreations. She enjoys shopping, and takes great trouble to obtain the particular presents which she sets her heart on. For instance, she once asked in a London shop for a small hard broom. They had not one.

"I want a nice little hard broom for my brother to sweep garden paths with," said the Princess.

Since the war Princess Mary has made a quantity of things for sale and distribution on behalf of war funds.—Westminster Gazette.

Gas.

"I hear Jones died from a single blow."

"What hit him?"

"No one. He blew out the gas.'

Viewpoint.

"Is farming hard work?"

"That depends. If you live in the country it is; if you live in the city it isn't."

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

This preparation is a toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

The Lady Mayoress.

It is probable that an Anglo-Canadian and his wife, a Halton, Ontario, woman, will be the next Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of London. C. A. Hanson, M.P. for Bodmin, who, as a former member of the firm of Hanson Bros. of Montreal, is widely known in Canada, is the senior of nine aldermen of the City of London, who are eligible for the office, and the probabilities are that he will be elected and will take possession of the Mansion House in November.

Mrs. Hanson was Miss Appelbe, a daughter of the late James Appelbe, J.P., of the County of Halton, Ontario, and one of the founders and early directors of the Bank of Toronto, and long one of the prominent men of the province.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanson have two children, a son and a daughter. Her son is Captain C. E. B. Hanson, 3rd West Riding Regiment, and also Lieutenant of the city of London. Her daughter is Mrs. Poole, the wife of Frederick C. Poole, D.S.O., Royal Artillery, a son of the late Rev. R. H. Poole, of Rainton County, Durham, whom she married in 1906.

Mrs. Hanson, while always taking her place at public functions, is never happier than when surrounded by her family and friends in her Cornish home. She has not visited Canada for years, but retains the deepest interest in her birthplace, and welcomes Canadians to her house in Wilton crescent, S. W., and her country home, Fowey Hall, in Cornwall. She was educated at the Ladies' College, Hamilton, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Learned Miss Fleming

By
AGNES G. BROGAN

"Why I should always be delegated to this highbrow stuff," complained Billy Atkins, "I don't understand, interviewing the authoress in her lair and all that. Here's this Fleming person—spells her name Helene—writer of treatises on domestic science and director of something in schools. Now, what questions can I ask her? Why don't they send a man like Brothers?"

"Been there," answered Brothers laconically. "Sent me because I wear glasses. But it would be easier to find audience with the kaiser than to be admitted to the presence of the learned Helene. Saw her, though, from a distance. She was sitting upon an upper veranda, evidently correcting proof. That's the nearest I got."

"Severe looking?" anxiously queried Billy.

"No name for it," answered Brothers. "Forbidding's the word. Thought if I could see the niece I'd get in. The two Miss Flemings are rusticating out there together, but Miss Niece was probably avoiding the wily reporter."

"Silly fuss to make over some new-fangled style of learning, anyway," grumbled Billy, jamming his hat on his head. "Well, here's to my success and promotion. The stubborn authoress shall be hunted down."

"Look out she doesn't mistake your attentions for intentions," called Brothers as a parting shot. "They say she's looking for a soul mate. Can write pretty romantic stuff, too, for a lady well along."

Billy found the old Fleming mansion, set well back among its trees from the roadside. It had not always been a Fleming mansion. In fact, the name was newly adopted, the famous authoress having sprung from unknownness into sudden prominence. There was an evidence of deep study in her briefest articles, of wonderful, practical discoveries which set the general student mind to thinking. Miss Helene Fleming was a woman of uncommon ability. So Billy Atkins went in unusual trepidation—for that self confident young man—up the flower bordered path to the door. The entrance was imposing. Billy rang, with no response to his ring. Billy tried the side door, bowing with assumed assuredness to the servant who opened it.

"Miss Fleming, the writer." Could he see her for just a moment? No; he would not send up his card, but the visit was important.

Miss Fleming was too busily engaged to see callers.

"But this," begged Billy, "is very urgent."

"Miss Fleming will see no one."

For a moment Billy camped hopefully upon the doorstep, but the door was firmly closed. Half angrily he made his way around to a rear door. A staring maid confronted him.

"Vas it Miss Fleming you vish to see or de niece?"

"Oh, either one," he answered hastily. It had occurred to him that the niece might be persuaded to act as envoy to the very difficult aunt. And Billy prided himself upon his persuasive powers with young women.

"In de garten dere," directed tthe maid. "She's out dere somewheres by de wall."

So Billy started, whistling, to encircle the rear garden wall. High upon one post at last he discovered a huge yellow cat, and high upon the corresponding one perched a very pert looking young woman. Perhaps his first impression of pertness was caused by the girl's swinging heels, which clicked against the garden wall in tune to her humming voice, and to a certain rakish angle, maybe, of her bright red hat.

"How do you do?" said Billy easily. After a brief scrutiny the girl stared over his head. Billy laughed.

"Allow me," he explained, "to both apologize and introduce myself. I came primarily to see Miss Fleming, but"—he paused eloquently—"Miss Fleming is not to be seen. Therefore, the matter being urgent, I take it upon myself to seek out and enlist the assistance of her young niece. Please"—Billy held out an ingratiating hand—"be a good girl and come down and help me out."

The "good girl" regarded him contemptuously, then turned and deliberately addressed the yellow cat.

"Peter," she said, "how old do you suppose this callow youth takes us to be?" Peter continuing the toilet of his paws, the youth referred to answered in self defense.

"From the length of your dress and the look in your eyes I should take you to be about sixteen."

"Dresses are worn very short this year," she returned.

"Full grown young women in my experience," Billy told her, "are not found perched upon gateposts with cats for companions."

"Phew!" Billy whistled. "I'm one of those." The girl swung her heels.

"I knew you were," she said quietly. Uninvited, Billy seated himself upon a bench facing the little figure on the wall. His face fell gloomily. "If you knew what this assignment meant to me," he said, sighing. "How I'm counted upon it! Just because your aunt is so determined in her refusal to be interested it will be a big thing for the man who accomplishes it. You could help me out if you would. Just ask her to see me. That would be a simple thing for you to do, and it might mean so much to me."

The girl wrinkled her brows perplexedly. "Do I understand this to be an affair of the heart?" she mocked. "If so Miss Fleming might not be entirely obdurate. She has been quoted by one of your papers as searching for a 'soul mate.' So if that is the case"— The girl slipped gracefully down from the wall.

"The Lord forbid!" ejaculated Billy. "I'm pretty anxious for this interview, but not desperate enough to propose to a female encyclopedia in order to get it. Pardon me," he added hastily, "I forgot she was your aunt."

The girl waved her hands. "Oh, don't mind us," she said sweetly. "We're used to reporters. That's why we like yellow cats!"

Billy's lugubrious face brightened visibly as he looked at her standing before him. "You are a good deal older than you seemed up there upon the wall," he conceded.

The girl nodded. "Yes," she repeated seriously, "a good deal older."

For a moment she stood studying his good natured, disappointed face, then impulsively seated herself at his side. "Maybe," she suggested, "just maybe, you know, I could answer a few of those questions of yours without disturbing my aunt."

"You!" Billy's brows went up incredulously.

She nodded. "I always go over my aunt's copy as it comes from the machine."

Breathlessly Billy grabbed at pencil and paper. "It's a confounded subject to get at," he said apologetically, "but I'll do my best from these instructions."

"Let's see," interrupted the girl. And in a moment it was her pencil that was flying across the pages of Billy's notebook.

"There!" she said at last, raising a sparkling, glowing face. "That covers the subject pretty well, I think. And now"—with a childish movement she held the book behind her back—"promise before I give it to you, solemnly promise, that you won't open this, won't read a word of it, till you are back in the office."

"It's some trick, then," said Billy sadly. "I knew it was too good to be true."

"Promise," demanded the girl. "My hand on it," she added quickly.

Billy glanced into the teasing, tempting eyes, down at the little proffered hand, then surrendered.

"Cross your heart," laughed the girl.

"Cross my heart," said Billy.

Over the soft hand he held close in his own he saw suddenly a woman's erect form approaching, a woman with fine, intelligent features and white, severely brushed hair.

Blushing confusedly, the girl withdrew her hand, leaving in its place the reporter's book.

"Auntie," she said, "I'll be with you directly."

"Goodby," she added meaningly as with new hopefulness Billy waited. "Goodby," the girl repeated and, picking up her yellow cat, passed swiftly through the garden gate.

Dazedly Billy glanced after them. "The witch," he muttered. "What nonsense has she scribbled in that book. Nothing to do with the case, of course. Billy Atkins, you've been cleverly disposed of, and just when you might have landed real copy."

But there was his promise. Jove! He could still feel the firm clasp of that little hand. A very pleasant and heretofore unknown sensation trembled about the region of Billy's honest heart.

"Jove!" he murmured again and laughed softly.

"What luck?" cried Brothers as Billy tried to pass unseen into the seclusion of his office. He must read her message alone. Half an hour later he rushed about wildly, his voice triumphant.

"What luck?" he cried. "What luck? Well, just about the best ever. Full and comprehensive article, personal touch, too, because it was written by the lady herself."

"Oh, come off!" jeered Brothers, but Billy was back in his room reading again a personal postscript.

"You're to be congratulated," he read, "upon having this enlivening article direct from the pen of the author, for poor little I am the author. Aunt is only my amanuensis. I couldn't help it, could I, because you got us mixed? I'm doing this to make up for my disagreeable remark as to the preference for 'cats,' and here's hoping for that promotion. Yours, Helene Fleming."

Billy closed his eyes in smiling reminiscence, then rushed to the phone. "May I come out tonight," he begged his unseen listener, "to try at least to speak my gratitude?"

There was silence for a moment. "Unless," he added humbly, "you still have a preference for yellow cats?"

"If," answered Miss Fleming sweetly, "you can overcome your aversion to a female encyclopedia."

"Coming now," cried Billy.

"'Righto,'" laughed the learned Helene.

The hours seemed long to Billy while waiting for his watch to tell him that it was a proper hour to call. He took it out so often that once he thought it had stopped and put it to his ear to test it. But when the hands stood at 7:30, the time he had set for starting, he began a journey that should have required twice the time he gave it. The days were still long, and he was informed that he would find the authoress where he had met her before—in the garden. There he went and there we leave them.

London Through the Ages.

The occupation of the site of London dates back much farther than most readers are aware. The city that Julius Caesar found occupied a site which had been inhabited for unnumbered thousands of years. It is now known that during paleolithic and neolithic times—the two great divisions of the stone age—man dwelt on the site of London, but it first became the settlement of a community at the opening of the historic age, when it was a stronghold of the Celts. The remains of its Roman period are the finest of the kind in Great Britain. The Anglo-Saxon and Danish periods are finely represented, and even later periods, such as the Tudor, furnish relics that have been buried by that strange process of superincumbent growth which makes the soil under a great city resemble the fossiliferous strata of geology.

Alaska's "Pupmobile."

The "pupmobile" is a passenger train drawn over a regular railroad track by dog power. It carries passengers from Nome, Alaska, across the level land near that town into the mountains.

The track is a narrow gauge railroad built in 1900. A high tax was placed on railroads in Alaska soon after that, and as there was not enough traffic over the road to justify the expense of operating locomotives, the regular train service was discontinued. Then the "pupmobile" was instituted. The accommodation for passengers consists of a platform on which are two seats. To this from seven to fifteen dogs are harnessed, and the rate at which they travel compares favorably with much of our "rapid transit."—Popular Science Monthly.

At the Equator in Africa.

There are only two seasons—the wet and the dry—at the equator in Africa. The former is the summer season and lasts eight months. The thermometer averages from 110 to 125 degrees Fahrenheit. The other four months are the cold or dry season, and the thermometer rarely goes below 70 degrees Fahrenheit. During the rains the natives live in houses made principally of bamboo and roofed with leaves, but as soon as the rains stop, which is some time around June 1, they desert their towns and set out for the forests and jungles. The few household furnishings are transported on the heads of the women and children.

A Holy Chinese City.

One of the least known cities of China is Urga, where sand, squalor and holy men are the predominating features. Urga lies at the edge of a desert in north China, and its people are most un-Chinese in appearance. It is said that every third man met there is a lama. The chief lama in Urga is as great a personage in the north as the Dalai lama half a continent away. Thousands upon thousands of lesser lamas adore him and tens of thousands of the populace in their turn adore the lesser lamas. There is also a college for the study of religion in Urga, so that men in all stages of holiness are present in great numbers. There are frequent festivals.

But Brave Gunner Wanted to Go on Fighting.

During the recent visit of King George to the battle fleet several tales of heroism during the great Jutland fight were told, of which the following stands out pre-eminently:

A heavy shell struck a big gun-turret of a super-dreadnought with a crash that was felt throughout the ship. It put every man of one gun crew out of action. The gun-layer was least injured, but he had one leg carried off. With the limb hanging by a shred of flesh he tried to rally the dead and dying in his turrett and continue the battle. He never felt his injury. As he was calling on the dying men to go back to their gun he was removed on a stretcher, and the fleet surgeon saved his heroic life, operating in a lull of the battle by the light of an electric torch alone. Of none do the men speak with more enthusiasm than of their surgeons.

In another case a seaman remained placidly throughout the action on the turret roof cleaning the periscope and gunsights as the German shells shrieked overhead, and as, at short intervals, storms of splinters swept the armour. He bore a charmed life, and at the end showed never a scratch. Yet, as a sub-lieutenant told us, the big shells passed continually over the ship. He himself was minded at one moment of the battle to see what the enemy was doing, and laboriously hoisted himself out of the man-hole at the top of the turret. Just as he did so a monstrous object passed it with a scream overhead, and he knew it for a big German shell. He did not prolong his observations.

In another case an officer found a huge stoker—who weighs 17½ stone and pulls like Hercules in the stokers' tug-of-war team—carrying on with a deep cut a foot long in his arm and bad burns from the flash of a shell. Nor would he leave his station to be bandaged till a direct military order to that effect had been given by his superior.

Right From the Heart.

A little boy in the city followed the suggestions of his father (who somehow in the midst of "the turmoil" has managed to live for the good things of life and let the banalities which take up the popular attention alone) that he keep a diary.

The little fellow found it rather difficult to make records, not understanding that the human document must be beautifully simple. But one day he struck the keynote of life with just one bold, unconscious stroke:

"This has been a fine day. Mother did not go anywhere all day."

Canes of Rhinoceros Horn.

Probably some of the most expensive canes to manufacture are those from rhinoceros horns. Such a cane, when made of one piece of horn, often costs as high as $500. The high price is due to the expert treatment which the rhinoceros horn requires immediately after the beast has been slain.

Birds Will Come Back.

The strongly developed homing instincts of birds can be relied on to attach them to the neighborhood where they first saw the light, and the identical pairs which nest in the houses provided for them one year will often return the next season to enjoy the same bounty and protection.

This Nutritious Food Relieves Constipation

YOU can choose two ways of relieving constipation—the artificial and injurious by means of expensive drugs, and the natural method by means of balanced food. Roman Meal, invented by a physician, not only relieves constipation, but it is a highly nourishing and easily digested food; you never tire of it because you can enjoy it in so many different ways.

Dr. Jackson's

has all the delicious flavor and nourishing food value of entire berries of wheat (30%), rye (35%), flaxseed (25%) and wheat bran (10%). Flaxseed is three times as nourishing as wheat, rye or oats. It is rendered absolutely tasteless and odorless by electricity.

We have from thirty to forty feet of digestive tube because our ancestors for many ages ate food that contained more waste than nutrition. Man's forty foot digestive tract is mostly muscle which has nothing to do with actual digestion. These bowel muscles positively will not function unless there is sufficient waste in the food to stimulate them to natural action. Lack of waste means constipation. Meat, white flour and refined cereals have but little waste. Constant use of impoverished foods like white flour and highly refined cereals causes the muscles of the tract to weaken from lack of exercise, and then the constipation becomes chronic—or worse.

Roman Meal has the full, proper amount of branny waste to stimulate the bowel muscles to action and thus relieve constipation; its flaxseed acts as a lubricant. When used alone, bran causes catarrh of the bowel. In Roman Meal this is counteracted by the soothing flax. Roman Meal positively relieves constipation, or the Roman Meal Company will return your money.

No wonder the medical profession everywhere endorses this great food. For it is made from the prescription of a physician—a specialist in Dietetics.

Roman Meal is the most delicious and the most nourishing food ever invented. Do not stir the porridge except while mixing meal and water or you positively spoil it.

At all grocers.

ALSATIAN CHILDREN MASTERING FRENCH

Classes Established in Reclaimed Part of the Province Are Attended by 12,000.

THANN, Alsace.— Twelve thousand Alsatian children are now trying to lose their German accent in French schools in the three districts into which the liberated part of Alsace has been divided for administrative purposes.

A fortnight after the French troops entered Dannemarie, the first Alsatian town reoccupied, French schools were in operation, with French officers and soldiers as teachers; consequently a number of pupils have now had three years' instruction in French, which at once supplanted German, under the French system of absolutely free education, with books and school supplies furnished by the State.

The progress made by the children is remarkable, except in pronunciation. The habit of pronouncing words exactly as they are spelled is so strong, they have not yet mastered the difficulties of the French mutes, diphthongs, and liaisons; but they are very proficient in grammar, which, after German, they find is mere play.

The French administration here has shown every possible tolerance of local traditions. The daily prayer in the schoolroom, abolished in French public schools years ago, has been allowed to survive. The Military Governor of the reclaimed territory has given strictest orders that no infringement upon the religious customs of the population be permitted.

Schools were installed anywhere and everywhere at the beginning, the old schoolhouses in many cities being in the danger zone. In good weather classes were heard in the open air. Now they are all provided with comfortable and safe rooms, attractively decorated and made in every way so inviting that few children are tempted to play truant.

There are 89 of these schools in operation, with 113 schoolmistresses and 99 schoolmasters, the latter recruited from among the mutilated soldiers mustered out of the army. Of the schoolmistresses 90 are Sisters of Charity of the congregation of the "Divine Providence," who had never ceased to protest against the annexation of Alsace by Germany.

The little Alsatians are working particularly hard to master the French pronunciation of consonants, for they do not want to pass for Germans after the war on account of their accent.

Never use gasoline in a room with fire or light.

Expert Testimony.

To speak distinctly and directly into the mouthpiece—

AN eminent telephone man of 30 years' experience says that this is the great need in telephoning. Over half the service difficulties would disappear if distinct and direct speaking were practised.

¶ To speak towards your telephone from a yard or so away, or to speak across it means bad transmission—often wrong numbers, misunderstanding and annoyance.

¶ You can help the service, avoid wrong numbers, misunderstanding and annoyance, by speaking distinctly, and directly into the mouthpiece, with the lips about half an inch from its rim.

German Subs Hard Hit In September

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The Evening Sun says:

Among the passengers arriving on an American liner at an Atlantic port yesterday was Major Ian Hay Beith, of the Argyle Highlanders, who has come to this country on a lecturing tour. In regard to submarine warfare, Major Beith said he understood that more German U-boats had been destroyed in the month of September than in any previous month.

Figures are not given out by the British Admiralty, but gossip in naval circles was that the British and American patrol boats had accounted for a large number of submarines in September. The Admiralty demands proof of the destruction of a U-boat, such as the bringing in of prisoners or parts of the sunken craft, before it is added to the list of victims, so there is no uncertainty about the number actually destroyed.

"Things have been going so well with the British on the Western front that I have no doubt the Germans will soon have to evacuate Ostend," said Major Beith. "This will give the British heavy artillery a chance at Zeebrugge, and will result in breaking up a troublesome U-boat base.

"Recently I had the opportunity of visiting the grand fleet. The morale of the men seemed good, and they are anxious for another go at the Germans. But the officers do not believe the German battleships will venture forth again unless the German naval heads are driven to make the move as a last desperate gamble."

SERBS UNDER TWO ENSIGNS.

Call of Race Greater Than Flag and They Deserted Austria.

There are two whole Serbian divisions—forty thousand men—which entered the war under the Austrian flag fighting against the Entente Allies, and which to-day have turned squarely around and are fighting under the Entente colors against the Central powers.

This fighting under two flags is one of the queer romances of the big war, related by Prof. Yanitch, private chaplain of King Peter of Serbia, as illustrating how the conglomerate Slav population of Southern Austria-Hungary is ready to break away from the Hapsburg master. These two divisions, originally Austrian, were forced into the ranks early in the war from Bosnia, Croatia, and Herzogovinia, the Balkan States that belong to Austria.

The population is overwhelmingly Slav, but is held in subjection by the iron military rule of the dual monarchy. It was here, at the central point of Sarajevo, that the Austrian crown prince was assassinated and the European war unchained.

The Austrian staff held the Slav forces in reserve for a time, well knowing the bitterness in the ranks. But when General Brussiloff's great drive began a year ago in Galicia, the Austrians had need of every man of their resources, and for the first time Slav was facing Slav. It was literally a fight of brother against brother. After one engagement a young Serb officer went among the enemy wounded and there found two of his brothers fatally shot by his own men and his own orders.

But the ties of race were stronger than flags. In one fight a machine gun battery attached to one of the Slav divisions opened by firing against the advancing Russians, and then swinging their pieces about ended the day by pouring their batteries into the Austrians. As the two sides came together the Slavs with the Austrian forces would call out "mi smo srbi," meaning "We are Serbs," which was the signal for steady streams of desertion from the Austrian to the Russian ranks.

Dramatic Entertainments.

In England, during the Middle Ages, though no theatres were built, some forms of dramatic entertainment were extremely popular, and were carried on with much splendor of dresses and other properties. In the fifteenth century almost every one of the great guilds or sacred fraternities acted some sort of miracle-play, usually chosen with reference to the patron-saint of the guild. Inventories of the theatrical properties of some of these guilds still exist, and in some cases the list includes the most gorgeous silk and gold damasks and magnificent damascened armor, altogether worth in modern money some thousands of pounds. The story of St. George rescuing the princess from the dragon was a very favorite subject, the princess being clad in the richest dress, adorned with real jewelry of high value, and St. George wearing very costly and elaborate armor. The dragon was an immense monster made of leather and large enough to contain seven or eight men, who worked the various parts of its body.

Food is Dearer.

Retail prices of food in the United Kingdom showed a rise of 1 per cent. during June, according to the Board of Trade Labor Gazette. Meat has increased from 3 to 5 per cent., but bacon and fish are lower, while the introduction of Government cheese caused a decline of 7 per cent. in the price of the commodity. Prices on June 30, 1917, are in average 28 per cent. dearer than on July 1, 1916. Compared with pre-war conditions, butchers' meat is double to treble the price of July, 1914, cheese more than double, tea 74 per cent. dearer, butter 65, and milk 69 per cent. dearer, in Australia 25 to 26 per cent. higher, in Canada 59 per cent. higher.

African Imports.

The total value of the exports of the Union of South Africa during the year ended December 31st, 1916, was £23,946,283, as compared with a total of £15,768,000 for the previous year.

Transmitting the Voice.

One year after the telephone was invented the phonograph was produced; in 1876 the human voice was transmitted, and in 1877 it was recorded and reproduced.

Emptying a Bottle.

Water or any other liquid cannot flow from a bottle in a steady stream because until the bottle is empty there is a continuous struggle between the tendency of the liquid to fall from the bottle and the rushing of the air to get in. When a full bottle without a cork is turned upside down there will be an alternate realization of two operations, the liquid to follow the attraction of gravitation and the air to obey its natural impulse to fill a void

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS WOMAN TOOK VINOL

It Made Her Strong and Well

Barneveld, Wis.—"I was in a weak, nervous, run-down, anaemic condition, so that my housework was a burden. Vinol was recommended, and it made me well and strong. It is certainly the best tonic and strength creator I have ever taken."—Mrs. John Lewis.

Vinol is a cod liver and iron constitutional remedy for weak, nervous, run-down conditions of men, women and children. Your money will be returned if it does not help you.

The Tobacco Habit.

If a man who uses tobacco will give it up for one day each week he will keep himself from becoming a "tobacco fiend." This is the advice of a well known doctor, who says that quite a number of men, including himself, have adopted this plan.

"By leaving off tobacco for one day a week you give your system time to get rid of the effects of the drug," he said.

"You will then enjoy your tobacco far more, too, because you have become unaccustomed to the flavor, and it is therefore more enjoyable when you resume smoking.

"The effect of tobacco is a general sedative action on the nervous system, which diminishes the power of taste and smell. That is why tea tasters seldom or never smoke.

"Leave it off for a day and the sense of taste recovers. Not only that, but leaving off tobacco for one day voluntarily breaks the tobacco habit, exercises the self control and prevents one from becoming a slave to the habit."

Mystery of Bird Flight.

A curious fact concerning birds is that the tip of the wing moves at practically the same speed in every species. This is 650 feet per minute, or nearly seven and a half miles per hour. Whether it is the tiny wren or the huge stork, the rule holds good, and even the bee comes within it. Thus the bee has a wing only a quarter of an inch long, the sparrow's wing is four inches and the stork's twenty-seven. But the bee's wing beats 11,400 times in a minute, the sparrow's 720 and the stork's only 105 times. If you multiply together the length of the wing and the number of beats you will get almost exactly the same result in the three cases—namely, stork, 2,835; bee, 2,850; sparrow, 2,880. But if ever a machine is made to fly like a bird it will have to develop far more energy than these figures stand for. A bird's energy of flight is not so great as is supposed. Although such skillful fliers when aloft, many birds cannot rise from level ground.—London Answers.

Toll of the Garbage Can.

We hear a great deal of complaining, far and near, about the high cost of living.

It has been statistically estimated that if only one slice of bread was wasted by one family every day the aggregate weight of this wasted bread would equal 625,000 pounds and would cost approximately $45,000.

Just think of that! Forty-five thousand dollars' worth of bread alone wasted in one day. And that does not include the other odds and ends that are daily dumped into the garbage pail.

No woman with an iota of intelligence and a speck of moral conscience will waste unnecessarily food of any kind.

No matter what her circumstances may be, whether rich or poor, she has absolutely no right to do so.

Mighty Sirius.

That person who knows nothing else of the starry universe knows that of the "fixed" stars Sirius, of Canis Major, is to us by far the most brilliant. We owe the dazzle of Sirius to the fact that it is one of our nearest solar neighbors, its distance being only about 50,000,000,000,000 miles. Yet if seen from the same distance as our sun it would be thirty times as bright. It is held by some astronomers that it influences to some extent our solar system and that we and some of the stars nearest to us are a group of which Sirius may be the chief.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

SEES GERMAN MENACE.

Latin Races in South America Were Being Exploited by Teutons.

How the European war has enhanced the solidarity of South American peoples is discussed in a long article in La Nacion (Buenos Aires) under the heading, "The War and Latin America." This article satirically reviews the German frightfulness campaign as a phase of twentieth century culture, and shows how the Latin race is represented in opposition through the action of France and Italy. The article declares that the German conception of France was that of a center of corruption; of Italy as that of a nation of mandolin players and punchinellos; of Spain as that of a comatose and ineffective organism; and of the Latin-American peoples as proud and useless, and exceptionally subject to exploitation by superior races.

"Even when these concepts could not be expressed openly," says this article, "they were the opinions which predominated in the thought of the German people, especially in the upper classes, and they contemplated only one privileged race, that was the Teutonic." The article continues:

"In this great war it is only a question of the right of existence for small nations, respect for international treaties, and the other great matters that have been repeatedly set forth; it is also a question of races, a question whether the people of the Latin race have a right, not so much to the predominance and pre-eminence which the Germans assume, but to be respected, to live in peace, without having their right disputed to enjoy what they have legitimately achieved. The extraordinary occurrences since August, 1914, have imposed sweeping modifications upon the ideas of the Germans. Amazed at the heroic and tenacious resistance of the Belgians, French, and Italians, they indeed talk no more of Latin decadence, and they have lost much of the infatuation and pride which they had at the beginning of the war; but it is none the less certain that before receiving the chastisement which has been given them, they had the intention of annihilating France, of dismembering Italy, of acquiring commanding positions everywhere. If they had triumphed, more than one growing country would have been converted into a German province, just as the other allies of the empire, Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and Bulgaria have been so converted. Just for this reason, many have found it incomprehensible and inexplicable that German sympathy has been observed in certain Latin nations. Since the first moment all the sympathy and preference of the people of Spanish speech ought to have been eloquently and unwaveringly expressed in favor of the people of their own race, of the people of France. Fortunately, that which was inevitable is coming to pass. From one side of the continent to the other, the opinions and sentiments of all peoples are unifying in favor of the great Latin family.

"Many object, no doubt, that idealism and sentimentalism do not amount to much in the foreign politics of a nation, and that these things, like individuals, take into account only their own convenience and their own needs. Governments of democratic countries cannot depart from this line of conduct without incurring terrible responsibility. Let us accept the theory as exact and invariable, although we may have at hand the grand and noble example of Belgium and the United States, to record merely the most recent; even then, the economic convenience and the material interests would impel the people of Latin America in general, and the Argentine Republic, in particular, to incline to the side of England, France, and Italy. We have close bonds and a debt of gratitude between us and these great nations."

The article reviews the way in which England through her capital, France through her art and literature, and Italy through labor, has aided the development of South American countries, and declares that it is certain that many of those organized undertakings and developments would pass into German hands if Germany should win the war. It says:

"During the war the Germans have revealed their intentions too clearly for us not to tremble at the idea of having the domination of the seas and supremacy in finance pass into their hands. On the day in which the Germans should find themselves without competition they would impose their militarism and subject everything to the common domination of a discipline which admits no resistance or discussion, which does away with volition and compels subjection and obedience."

Pearls in Cocoanuts.

In 1911 the then Governor of Queensland, Sir William MacGregor, obtained from Sabal Island, Torres Strait, information on the subject of the diameter of space to which root cords spread out from the base of cocoanut trees, and handed the report to the Agricultural Journal for publication. While discussing the root question, his Excellency stated that in Hawaii he had been handed a cocoanut for refreshment and that he found inside it a valuable pearl. He saw the cocoanut opened, and was quite sure the pearl was not dropped into it. He gave the pearl to a lady, who afterwards wore it at a court function in London. Singularly enough, says the Journal, we find in a book on "Tropical Agriculture," by H. A. Alford Nicholls, M.D., the following remarkable confirmation of the existence of pearls in cocoanuts. The author says, when describing the various parts of the nut, "Finally a very singular and highly prized pearl is found, in very rare circumstances, in cocoanuts, and a specimen was added to the museum of the Royal Gardens at Kew in 1892."—Family Herald.

Arum Lilies.

A British aviation officer, who did air service in East Africa, included in one of his reports a graphic description of an immense valley filled with the huge arum lilies, over which he flew somewhere in the region of Zanzibar. As he passed over the valley he was 8,000 feet high, but the perfume of the lilies reached his nostrils for a long distance.

By means of his glasses he observed that the lily flowers were "as large as elephants' ears" and that the whole of the valley had been monopolized by the beautiful flowers. The luxuriance of the vegetation was particularly remarkable. He learned later that the scent of the flowers was so overpowering in the valley that no native had ever dared to penetrate within its borders.

Burning Up Wealth.

Who can tell how extensively our preventable fires count in the cost of living? In the United States there is a fire for every minute of the year. The daily destruction of $600,000 means an economic drain that affects all business life and all domestic life. When a grain elevator burns, with a loss of 700,000 bushels of corn and 300,000 bushels of oats, or a fire in a storage warehouse destroys whole trainloads of potatoes, it is easy to see what it means. But every fire affects the cost of all commodities, although the effect, like many of our taxes, may be obscure Wagner's Music.

When Wagner's music first came in the adherents of the old school did not take kindly to it. An English conductor after a rehearsal of the introduction to "Der Fliegende Hollander" laid down his baton and said: "Really, this ends quite pleasantly. I fear some of you have been playing false notes!"

Bible Colors.

The natural colors mentioned in the Bible are white, black, red, yellow and green. The only fundamentary color of which the ancient Hebrews appear to have had a clear conception was red. They had no scientific knowledge of colors.

Quite Lucky.

Mistress—They say there are 10,000,000 germs on the cap of a milk bottle. Maid—Sure, ain't it lucky it don't wear a coat and pants?

For a Rainy Day.

Figg—I suppose you have something laid up for a rainy day? Fogg—Sure! I've a lot of things ready to soak when it comes.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Autointoxication.

The germs which are always found in putrefying food material, inside or out of the alimentary canal, are the necessary accompaniment of putrefaction, and the question may be raised whether more harm than good may not be done by preventing the growth of these bacteria, which are in reality scavengers. The natural way to overcome autointoxication is not to produce it by eating improper food and then correct it by the growth of bacteria in the intestines antagonistic to the injurious bacteria, but to adopt such a dietary and to eat in such a manner as to prevent the autointoxication which follows wrong diet. In the prevention of autointoxication the maintenance of a right mental attitude, proper exercise and other means affecting elimination, also through mastication, are important factors as well as diet.

We hope all who read this column will endeavour to keep a few flowers in the home. In addition to their beauty and fragrance, they teach neatness and order. The wife and children like to have a clean room, so that the flower, in its purity and grace, may not hsame them. And then, too, a poor man likes to feel that he has an ornament in his dwelling similar to that which a rich man chooses as the best embellishment of his drawing-room.

GERMANS CAPTURE ARENSBURG, CAPITAL OF OESEL ISLAND

Fighting Continued All Day Yesterday and German and Russian Naval Forces Were Engaged in the Struggle---British Make Successful Raid Inflicting Many Casualties--Fighting on Verdun Front

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 15.—The German forces which were landed on Oesel Island at the head of the Gulf of Riga are pushing forward to the east and south, placing in a difficult position the Russian forces and batteries in the district of Arensburg, near the southern end of the island, and especially those on the Cesel Peninsula. Military critics predict actions in the Gulf of Riga, followed by the development of the invasion to the mainland on the coast of Esthonia rather than an attempt towards the Gulf of Finland which is protected by mine fields which Germans would have to sweep under the menace of the Russian fleet.

The newspapers exhibit alarm at the landing of the Germans on Oesel Island. The Bourse Gazette says the situation of the country is more complicated because a solution must be found not only of the unsatisfactory state of affairs in the interior, but of the problem presented by the closing of the Gulf of Riga by the Germans. The Russkoya Volia says: "We are being led toward our Calvary, but perhaps we shall find our resurrection."

The Rech attributes the disaster partly to bad visibility, and the unexampled political frivolity of the leaders of the Russian democracy. The Socialist press takes the Maximalists to task. The Volia Naroda recalls Premier Kerensky's warning of the danger of a German coup in the Baltic which was stigmatized by the leader of the Maximalists as an unworthy political manoeuvre. The newspaper insists on the necessity of an implacable struggle against Maximalism.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 15.—No further infantry engagements have occurred on the front of the British front in Belgium. In successful raids yesterday large losses were inflicted on the Germans. Following is the official account of these operations:

"Our positions on the main ridge south of Broodseinde were heavily bombarded during the night by the enemy. No infantry action has taken place. In a successful raid carried out by us yesterday afternoon southeast of Monchy-Le-Preux, east county troops captured thirty-six prisoners and two machine guns. Two hundred Germans were killed by the infantry and seven of the enemy's dugouts were destroyed with explosives."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD (Official), October 15.—German forces which landed on the Russian Island of Oesel at the head of the Gulf of Riga on Friday, occupied Arensburg, the capital of the island on Saturday. Arensburg is on the southern shore of Oesel Island. The northern group of German warships, the statement adds, despatched a torpedo boat squadron between the Islands of Oesel and Dago which pressed back Russian patrols. Russian naval forces reinforced the patrol and accepted battle, whereupon the German ships retired. The fighting for Oesel Island, the War Office announces, continued all day yesterday.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 15.—Mata-Hari, the Dutch dancer and adventuress, who two months ago was found guilty by court martial on a charge of espionage, was shot at dawn this morning.

Mlle. Mata-Hari, long known in Europe as a woman of great attractiveness, and with a romantic history, was according to unofficial press despatches, accused of conveying to the Germans, the secret of the construction of Entente "tanks," this resulting in the enemy rushing work on a special gun to combat their operations. Her conviction was confirmed by a revision court, and on September 28, the supreme court confirmed the previous findings.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 15.—Violent fighting is again in progress on the Verdun front, but no further infantry actions are reported. The French raided the German lines in Champagne during the night.

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By William G. Shepperd.)

STOCKHOLM, via London (By mail) September 29.—Premier Kerensky played fearlessly with death at the Moscow democratic conference and won by his sheer unflinching nerve. He stood on a platform unarmed facing three drunken Cossack officers, red with anger and twice flung the taunt "cowards" in their faces, while the vast audience, breathless, fearful, waited for revolver shots to stretch the Russian man-of-the-hour bleeding on the platform. That they did not fire meant he had passed the supreme test of courage and nerve. Premier Kerensky presided at the Moscow conference. On the final night of the meeting a group of Cossack officers appeared as usual in the box reserved for General Korniloff on the left side of the stage. Korniloff himself was not present. The officer who lounged in his box gave every evidence of intoxication. Three of the Cossacks in the box repeatedly interrupted speakers as the meeting proceeded, and Kerensky repeatedly appealed for quiet.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

Just as you step inside the door of my store you will see the new fall hats and the smartest caps. They're at your right, and they are right. In the language of the dear, dead poet, I'm dead stuck on my cloth caps, on their smart English style and I can match in perfect harmony any suit you may be wearing. Starting at 75c., you can waft away one at $2.50. "Come to me."

LOOK AT YOURSELF.

What does your mirror tell you? If the light hurts your eyes; if you have to squint when looking at fine print, or if you are conscious of rubbing your eyes, then you should let Dr. Lacey fit you with glasses that will "open your eyes" to the futility of going without them. 410 George street.

The War Veterans Meet To-night

All members of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association are again reminded of to-night's important general meeting which will be held in the recreation room of the Armouries at 8 o'clock. Every member of the club is urged to be present at this meeting as the coming campaign for permanent headquarters will be discussed. The attendance should be a record one.

GIANTS' ERRORS PAVED WAY FOR THREE SOX RUNS

Wild Throw and Dumb Play by Zimmerman, a Muff by Robertson and Gandil's Timely Single Gave Chicago Early Lead

TO-DAY'S BIG BATTLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Prospects are that the sixth game of the world's series between Chicago and New York would be played under almost ideal weather conditions. The day opened clear and warm with every indication of still warmer weather.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15. — Chicago White Sox and New York Giants meet in the sixth contest of the World's championship baseball series in the Polo Grounds to-day. While the McGraw men know their chances are desperate they are still hopeful of turning back the White Sox and making the series even again. What little betting there has been reported since Saturday's game favours the White Sox 2 to 1, though wagers at even money have been made that the Giants will win to-day's game. Atmospheric conditions were the most favourable of the series in New York. The weather is warm and pleasing to the players after the frigid experience in Chicago last Saturday. Some of the players are sure that the erratic work by both teams in the fifth game was due to the low temperature.

The batteries announced were: Benton and Rariden for New York; Faber and Schalk for Chicago.

First Innings.

Chicago.—Fletcher came in behind Benton and took J. Collins' hopper and threw him out. McMullin sent up a weak foul to Rariden. The stands booed Eddie Collins to the echo. Collins singled sharply over second. Herzog took Jackson's slow roller and tossed him out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

New York.—Eddie Collins threw out Burns at first, Burns hitting the first ball pitched. Hezog shot a single over Eddie McMullen's head. Kauff struck out, Faber's wide curves being too much for him. Zimmerman sent a long drive right into Jackson's hands. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Second Innings.

Chicago.—Felsch struck out. Gandil got a single over the middle bag. Herzog threw out Weaver, Gandil moving to second. Zimmerman threw out Schalk, making a nice play on the

TOTAL RESULTS SO FAR.
Number examined	534
Fit for trenches	303
Fit for non-combatant service overseas	32
Fit for service in Canada	48
Unfit for any service	151

On Saturday no fewer than fifty-four candidates were examined by the local Medical Board, which constituted a new record here. Thirty-one of these were placed in A category, the percentage of men fit for the trenches falling off in the afternoon and night sessions. The total rejections for the day numbered eighteen, which was a little higher than usual.

This morning twenty-two were examined, thirteen being placed in A category, two in B and seven were rejected outright. Nine of those who went before the doctors this morning were employees of the Matthews-Blackwell Co.

The men who come in Class One under the Military Service Act are asked to note that they have until Nov. 8th to be examined, so that there is no need of everyone trying to get in at once. There is still plenty of time for examination within the time limit set by the proclamation.

Pte. Gephas Lemay, who has been invalided home from France, arrived in Lakefield on Thursday evening. Pte. Lemay enlisted in the 93rd Battalion, and going to France was transferred to the 20th Battalion. He has been twice wounded, the last time in the knee, the bullet being still embedded in that member.

Home from Overseas.

In the last couple of days Peterborough's colony of returned soldiers has been augmented by the arrival home of quite a number of men invalided from England or the front. This morning a large squad arrived unexpectedly on the 8:25 G.T.R. train. The majority were members of the 93rd Battalion. Included in the party were Ptes. Geo. Edward Woodcock, who went to France in a draft from the 93rd and saw considerable service at the front, and Ptes. Reginald Abraham, and Edward J. Dillon, of the

NO ONE HAS SO FAR REPORTED FOR SERVICE HERE

Postmaster Edgar Has Issued a Dozen Exemption Forms But No One Has Asked For a Report Blank at Local Post Office

OFFICE OPEN NIGHTS

Although the Royal proclamation was issued on Saturday morning and the necessary forms are available at the local Post Office, no one in Peterborough or district had reported for service under the Military Service Act up to 2 o'clock this afternoon.

There were, however, a number of applications for exemption forms, one of these being issued on Saturday afternoon and about a dozen this morning.

The men coming under Class One are required to either report for service or apply for exemption before Nov. 8th, and in any case must secure the required forms from the Postmaster. If a man is waiving his claim to exemption he simply fills out a report form at the Post Office. As has been noted, the first man to report has yet to turn up.

For the convenience of the men affected, Postmaster Edgar has arranged to have the Post Office open on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week at 7.30 o'clock, while of course men may obtain the necessary forms at any time during regular Post Office hours.

That the conditions here are not different from elsewhere is indicated by the following Canadian Press Despatch received by the Examiner this afternoon:

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—According to official reports the reception in all parts of Canada of the proclamation of the Military Service Act has been in every way satisfactory. At the same time unofficial press despatches from various centres insist that the applications to postmasters by Class One eligibles have been coming in very slowly, and the majority of applicants are demanding exemption applications to be filled out and presented to the tribunals. The government has to-day called attention to the fact it is not too late for persons to volunteer for whatever units they wish to join.

Court Stanley A.O.F.

Court Stanley No. 7680, A.O.F., about seventy strong, attended divine service at St. James' Methodist Church last night. Headed by the Salvation Army Band the Court marched to the Church, where the Pastor, Rev. B. J. Greatrix, preached a special sermon, which, by reason of its thoughtfulness and uplifting thoughts will carry a long and lasting influence to those who heard it.

Eastern and Western Ontario Conference to Formulate Plans—Insurgent Conservatives May Assist in Election of Opposition Candidates.

CAMPAIGN LITERATURE

(Speical to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—It now seems definitely decided that Sir Wilfrid will stick to what is left of his party, and that the Eastern and Western Ontario conferences which he announced will not only serve to separate the sheep from the goats, but will be used to formulate plans for the coming campaign.

Recent events have clarified the situation for Sir Wilfrid. He has lost part of his followers, but is no longer embarrassed by uncertainties. What is left to him is his and will follow. He may also get a certain support from dissatisfied Conservatives, but the extent of this is problematical.

CONSERVATIVES DISSATISFIED.

The Conservative dissatisfaction exists. It is, in fact, omnipresent, but most of the insurgents don't like Laurier any better than they do Borden. They are going up and down in the land denouncing union government as a "Grit scheme," and Borden as a "weakling," but this very attitude leaves them without party allegiance of any kind and pending organization of their ranks without redress against the existing parties. The most they can do is to put straight Conservatives in the field in various constituencies, in many of which, however, such a move would only result in the election of Laurier Liberals who would "slip in" between the straight Conservative and the Unionist-Conservative candidates. Perhaps this is one reason why Sir Wilfrid believes he will capture more seats than his opponents think.

At any rate it is said that funds are available to finance the Laurier campaign and that an unusual supply of election literature is ready or in course of preparation. While the formation of a union government has meant the "scrapping" of tons of Conservative literature, most of the Laurier literature will need little revision as it is the intention of the Laurier party to continue to call the new ministry "the Borden Government," their contention being that it is still a Conservative Government, though includ-

THE RED CROSS CALL.

A meeting of the Advisory Board of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society, held in the Public Library, this afternoon, is a matter of more than official interest. It involves an appeal to the public spirit of all those who have or take an interest—as all should do—in the welfare of the soldiers who, in the midst of ever-present and dreadful danger; in mud and wet, and storm of shot and shell mingled with the storms of the elements, are bravely fighing and suffering wounds and sickness for us.

In the midst of our home comforts and our home security we cannot turn a deaf ear to the call for our help through the medium of the Red Cross Society. When soldiers are wounded or sick they need field comforts and hospital supplies to soothe their suffering, promote their comfort, and help them to healing treatmen. The best skill of surgeons falls short of its best results without adequate and proper bandages and other appliances, and convalescence cannot progress satisfactorily without comforts.

We mus think of these things; not in a careless, general way, but with a sense of our responsibility to contribute means to help furnish these supplies. For the most of us, ours is the easy part—to give money. The chief burden of the work—the expenditure of the money—the making of articles—falls upon the noble band of women who have been busy early and late, sacrificing personal comfort, social pleasures, and perhaps, even home duties, for the sake of the soldiers—our soldiers, our boys, whom we know and follow in spirit into the field of carnage and discomfort.

Of all the agencies called into activity by the war the Red Cross is the most noble, the most direct, the most individual in its work for the soldier, and at a time and in circumstances when he most needs help. In contributing to the funds of the Red Cross we sometimes may make small sacrifices, but they are as nothing compared with the great sacrifice made—for us and ours—by our soldier sons and husbands and brothers. This calls for our petty sacrifice, if our hearts are large enough, if our interest is keen enough, to give to the point of sacrifice, which most of us need not do, but still by doing liberally, I conribute effectively to the work of financing the provision of help and comforts for our suffering soldiers.

Peterborough's generous help is a patriotic duty, a moral duty, and even a religious duty if we apply to it the great lesson of our Blessed Lord's parable of the Good Samaritan. We can "bind up wounds" and "pour in oil and wine," or, like the priest and the Levite, "pass by on the other side." Which shall it be?

We can all, and all should be, finance ministers to the noble company of Red Cross women workers in Peterborough.

THE UNION CABINET.

It is too early to pronounce settled opinion upon the new Dominion Cabinet. The personnel is not fixed; every despatch announcing some change. The allocation of portfolios is, therefore, not decided upon. Most of the new material, in the matter of ability, is promising. Some big new men have joined the government. In one of the most important portfolios there has been a change for the better. Hon. T. A. Crerar of Winnipeg, the new Minister of Agriculture, in addition to his having had extensive practical experience as a farmer, has had large business experience, and shown large business capacity as head of the Grain Growers' Association.

Labour interests, however, have not much occasion to throw up their hats. Labour, instead of having sympathetic and adequate representation in the new Cabinet, has little that can be boasted of. It is stated as probable that Hon. Martin Burrell, late Minister of Agriculture, will be Minister of Labour. It does not seem to be a popular recognition of Labour to have its interests placed in charge of the discarded Minister of the Agricultural Department, who, in that capacity, did not exhibit qualities that saved him from reproach for incapacity by his own party friends. With all other interests represented it is not promising that after waiting so long Labour should not have a representative in sympathy with its interests and worthy of its claims.

It is hoped that this overlooking of labour interests may not mean that the "big interests" have still a dominating influence in national administration, something that is not a good thing if that influence is used to advance "big interests" at the expense of popular interests.

A union or win-the-war government was advocated in the hope of uniting all the elements of the country in the work of prosecuting Canada's share of war participation. In its personnel and policy it should be democratic to a degree, and include fair representation as a partial guarantee of the safeguarding of every important interest of the country.

The union, or coalition, or composite government is now virtually a fact. Organized as an instrument in uniting the people of Canada in the work of helping win the war, it is entitled to the loyal backing of the people of Canada, it should be given a fair trial and loyal support—at any rate till it demonstrates whether or not it fulfils the expectations of improved war administration and general government. If it proves worthy of the great trust it has assumed it will inspire the confidence and cooperation of the people. It must be judged by its policy and record.

PREPARE FOR SPRING.

It is understood the results of the greater production enterprise in Peterborough have been satisfactory; that on the whole the growth of food has been largely increased; though even at that to a lesser degree than would have been probable under better conditions of culture and with greater popular knowledge of gardening. Many of the amateurs were entirely new to the business, and their work was to a large extent experimental.

Many have learned by their experience of this summer and will do better another year. The need for national production of food articles, is as great as ever, if not greater. In gardening and farming, as well as in war, preparedness is one of the important conditions of success. This applies especially, however, to gardening. This year it was the fact that some crops, especially tomatoes, did not ripen satisfactorily. If this were due to late planting, the lesson is to look out for earlier seeding and planting.

As a rule it is held in farming that the earlier the seeding the better. If this applies to gardening also, those who contemplate home gardens next year should prepare for spring planting; provide proper fertilizers and have the ground proposed to be planted cleaned of weeds which, if the weather permits, should be burned on the spot to destroy seeds. On some soils earlier planting is possible, by having the ground spaded or ploughed in the fall. If the plot is not too large the soil might be thrown up in ridges, three or four feed wide at the base. This permits of good drainage, and working the plot much earlier than when spading or ploughing is left till spring and the soil will be in warmer condtion. The sides of the ridges are warmed by the early spring sunshine, and when the trench is levelled the soil as a whole, is warmer and earlier ready for seed.

Precaution, preparation and thorough culture help to better production. "A little farm well tilled" is a motto that has an application to the home garden as well as to the farm. It is often demonstrated that the paying results are better from thorough culture of smaller farms or plots than tilling too much in an superficial and imperfect manner. The Monetary Times cites an instance in proof of this. It says:

"The other morning, the manager of a Western loan company had brought to his attention a report by one of the company's inspectors on a block of land in the neighbourhood of Winnipeg, comprising several hundred acres of the best soil in the country. This had been broken up and brought under cultivation two years ago by the owner, who is a city man. It had been so inefficiently farmed during the past season that in a year when the entire Red River Valley is harvesting one of the best crops in its history, this magnificent property has produced about four bushels of wheat to the acre and this newly broken land is thoroughly infested with noxious weeds. In other words, where a man had the equipment and labour properly to cultivate fifty acres of land, he has undertaken several hundred, with the inevitable result of a great waste of labour and the fouling of a tract of the best land in the West."

With this example in mind, it seems wise for those who contemplate planting small gardens next year to prepare in time for early seeding, with thorough soil preparation and fertilizing, to be followed by thorough care and cultivation. The chances for success are better. With early planting, well manured soil, careful cultivation and destruction of weed growths, with timely preparation, early planting and careful cultivation of a plot as large as can be well handled, the propects of good crops are far better than if preparations are all left to the last moment, and more area planted than can be thoroughly cared for.

The character of the new government will largely be determined by the extent to which the old "leaven" leavens the new "lump."

LINDSAY CADET MEETS DEATH

Lindsay, Oct. 9.—On Saturday the sad news reached Lindsay that David A. Swayze, eldest son of Judge and Mrs. Swayze of Lindsay, and a cadet in the Royal Flying Corps, went to his death near Camp Borden as a result of an accident to his machine.

On Saturday morning the unfortunate Cadet was out for a practice flight and was flying over Alliston. He was above the clouds for a time, and when coming into view was suddenly seen to sideslip, and to appear in difficulties. His machine quickly descended and struck the earth with great force, a portion of it being buried two feet into the ground. Cadet Swayse's body was terribly bruised when found, and was taken to Camp Borden in a motor truck. On Sunday the remains were brought to Lindsay in charge of two cadets, and taken to the residence of his parents on Bond street.

On Monday morning at 8 o'clock, impressive funeral services were conducted at the home by Rev. Mr. Horn, of Cobourg, assisted by Rev. A. H. Going, of the Cambridge street Methodist church. The other clergy present were: Revs. Canon Marsh, Bryant and Johnston. The remains were then taken to the G.T.R. station. Interment took place at Dunnville, the former home of the dead aviator and his parents.

The late David A. Swayze, who was in his 23rd year, was a young man of splendid character, and of great promise. He received his early education at Dunnville and graduated from Osgoode Hall last spring, afterwards entering the law office of Mr. Thomas Stewart. A few weeks ago he joined the Royal Flying Corps and was stationed at Camp Borden. His brother aviators spoke of him in the highest terms. As an aviator he always displayed excellent judgment, and they are at a loss to know how the fatality occurred.

Besides his sorrowing parents, the deceased is survived by two sisters, Mrs. James Lawson, of Toronto, and Miss Monica, at home; also two brothers, Keith, in the Royal Flying Corps, and at present on his way overseas, and Russell, of Lindsay.

Holland Reduces Live Stock Supply

Slaughter of Animals is Ordered by the Government Owing to the Lack of Feed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—In an interview to-day Julius E. Van Der Wielen, head of the Netherlands mission to the United States, asserted that Holland has begun the slaughter of part of her live stock because of the shortage of feed.

On July 12 last, he said, it was officially proposed that live stock be killed in the following proportions, the reduction being necessary because of the lack of feed:

Poultry, 50 per cent.; pigs, 50 per cent.; sheep, 95 per cent.; young horses, 50 per cent.; other horses, 25 per cent.; young cattle, 30 per cent.; cows and bulls, 20 per cent.

A further reduction will take place, it is said, if Holland is compelled to rely on her own production of feed.

Mr. Van Der Wielen continued:

"We will be obliged to continue the killing, which was begun before the commission left Holland, unless the United States sells us feeding stuffs. Without these importations from the United States, Holland will have to will at least 50 per cent. of all her live stock.

"We do not possess sufficient cold storage facilities to permit us to keep the fresh meat, and we haven't materials to build cold storage plants. Even if we had the materials, we haven't the coal to run them. A part of the fresh meat will be distributed to the people at low prices, and some will be preserved, but that will be only a drop in the bucket because we haven't salt. So we shall have to sell the meat.

"When we left Holland there was a rumour that the United Kingdom would not buy our beef. Generally speaking, the English people do not like Dutch beef, and, as England is not hungry, she will continue to buy only the best beef. Perhaps the British will buy some of the mutton and bacon, but the greater part of the meat will go to Germany.

"Public opinion in the United States believes Holland is obliged to send foodstuffs to Germany. There is no such obligation, only an agreement, as with the Allies, that if there is a surplus it ought to be divided according to the percentages agreed upon in case of exports."

Mr. Van Der Wielen said Holland was in "a very tight hole" just now; the bread ration period had been extended; many foodstuffs, including all fats, were under Government control, and prices had gone up to a point beyond the reach of the working people. Last year, he said, the Government had to supply about 80,000,000 guilders for the purpose of assisting the people to purchase foodstuffs, and for the same purpose this year the figures will reach 120,000,000 guilders.

ing Liberal members. It would seem most of Sir Wilfrid's former cabinet colleagues are still with him. These include Fisher, King, Lemieux, Oliver, Murphy, and the former Solicitor-General Jacques Bureau. Hon. George P. Graham is spoken of doubtfully, but is of course a conscriptionist. Hon. Dr. Pugsley, strange to say, is mentioned as a possible Unionist candidate. So is "Ned" Macdonald. Yet these two men were strongly pro-Laurier during the whole conscription debate. Their long political association with Mr. Carvell may have carried them over nominally at any rate into the Unionist camps.

YOUNG MEN WARNED.

Rather surprising news comes today from Quebec where a Laurier triumph is of course conceded. This is to the effect that many of the cures yesterday warned their young men that conscription is now law and must be obeyed. Some went so far as to say that they approve it now that they understand it and that many of the young men in their communities ought to be at the front any way. It is anticipated that the ministry will put candidates in many constituencies where the fight is hopeless with the idea of carrying on an educational campaign. It is suggested that these defeated candidates will then have the patronage of their ridings after the election, but Unionist ministers on the other hand declare that patronage is not going to exist hereafter.

Senator Simmons was discussing the proposed war tax on automobile owners. "Making war taxes," he said, "isn't pleasant work. It puts one in the position of the facetious minister at Ocean Grove, who took a little girl on his knees, and said:

"All the ladies on the breeze-swept verandah laughed, but little Nellie frowned and said:

"'You've got to love me. You've got to.'

"'Got to? How so?' laughed the divine.

"'Because,' said Nellie, stoutly, 'you've got to love them that hate you — and I hate you, goodness knows!'"—Washington Star.

Prize List Of Millbrook Fair Shows Many Well Known Names Among Those Who Won Honours

MILLBROOK, Oct. 9—In spite of bad roads and very showery weather, upwards of three thousand people were on the grounds, and though heavy showers during the afternoon interfered with the carrying out of the programme, yet all seemed to enjoy themselves, and the crowd, though some times none too comfortable, were always good natured. The Red Cross workers served excellent meals in the dining hall, and the proceeds netted them $200. The proceeds of the gate and concert were about $850.00. Had the weather been more favourable, a record would have been made, as a splendid programme had been arranged, and no pains spared to provide a good time for the visitors. With better weather another year Millbrook Fair should have an attendance of at least 5,000.

Races.

The races resulted as follows:

Free-For-All.

1—J. Elmhirst, "Frank McKerron" 2, Henry A. Fallis, "Bonnie K."; 3, Norin Henry, "Jim Todd."

2.30 Class:

1, S. J. McMillan, "Thorrpatch"; 2, J. Dinsdale, "Jack Brooks," 3, S. Bedpath's "Path Seeker."

Named race for colts.

1, Milton Fallis, "Cavan Blazer," 2, Henry A. Fallis, 'Evelyn K."

The races were well contested and, considering the slippery nature of the track, after the heavy rain, good time was made in the different events.

The Peterborough 57th Regimental Band, which were to have been on hand at noon, had hard luck with their autos and did not arrive till about 3.15. However, what music they supplied was greatly enjoyed.

The prize list is as follows:

HORSES.

Brood mare and foal—1, H. Bowins, 2, F. C. H. Bent; 3, J. Lancashire.

Foal of 1917—1, H. Bowins; 2, F. C. H. Bent; 3, J. Lancashire.

One year old gelding or filly—1, J. Lancashire.

Two year old filly or gelding—1, D. H. Wood and Sons; 2, Jos. Lancashire.

Pair horses in harness—1st, W. H. Hoskin; 2, J. W. Knapp.

Single horses in harness—1, Chris. Graham.

TO SEND DRAFTED MEN'S CLOTHING TO BELGIUM

Discarded Apparel which They Wear to the Camps Will Protect Sufferers Over There.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Thousands of needy Belgians may be protected from the coming Winter's rigors by clothing contributed by the men of America's new national army under plans set in motion to-day by Secretary Baker, at the suggestion of Herbert Hoover, National Food Administrator, and former Chairman of the Commission for Relief in Belgium.

Men called to service under Selective Draft law discard for uniforms the civilian clothing wear to the cantonments, and are asked to give this to the Belgians. Permission has just been obtained to ship 400,000 tons clothing into Belgium, across Dutch frontier, and the gifts of new soldiers would be sent in this permit.

Charles A. Englebracht and ney Sackett have been named by Relief Commission to handle and they have been assured by and hey have been assured by General Bliss, Chief of Staff, of hearty co-operation of the War partment.

Commanding officers at the tonments were advised of the by General Bliss in a telegr which read:

"Each drafted man in your can ment could feel that by this co bution he had already begun to der most valuable service in cause for which he is taking arms. Give this matter earnest sideration with a view to secu as large a contribution as possib

REPRISALS.

I had so hoped that England migh free
From studied baseness—this inju
Could not be written in her hist

But now the sullen murmur of throng
Is heard above the soldiers' ma ing song
In clamour for reprisals—wrong wrong!

Must England dooom her flyers to task?
Knightly are they, though helmed leathern casque—
Shall she compel them to the h man's masque?

Let England trust her valiant fli line—
It shall thrust deep beyond the man Rhine.
Leave vengeance to the One who "'tis mine."

We Can Help You Stimulate Business

A little stimulation in Midsummer may put you back in the running again, and even yet, if you concentrate your efforts, use liberally the means that have made others prosper in your line of business you can succeed as they did.

Some Merchants Say:—

"As Soon as Business Picks Up I'll Advertise"

This is not consistent. The farmer does not wait until harvest time to sow his seed—and, remember this, that if you ever reach the point in business where you believe you can get along without advertising, somebody else will own your business. ¶ It isn't the age of a house that counts most. It's the efficient, up-to-date, daily publicity that brings its goods before the buyers that spells SUCCESS.

If it's ADVERTISING—let us talk it over with you. Our service is at your disposal at any time.

CONFERENCE AT LONDON

(Special to the Examiner).

TORONTO, Oct. 15. — W. H. Adams, secretary of the General Reform Association of Ontario, who has returned from Ottawa, where he had conferences with Sir Wilfrid, announces that in all probability London will be selected as a meeting place between the Liberals of Western Ontario and Sir Wilfrid. The conference will be held next week, but the date is not yet definitely fixed. The annual meeting of the Ontario Reform Association, usually held in November, may not be called until the date of the Federal election is announced.

Mayor Duffus In Toronto To-morrow

Mayor Duffus will attend a meeting in Toronto to-morrow of Hydro-Electric power interests. It is understood that the rumoured renewal of attempts to erect a power dam in the St. Lawrence will be opposed. In this connection Toronto reports to-day Premier Borden's statement to Mayor Church that this rumour is without foundation. Mayor Duffus will again invite Sir Adam Beck to visit Peterborough.

Composition Of The War Council Out Shortly

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—Composition of new war cabinet will be announced shortly. It will consist of seven members, including Sir Robert Borden, Prime Minister, Hon. N. W. Rowell, President of the Privy Council, Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, Major General Mewburn, Minister of Militia and Defence, and probably Sir George Foster and Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. C. C. Ballantyne. Further Cabinet changes await developments from Nova Scotia. Premier Murray is now at Halifax consulting with his friends regarding Secretaryship of State. Cabinet Council this afternoon will draw plans for election.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Now that a coalition government at Ottawa is an accomplished fact and that an election is due within the near future, would it not be well for the members of the Conservative and Liberal parties in West Peterborough to come together and choose a unionist candidate to represent them in the next Parliament of Canada?

I am not a politician, and never attended a political convention of either party. I may, therefore, perhaps be a little out in forecasting the names of any gentlemen that would be acceptable to the members of both parties and suitable to represent this constituency in the new Unionist Government. I think, however, that if either Mr. E. A. Peck or Mr. G. A. Gillespie would consent to become a candidate in this election, there would be no doubt about the result. Either of these men, who are well and favourably known throughout the constituency, would, no doubt, give a good account of themselves and would be able to bring to the discussion—especially in connection with a vigorous prosecution of the war—a sane, sound, practical and matured judgment.

Yours truly,
UNIONIST.

Peterborough, Oct. 15th, 1917.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I notice by your issue of to-day that a charge under the Ontario Temperance Act was heard at the City Police Court. You state that the case was adjourned for a week, during which I will inquire from the Department for a ruling on the point apparently in issue. That the case was adjourned for a week for the License Inspector to prohibit any person, who is a habitual drunkard from obtaining liquor. I was not interested in the case in any way. It was a city case, the prosecution was conducted by the Chief of Police, City Solicitor Gordon, not being present, nor, as far as I know, on a pleasure trip to Camp Borden or elsewhere. There is no occasion, in my opinion, to inquire from the Department for a ruling and the License Inspector had no interest, nor was he prosecuting this case.

Yours truly,
G. W. HATTON.

Mr. Rowell Is No Longer In The Legislature

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—Hon. N. W. Rowell is no longer a member of the Ontario Legislature. At the Provincial Buildings to-day it was stated that the moment he became president of the council in the Union Government, he automatically dropped out of the Provincial Legislature. It is not necessary for him to go through the formality of resigning. The seat in North Oxford, which Mr. Rowell represented in the Legislature, has not been declared vacant, nor is it likely such a step will be taken immediately.

A bye-election should be held within ninety days of the date the vacancy occurred, if the election law is strictly observed, but in view of the circumstances which necessitated Mr. Rowell's retirement from the Legislature it would not be surprising if an agreement would be carried out whereby North Oxford would be allowed to return a Liberal member without opposition for the few months which are the remainder of the life of the present Legislature.

LIBERALS OF THE LEGISLATURE WILL CONFER

(Special to the Examiner).

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—G. C. Hurdman, M.P.P. for Ottawa West, and Assistant Liberal Whip in the Ontario Legislature, has called a meeting of the Liberal members in the Legislature for Thursday next at the rooms of the General Reform Association of Ontario in Toronto.

The deliberations will be important.

Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., now a member of the new Union Government, has sent a telegram to each Liberal M.P.P. from Ottawa. In this message he retires as leader of the Ontario Opposition, and it follows therefore that the question of appointing his successor will be considered.

"Who will succeed Mr. Rowell?" your correspondent asked a prominent Liberal.

"I do not know," was the answer.

Enough Rain For The Farmers

The farmers have had enough rain for their requirements. The land is in good shape for fall ploughing, and the work is moving along briskly between showers. Only one thing disturbs the farmer's peace of mind, and that is the steam thresher and the silo cutters. The presence of these outfits in the neighbourhood spells lost time for the farmer, so far as ploughing operations are concerned. The majority of farmers in Peterborough County are so short of help that they are compelled to attend their own threshings and silo cutting operations.

NEGRO SENTRY KILLS MAN WHO FAILS TO HEAR HALT ORDER

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 15.—Serious race rioting was threatened for more than an hour at Camp Ordway, which is in course of construction in the outskirts of Washington, when a negro sentry killed an aged carpenter who did not hear his command to halt. The men employed in the cantonment work, about four hundred in all, quit work and demanded the withdrawal of the negro guards. Trouble was averted with much difficulty by the combined efforts of the military and police authorities. Mr. Baker, Secretary of War, ordered the removal of the negro troops. White soldiers will take their places.

The man who was shot was Andrew J. Cooper, seventy-two years old, a Confederate veteran and one of the charter members of the first carpenters' union formed in the United States. He had been deaf for years and consequently did not hear the challenge of Jerry Ward, a private of Company A, First Separate Battalion, District of Columbia National Guard, a negro organization. When Cooper did not stop at the gate Ward fired at him, the bullet lodging in his left side. Cooper fell unconscious. He was taken to a hospital in an automobile but died soon after his arrival.

When reports of the shooting spread around the cantonment the carpenters and other workmen laid down their tools. They demanded that the negroes be withdrawn before they would continue. The crowd grew from four hundred to nearly a thousand, reinforced by other men on their way to work in the neighbourhood. There were many threats of violence to the negroes and it seemed as though a free-for-all fight could not be averted.

In the meantime the military authorities arrested Ward and took him to Washington barracks to await court martial. The crowd made a demand for him, but this was refused.

Army officers in charge of the camp construction, together with policemen, succeeded in quieting the crowd. Finally, after more than an hour, the carpenters, refusing to go back to work, returned to their homes, to meet later and prepare a formal demand for the withdrawal of the negro sentries.

The camp at which the shooting occurred is being built for the training of machinists for the army.

Borden, White And Rowell For The War Council

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 15.—It is definitely settled that Sir Robert Borden, N. W. Rowell, and Sir Thos. White, are to be members of Canada's War Council, the executive body within the Cabinet which will deal with matters arising out of the war. These are the only three names so far settled. If there is a third Conservative it will be Hon. Arthur Meighen. Either Mr. Carvell or Mr. Murray will be on the Council, and the probabilities which at first pointed to Carvell are now pointing to Murray, as the portfolio of Public Works will be a heavy burden in itself.

LITTLE GIRL IS MISSING

Parry Sound Youngster May Have Been Carried Off By Gypsies

(Canadian Press Despatch).

PARRY SOUND, Oct. 15. — Big search parties with bloodhounds and Indian trackers have been unable to find Iris Jones, aged three, daughter of Wm. S. Jones, munition worker here. The little girl strayed from home on Saturday last, and was traced to a spot near which a gang of gypsies had encamped Saturday.

Three Chickens Gone, Neighbour Had Pigeon Pie

Charged with stealing three thoroughbred White Wyandotte hens from her neighbour, Mrs. John McWilliams, Mrs. George Keys, Ware street, stated in police court this morning that the feathers seen in her house by P. C. Blade and Mrs. G. T. Downer had been plucked from three pigeons which had gone into a "pot-pie." At the conclusion of the case, Magistrate Dumble asked rather significantly if she would pay for the chickens, voracious hens her lawyer, Mr. J. Guise Bagley described them, valued at $2 each, but Mrs. Keyes emphatically replied, "No, Mr. Dumble, I'll go to jail first before I'll pay for them, and you can get some one to look after my children while I'm in."

P. C. Blade stated that he found white feathers spread out on the floor in a room off the kitchen in Mrs. Keys' home. They were fluffy and not like pigeon feathers. He was confident from their peculiar characteristic that they were from Wyandotte fowl. The stove was half full of charred feathers, burned beyond exact identification.

Continuing P. C. Blade said: "While I was there her little girl came in. I asked her if she had seen any chickens. She answered no, at first, and then said her mother would whip her if she told. I said, "You tell me and I will see that she won't whip you." Then the girl said, "We just had one of Sophie's chickens," referring to Mrs. McWilliams. I compared the feathers on the floor with those of Mrs. McWilliams' Wyandottes and they were the same."

P. C. Blade stated that Mr. McWilliams' chickens were all in wire runways when he saw them.

Mrs. Keys said that her five year old daughter was mistaken in her statement to P. C. Blade. She had killed three of her own pigeons, of which she had made a 'pot-pie." She had put the feathers in the stove.

To Mr. Hatton, who appeared for the plaintiff, Mrs. Keys admitted having stolen one of Mr. McWilliams' hens some years ago. This summer she had planted her garden and neighbours' fowl had overrun it, eating her tomatoes and other vegetables. Mr. McWilliams' chickens had been frequent visitors.

"If he didn't leave them at large nobody would kill them," she said. Mr. McWilliams had built a fence between the two properties this year, and at that time she had told him that his hens did not give her any trouble. But, she added, they had been eating her pigeon feed.

Mr. Hatton proceeded to take an inventory of the Keys' dovecot after the "pot-pie" had taken three of its "fan tails." Mrs. Keys said she had seven pigeons now and previous to the killing had nine. Then the number was given as 10 formerly and 8 now.

"You don't seem to know what you have," commented the Magistrate.

Mrs. Keyes excused her arithmetical discrepancies on the ground of a limited education, but meagre as it was, she said she made better use of it than some people who had been well educated.

Magistrate Dumble reserved judgment.

SUDDEN DEATH OF GROVE HEATH

Could Not Withstand the Effects of An Operation

The death occurred very suddenly in St. Joseph's Hospital at 10.30 of Grover Heath. He entered the hospital yesterday to undergo an operation but on account of having a weak heart it proved fatal. The deceased was a bright, promising boy, beloved by all who knew him, and only yesterday had attended mass at the Church of the Sacred Heart. The deceased was 15 years of age and leaves to mourn his loss besides a sorrowing father and mother, four brothers, namely, Lawrence, Evarist, Clinton and Rexal, and two sisters, Gladys and Hazel.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 82 Aylmer street, on Thursday morning at 9 o'clock to Sacred Heart church, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

The Recipes for Buckwheat Pancakes and Cream of Corn Soup, mentioned above, are as follows:

Buckwheat Pancakes—
1-3 cup ne bread crumbs
2 cups scalded milk
1-2 teaspoon salt.
1-4 yeast cake
1-2 cup lukewarm water
1 3-4 cups buckwheat flour
1 tablespoon molasses.

Pour milk over crumbs, and soak thirty minutes; add salt, yeast cake dissolved in lukewarm water, and buckwheat to make a batter thin enough to pour. Let rise over night; in the morning, stir well, add molasses, one-fourth teaspoon soda dissolved in one-fourth cup lukewarm water, and cook same as griddle cakes. Save enough batter to raise another mixing, instead of using yeast cake; it will require one-half cup.

Cream of Corn Soup—
1 qt. skimmed milk
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups corn
2 tablespoons flour

Make thin White Sauce of butter, flour and skimmed milk. Add the corn and season to taste.

FRANCE PRODUCES 250,000 SHELLS A DAY FOR "73" GUNS

Andre Tardieu, High French Commissioner in America, Recounts Achievements—Nation Faces Foe With 2,700,000 Men

France has for a year been producing 250,000 shells a day for the famous "75" guns, as compared with 12,000 daily when the war began Andre Tardieu, High French Commissioner in the United States, said in a statement in New York. His estimate of credit voted by France from August of 1914 until America entered the conflict was nearly twenty-one billion dollars, of which more than nineteen and one-half billion dollars came, he said, from the savings of the French people. Mr. Tardieu's statement reads:

"At the beginning of the war we could turn out 12,000 shells a day for '75' guns. In the year past we have been able to turn out 250,000 shells a day. In 1914 we had only 300 heavy guns, organized in regiments. Now we have more than six thousand. Besides, we gave more than eight hundred heavy guns to our Russian, Roumanian and other Allies.

"More than two-thirds and nearly three-fourths of the western front is still occupied by the French army, which has 2,700,000 men in the field.

"In our country the amount raised by annual taxes reaches this year five and a half billion francs, which is the highest figure ever attained, even in time of peace, although 12,000,000 French people are either mobilized for the army or the factories or kept in invaded regions.

"Figures sometimes bring revelations. Since the outbreak of the war until the intervention of the United States credits have been voted which amount to 104 billion francs. And do you know how much we borrowed from abroad? Six billion francs. So ninety-eight billions were drawn from the savings of the French themselves for the defence of the country."

Speaking of Alsace and Lorraine, Mr. Tardieu said:

"For more than forty years we kept in our hearts that open wound, Alsace-Lorraine. And we did not make war; we suffered in silence. Our brothers were victims of the most hideous system of police oppression that was ever inflicted upon a free people. We knew it and stood it because we wanted peace. It was not sufficient, for since the beginning of the twentieth century we had to suffer German provocations in Morocco and other places. We suffered them because we wanted peace."

Tuesday, at 3 p.m. the annual thank-offering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society. Rev. Mr. Rowand will address the meeting. All the women of the congregation are earnestly urged to be present and assist in making this annual meeting a success. A social hour will be spent after the address by Mr. Rowand.

Tuesday evening. The Young Women's Mission Band annual thank-offering meeting at 8 o'clock, sharp. Envelopes have been distributed to all the young women of the congregation, and it is hoped that they will take this opportunity of helping the Mission Band in their work.

Wednesday, 8 p.m. The mid-week prayer meeting.

Thursday, from 3 to 5 p.m., the ladies of the Red Cross Society of St. Andrews will meet to receive and give out work. A week from Thursday the ladies are arranging to send parcels to all St. Andrew's boys now overseas, and for this purpose desire the assistance of all the members of the congregation in raising at least $100.00. Place your contribution on the plate next Sunday, marking the envelope "Patriotic Society," or hand your subscription to any of the members.

Friday evening, at 6.30, the Ladies' Bible Class are meeting for tea and a social evening. It is hoped that all former members, as well as all the present members will be present. Any ladies desirous of joining this class will be made welcome at this tea and is a splendid opportunity of meeting the other members of the class. A good time is assured all those who attend.

The Sunday School had their largest attendance yesterday since the holidays. The Calebites are again meeting each Sunday. A class of young men is being organized under the leadership of Mr. Geo. A. Gall. Any young men will be gladly welcomed in this class.

It is desired that all names of St. Andrew's boys overseas be given to Mrs John, Mrs. Waram or the Rev. Mr. Rowand.

The Communion service will be observed on Sunday, Oct. 28th.

Mr. R. S. McLaughlin, President of the McLaughlin Motor Company, Limited, Oshawa, Ont., and director of the Dominion Bank, was appointed a director of the Chevrolet Motor Company on Oct. 5th at a meeting held in New York. This Chevrolet Motor Company is the parent company incorporated under the laws of the State of Deleware in 1915. The capital stock of this company is $80,000,000, and among its assets are the controlling interest in General Motors Company. Eight Chevrolet Motor Companies in various parts of the United States are owned and operated by the Chevrolet Motor Company of Deleware. The Chevrolet Motor Company is one of the strongest and most powerful of the motor companies.

It is an interesting fact that while the Chevrolet Motor Company of Canada is closely affiliated with the American Chevrolet Motor Companies, it is owned and operated entirely by Canadian capital and Canadian men.

Mr. McLaughlin is to be congratulated in his appointment to the directorate of this company.

The Soldier Gets New Ten Commandments

(Drafted for the U. S. Army by Major W. E. P. French)

1. Keep your eyes at the ready, your ears at full cock, and your mouth at the safety notch; for it is your soldierly duty to see and hear clearly; but, as a rule, you should be heard mainly in the sentry challenge or the charging cheer. Obey orders first, and, if still alive, kick afterward, if you have been wronged.

2. Keep your rifle or gun and your accoutrements clean and in good order, and yourself as clean as you can; treat your animals kindly and fairly and your motor or other machine as though it belonged to you, and and was the only one in the world. Do not waste your ammunition, your gas, your food, your time, nor your opportunity.

3. Never try to fire an empty gun nor at an empty trench; but when you shoot, shoot to kill, and forget not that at close quarters a bayonet beats a bullet.

4. Tell the truth squarely, face the music, and take your punishment like a man; for a good soldier won't lie, doesn't skulk, and is no squealer.

5. Remember Edith Cavell, Belgium, Serbia, the Lusitania, Louvain, and the U-boats of the Hun, and, remembering Teuton savagery, barbarism and atrocities, steel your heart against the ravishers of women, the murderers and mutilators of children and non-combatants, the ruthless destroyers of homes, the Hounds of the Hohenzollern, the bestial Boches.

6. Be merciful to the women of your foe and shame them not, for you are a man, not a beast, and a woman bore you. And pity and shield the children in your captured territory, for you were once a helpless child, and only a dastard makes war on the weak.

7. You shall kill in the name and for the sake of Liberty, Equality and Fraternity, until Right shall triumph over ight, and Victory crown Justice. You shall never desert your Cause, your Country, your Colours, your Corps, your Comrades in Arms, or the great Alliance of the Liberators. And you shall fight shoulder to shoulder with your Brothers in the League of Liberty to the end that Despotism, Autocracy and Frightfulness shall perish upon the earth and that Freedom and Democracy shall become the heritage of humankind.

8. Fear dishonour, dread defeat, be of good cheer and high courage, and don't shirk work or danger; but fear not death, dread not wounds, suffer in silence, and die game.

9. Bear in mind that the enemy is your enemy and the enemy of humanity until he is killed or captured; then he is your dead brother or your fellow-soldier beaten and ashamed, whom you should no further humiliate.

10. Do your best to keep your head clear and cool, your body clean and comfortable, and your feet in good shape; for you think with your head, fight with your body, stand on and march with your feet.

Letter From Gunner Carney

Mrs. Robert Carney, 332 Water street, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Gunner Robert Carney, who is now in France:

Sept. 26th, 1917.

Dear Mother,—Just a few lines to let you know that I got your welcome parcel that left home on Aug. 30th, but it was in pretty bad shape, although none of the stuff was hurt any, but wouldn't send any more in pasteboard boxes. I would send them in in boxes if possible. Well, mother, in one of your letters you said you only got a letter every two or three weeks. Well, I write one and two every week, but likely it is on account of the boats not making trips so often. Well, mother, you ask me to send you something home for a souvenir. Well it is pretty hard to get anything worth while, but next time I get near a town I will send you something. Send me sister's address and Cecil's and Bab's. Well, the bunch are reading a Jack Canuck and they are having a great laugh over some of his sayings. Well, I just wrote a letter three days ago. Most likely you will get this one before it. That is generally the way. Well, mother, I suppose Peterborough is just the same as usual. I suppose dad is still going. Give him lots of encouragement. Tell him it won't be long now; at least I don't think so. Everything looks prosperous, at least pretty near everybody over here thinks so, anyway and I don't think so myself, but my opinion don't amount to anything. How is Arthur and his

SALES FIVE MILLIONS GREATER IN 1916 THAN THREE YEARS BEFORE

Greatly Increased Export Business of Matthews-Blackwell Company Was Due to War Orders—Mr. T. F. Matthews Testifies in Toronto.

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—Greatly increased export business due to war orders was responsible for the much larger profits made by the Matthews-Blackwell Co. Ltd., during the war years. This was the reason given to the Government Commission inquiring into the profits of packing houses on Saturday by the Secretary of the company, T. F. Matthews. The sales in 1916 were five million dollars greater than in 1913.

The statements filed with the Commission by the Matthews-Blackwell Co. on Saturday were not satisfactory. Commissioner G. T. Clarkson objected to certain deductions being shown, and he desired amended reports to be made, in keeping with the book-keeping standards being used by the Commission in the investigation. The reports submitted were made by the Commission's accountants from the Company's books, but they will be changed before the hearing resumes. Chairman G. F. Henderson, K.C., made it clear that this was no reflection on the company, but merely a difference in book keeping. Certain other statements desired by Mr. J. W. Bain, K.C., the Government counsel, will be prepared at the same time by the officials of the Company.

Mr. Gordon Waldron, appearing for Saturday Night, examined Mr. Matthews closely as to the buying operations of the Company. He was told by the witness that the prices were not fixed by any consultation with competitors, the pervailing condition only being considered. Only the operations of the Matthews-Blackwell Co. were touched on Saturday, and adjournment was made until Thursday afternoon at 2.30. o'clock. At that time Mr. Bain will complete the examination of witnesses of the William Davies Co. The whole inquiry is intended to be finished by the end of this week. It was expected on Saturday to take up the reasons for discounting British War Office contracts on August 28 last, as was intimated the previous evening, but this, too, was left over until this week.

Matthews-Blackwell Accountant.

Mr. John J. Boyce, Chief Accountant of the Matthews-Blackwell Co., Ltd., was placed on the stand at the resumed hearing Saturday morning. He agreed that statements prepared by the Commission's accountants had been taken from the company's books and were correct. The buildings of the three companies that were amalgamated in 1911 as the present company were appraised at that time and taken in at depreciated values. The inventories of live stock, products, raw materials in the factories and on consignment, based on cost price unless the market price was the highest, in 1913, were $1,517,836.20; in 1914, $1,591,748.28; in 1915, $1,623,661.70; in 1916, $2,624,853.

Witness said that in 1916 $75,000 was taken out of profits and put into reserve accounts. Profits before deduction of dividends, which, when paid, were at seven per cent. quarterly, were shown as follows: 1913, $198,061.70; 1914, $154,088.46; 1915, $342,107.13; 1916, $521,838.43; first nine months of 1917 $822,051.56. In 1913 dividends totalling $140,000 were paid and the following year dividends totalling half of that amount were paid only on preferred stock. All of these figures apply prior to the deduction of war taxes.

The Export Sales.

The export sales of the company of hog products were: 1913, $558,728.49; 1914, $782,441.43; 1915, $5,152,284.06; 1916, $7,415,476.67.

The sales of by-products were: 1913, $1,176,520.01; 1914, $1,839,643.24; 1915, $1,654,379.62; 1916, $1,913,406.57.

The domestic sales were: 1913, $7,470,721.14; 1914, $6,074,598.08; 1915, $4,853,155.69; 1916, $5,073,187.71.

The total sales of the company for the last four fiscal years were: 1913, $10,439,323.15; 1914, $9,604,351.39; 1915, $13,033,332.64, and 1916, $15,959,176.30.

Mr. T. F. Matthews, Secretary of the company, explained that the stock of the company was controlled by the family, and that all of the stock of a subsidiary company in Montreal, Matthews, Ltd., was owned by the Matthews-Blackwell Co.

Figures of Depreciation.

The amounts written off for depreciation were: 1913, $52,907.65; 1914, $11,603; 1915, $68,315.43; 1916, $145,134.16. Witness explained that two and a half per cent. was allowed for depreciation on buildings, five per cent. on machinery and ten per cent. on fixtures. Mr. Matthews said that normal depreciation annually was about $52,000, as shown in 1913. In 1915 it jumped, $16,000 because of what might be termed extraordinary depreciation on some articles.

Why $145,000 in 1916?

Commissioner G. T. Clarkson then asked why the large increase of $145,000 in 1916. Witness replied that this amount included $64,000 written off for water rights. It was explained by the witness that when the Matthews Co. was taken over in 1911 the assets included a lease from the Dominion Government for rights to pump water from the Lachine Canal. The lease expires in a few years, and as it was considered a disappearing asset, the company had decided to write it off in one year.

Chairman Henderson said he thought the water rights were really a live asset as they could be renewed. "Not if they employed the Chairman to get it," interjected Mr. James W. Bain, K.C.

1915 War Taxes.

Witness explained that the war tax was not shown on any of the statements. This was because the Finance Department had not notified the company until August of this year what was to be done with the tax. As a result an adjustment had only been made to date of the 1915 war taxes.

Commissioner Clarkson asked for additional information from the witness as to $90,000 shown in 1917 as bond discount. He suggested that it should be distributed over twenty years, instead of all taken off in one year. If this were done, he contended, it would increase the profits for the first nine months of 1917 from $822,051.66 to $907,000.

Go Over Books Again.

Mr. Bain next took up a statement showing the cost per pound for two years. Commissioner Clarkson objected to the statement being taken up. He said he didn't accept some of the statements pu in because of a difference in bookkeeping. He contended that certain deducions should be made, and that these alterations should be made to the previous statements filed, before anything further was done. This was agreed to, and the accountants of the Commission will again go over the books of the Matthews-Blackwell Co. so as to work out the formula desired by the Commission, and as used in the case of the William Davies Co.

However, a statement showing the plant sales, including branch sales, was filed. It also showed the operating percentages. These were as follows: 1913, $10,075,714.24, and operating expenses, 11.55; 1914, $10,075,130.80; and operating expenses, 9.30; 1916, $177,555,110.32, and operating expenses, 7.83; first nine months of 1917, $18,494,487.59, and operating expenses, 7.53.

Purchasing Hogs.

Mr. Gordon Waldron took up the examination of the witness as to the methods adopted in purchasing the hogs, in an effort to learn if many rumours that have been circulated had any foundation of truth in them.

"Did you have any motive or any consciousness of the bearing of your depreciation charges upon the war taxes when you made them?"

"The matter was not discussed when these various items were set up."

"How much bacon have you purchased in the United States?"

"In Cincinnati 167,328 hogs, a total of 18,627,137 pounds; in Chicago 152-544 hogs. These purchases include all of the purchases in the States up to August 23, 1917." Witness promised to produce a statement at the next sitting showing the amount of duty paid on the imports of American hogs and the amount received back from the Government when they were exported.

"How are prices of hogs fixed?" asked Mr. Waldron.

"I wish they were fixed," smiled the witness.

"How are they ascertained?"

No Fixing of Prices.

"That is very difficult to answer, Mr. Waldron, because there are so many conditions that enter into it. The price we determine to-day is not applicable to-morrow, and our judgment as to the price of hogs has to be recast every week. We endeavour to fix it by the price on the market and what we know our competitors are paying." He admitted to Mr. Waldron that the export market was also considered. Mr. Matthews said that they had no direct means of knowing the prices paid by other companies, and they didn't consult their competitors. Witness also denied any knowledge of meetings held at the Prince George Hotel of packers to fix the prices of hogs and what was to be offered the farmers. He added that his firm found it expedient to pay different prices at their different factories, depending entirely on conditions.

In answer to further questions of Mr. Waldron, witness denied that the packers pay so many cents a hog to buyers to keep out of certain territory in buying. "I have heard of such practices between drovers who are independent altogether of the packing companies," said witness.

Competition with Neighbours.

"Sometimes you fall into competition with your neighbours"

"Very true."

"Do you outbid each other?"

"The competition is between the drovers who are buying for the different packers. We may have a drover load at one point, and the Davies Company have a drover load at the same point. Sometimes our drover is under instructions from us." He explained that the drovers would bid against one another in that way.

Referring again to the practice of the drovers paying so many cents a hog to keep out of certain territory, witness said he had not heard of a case of that kind for several yeare. He went on to say that hogs are purchased on the Winnipeg, Edmonton and Calgary markets, and the prices arranged through commission men. It is borne in mind when fixing the price there that the hogs have to be bought in the West so as to permit of the paying of freight and making the cost laid down here the same as that of hogs purchased in Ontario.

PRESS ON LATEST BRITISH OFFENSIVE

"The Most Effective Stroke."

Charleston Post:—"Marshal Haig continues his drive against the Germans in Flanders, and the latest seems to have been the most effective stroke of his campaign, begun in September, and probably the concluding phase of this year's operations on the Western front."

"More Than a Local Triumph."

Brooklyn Eagle:—"The British success at Ypres means more than a local triumph, however. The new advance marks the culmination of a long series of British successes, but it is most significant in the promise it holds of a far greater victory in the not distant future."

"An Important Achievement."

Philadelphia Public Ledger:—"This step toward digging the submarines out of their holes is one of the most important achievements of the war. If the German morale is as badly broken as it appears to be, there can be little hope of the recovery by Germany of any of the lost ground. And this means that the British will have a free hand for their future operations."

"Hard to Appreciate."

Buffalo Express:—"Whether the drive halts or goes on, it is accomplishing the essential purpose of destroying the German army. It is doing this mainly by the intensity of the shell fire. The cannon fighting is hard to appreciate from the laconic lines in the official despatches which refer to it, but the cannon are doing the work."

"Encourages the Hope."

New Orleans Times-Picayune:—"Some weeks of favourable 'fighting weather' are expected before the winter sets in, and the continued success of the British drives encourages the hope that Hindenburg may be forced into another 'retreat to victory' before the year closes."

"Is in Grave Danger."

Cleveland Plain Dealer:—"Germany is in grave danger. Not before have the Allied armies so menaced the Teuton wall of defence. October, 1917, may be recorded as the great month of the war. It may definitely mark the beginning of the crumbling of the vast structure of Teuton militarism."

"Morale Weakening."

Boston Post:—"Whether General Haig's tremendous attack on the German lines in Flanders shall temporarily cease with the notable advances already made, or shall continue until the Teutonic communications are cut and Zeebrugge put in danger, there is no escaping the fact that the German morale and power of resistance seem to be weakening."

"A Serious Defeat."

Troy Record:—"While it is impossible at this writing to estimate the result of the present British drive in the Ypres district, indications are that the enemy has suffered a serious defeat."

WHITE SOX WIN A WILD GAME BY A SURPRISING COME-BACK

CHICAGO, Oct. 13. — It took the White Sox a long time to get started to-day, but once under way, they travelled with a celerity that baffled the eye.

Apparently hopelessly beaten, disgraced by a multiplicity of errors and to all intents and purposes, thoroughly demoralized when their seventh turn at bat arrived, the Rowlands put over the grandest comeback in the world series history and grabbed victory from the jaws of ignominious defeat by a score of 8 to 5.

The Giants were leading 5 to 2 when the "lucky inning" came along. They had so completely outplayed the Sox up to this time that the remainder of the game looked empty formality. Not only had McGraw's men banged Rowland's pitchers all over the place, but they had been aided by six egregious errors, as horrible an exhibition of fielding as a big league park ever had seen. "Slim" Sallee, with his big lead to work on, was just breezing along under wraps, supremely confident and almost careless.

Then It Happened.

Then it happened! With one out in the seventh Jackson hit. So did Felsch. "Chick" Gandil, up to this time by no means a glittering success as a batter in this game, or one of those that preceded it, broke in with a double that was probably the most offended whack ever made in the city of Chicago. Both Joe and "Hap" scored and the tying run was carried half way along its journey by Gandil. "Chick" advanced on Weaver's out and Sallee, in trying to make Schalk hit a bad ball, passed him. Byrd Lynn batted for Williams, then pitching for Chicago. Schalk galloped down to second to draw a brow, and when Sallee, after receiving the ball from his catcher, thought he had an easy victim in Ray, tossed to Herzog, who made a rare and costly muff. Before the ball could be recovered, Gandil had scored and tied it up. Lynn, who was not very badly needed after this, completed the job of striking out that he had begun before the ill-advised play was attempted.

Having tied the score after once being all ready for the embalmer, the Sox were irresistible. It was a mortal cinch that they weren't going to let the Giants get any more chances to beat them. (And so it proved. John Collins opened the home eight with a Texas leaguer single, was sacrificed to second by McMullen, and scored on Eddie Collins' poke through Fletcher. To make sure that there would be no chance for a play at home, Kauff fumbled the ball. Jackson hit to right, sending Collins to third and Eddie, cleverly delaying his progress so as to draw a throw to that base, enabled Joe to make second. Zimmerman cut loose a wild throw to Fletcher in trying to head off the general and Collins cashed, while Joe went to third. To make this result complete Felsch hit to centre and Jackson registered the Sox' eighth run. Gandil flied and Felsch died stealing, but nobody minded that, for the game was over.

Only Faced Seven Men.

Faber, who had started to pitch for the Sox in the eighth, only had to face seven men, none of whom got on. In the ninth, the Giants, realizing that it was all over so far as they were concerned, went to bat in a very spiritless manner, and the fast gathering gloom helped Faber to turn them back.

It was undoubtedly the most hectic and exciting world's series game ever played, a school-boy exhibition technically, but a wonderful spectacle, made perfect for the home fans by the sudden transformation of the Sox from helpless victims of the Giants' avalanche to lusty conquerors. Chicago made six errors, three of them charged to Weaver. Two of New Yorks runs were directly due to these malfeasances, and one was helped along by a muff by Williams. The first two were cleanly earned in the opening inning.

Manager Rowland made a most unfortunate choice in his pitching selection, starting "Reb" Russell, to see whom in action the fans had been clamouring. They will not demand a return engagement for this big southpaw, who pitched to only three men, a pass, single and double in order finishing him. Cicotte went to work with the Giants a run to the good, men on second and third and none out. After two runners had been thrown out at the plate, Robertson singled and scored one more, which gave the enemy a fine working margin for a game in which Sallee was confidently expected to baffle the Sox.

Eddie pitched good ball through the sixth, but was miserably supported in the fourth, two errors in this inning handing the Giants a couple of markers that they didn't deserve. Williams worked only the sixth, and was scored on by means of a double, his own error and a single. The run would have arrived without the misplay anyway, but it didn't help the little ex-Tiger's poise any to have it inserted.

Sallee in the first five innings promised to repeat his fine performance of last Saturday, but when they once found his range, murder in the first, second, third and all other degrees ensued. He yielded but four hits in the premier five chapters, two of these coming with two out in the fifth. A pass to Eddie Collins and a double by Felsch gave Chicago one run in the third, but as the Giants soon increased their lead to three, this didn't bother anybody. In the sixth the first rumblings of the approaching storm were heard, successive singles by Weaver, Schalk and Risberg producing another marker for Chicago.

Boston Braves Machine of '14 All Crumbled

George Stallings is beginning exactly where he started when he took charge of the Boston Braves. Decapitating member after member of the famous team that drove its way to a National League championship and a world's title, he is making the baseball world turn over in its surprise. Even Johnny Evers, the famous whip that was supposed to have lashed the Braves to a super-effort in their drive pennantward, has been disposed of.

Take a dip back into history and note the players who boosted the Braves championshipward and compare them with the present lineup that greets the Braves' fan.

Minors Get Discards.

Ted Cathers is somewhere in the minor league. He constituted a valuable cog in the constant process of switching outfielders that Stallings employed in his battle for the pennant. Gene Cocreham, never a great star with the Braves, now is with Kansas City. Joe Connolly, who was Stallings' best hitter in his 1914 campaign, is out of the big leagues. Ensign Cottrel has dropped so far the big leaguers never hear of him any more. Dick Crutcher also is with Kansas City.

Charley Deal, after subbing for Red Smith, and doing wonderful work in the world's series, is with the Cubs as a third baseman after a jump to the Feds and a later engagement with Kansas City. Josh Devore, a veteran when the Braves won their pennant, was with Joplin in the Western League part of the 1917 season.

Jugey Survives with Phils.

Oscar Dugey survives as a big leaguer as a utility infielder with the Phillies. Larry Gilbert is back among the minors. Otto Hess is in the Southern League. Bill James hasn't been any good since his memorable work in the 1914 campaign. Leslie Mann, after a sojourn with the Feds, was Chicago's best outfielder, but now he is with a national guard Y.M.C.A. unit in Texas. Walter Maranville is still with the Braves and considered as much of a star as when he did so much to help Stallings' case.

Bill Martin, a Washington boy, hasn't been heard of as a big leaguer since the Miracle Man's endeavour. Fred Mitchell is managing the Cubs. Herb Moran is another who is in the minors. Charles J. Schmidt is out of baseball. Red Smith is still the regular Braves' third baseman, and George Tyler is second to Rudolph in present effectiveness on the pitching staff. George Whitted is one of the National League's stars as a Philly outfielder. Hank Gowdy has enlisted.

Giants' Errors Paved Way, etc.

Chicago catcher's grounder. No runs, one hit, no errors.

New York.—Schalk ran down the line and took Fletcher's roller and threw him out. Eddie Collins took Robertson's smash and got his man at first. Holke got a double against the left field fence. Eddie Collins threw out Rariden, who hit the first pitched ball. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Third Innings.

Chicago.—Faber struck out. John Collins popped to Herzog. Benton was employing a quick drop ball, which he kept around the batters' knees. McMullin fanned. No runs, no hits, no errors.

New York.—Faber burned an outcurve over for the third strike and Benton sat down. Burns sent a hot liner to Felsch. Hezog sent a high fly out to Felsch. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Fourth Innings.

Chicago.—Zimmerman took Collins' grounder and threw wildly to the stands, Collins going to second. Jackson sent up a high fly to Robertson, who dropped the ball. Eddie Collins dashed to third, Jackson holding first when Robertson threw to third. The New York infield came in on the grass. Benton took Felsch's grounder and ran oer to tag Collins. Benton tossed to Zimmerman, who ran after Collins and chased the Sox second baseman across the plate for a run. Jackson and Felsch scored on Gandil's single to right. Gandil was thrown out trying to stretch his hit Robertson to Herzog. Weaver sent a long fly to Burns. Schalk shot a single into left. Red Faber walked. Fletcher threw out J. Collins. Three runs, two hits, two errors.

New York.— Eddie Collins took Kauff's roller and threw him out. Zimmerman snet a high fly to John Collins. Fletcher got a hit off McMullin's glove, the ball bounding to Weaver, who nearly threw the New York shortstop out by a line shot throw. Robertson sent out a long fly to Felsch. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

Chicago.—Benny Kauff robbed McMullin of a hit, coming in fast and getting his line drive. Burns took Collins' easy fly. Jackson struck at the ball so hard that he fell down and the crowd jeered. Herzog threw out Jackson. No runs, no hits, no errors.

New York.— Holke struck out on three pitched balls. Rariden walked, making Faber pitch to him. Wilhoit batted for Benton. Wilhoit also walked, Faber becoming unsteady. Burns forced Wilhoit, Weaver to Eddie Collins. Rariden went to third. Rariden scored on Herzog's three base hit off the right field wall. The stands were in a frenzy. Kauff fouled out to Gandil. Two runs, one hit, no errors.

Sixth Innings.

Chicago.—Perritt went into the box for New York. Felsch walked. Gandil up. Felsch went out stealing, Rariden to Fletcher. Gandil struck out on three pitched balls. Herzog threw out Weaver. No runs, no hits, no errors.

New York.—Eddie Collins took Zimmerman's smash and threw him out. Fletcher sent up a high foul to Gandil. Robertson sent a single into right field. Eddie Collins threw out Holke at first. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Seventh Innings.

Chicago.—Schalk worked Perritt for a base on balls. Faber struck out. Liebold batted for John Collins. Liebold popped to Herzog, who dropped the ball and then ran over to first, touching both Schalk who was standing on the bag and the bag as well. Liebold was declared out and Schalk was ruled as being safe. McMullin struck out. No runs, no hits, no errors.

The official scorer scored the play on Liebold as an assist for Herzog and a put out for Holke.

New York.—Liebold went in to right field in place of John Collins. Rariden went out to Gandil unassisted. Perritt got a line single over second. Burns lofted to Weaver. On a short passed ball, Perritt dashed to second and then ran to third, when Schalk's wild throw got away from Collins. Herzog popped to Weaver. No runs, one hit, one error.

Eighth Innings.

It was announced that the official attendance was 33,006.

Chicago.—Collins went out to Holke unassisted. Jackson sent a hit to right field. Felsch fouled out to Holke. Kauff made a corking catch of Gandil's long fly. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth Innings.

Chicago.— Weaver got a single to left field. Schalk fouled to Zimmerman. On the hit and run play, Faber bunted, Weaver going to second. Faber's bunt was a sacrifice and he was thrown out, Perritt to Holke, Weaver scored when Kauff dropped Liebold's line drive close to the ground. The official scorer gives Liebold a hit. Liebold went to second on Kauff's throw to the plate. Zimmerman threw out McMullin. One run, two hits, one error.

New York—Robertson up. Robertson claimed ball struck his hand and Umpire Klem allowed it. Holke up. Collins threw out Holke at first. Robertson going to second. Rariden fanned. McCarty batted for Perritt. Collins tossed out McCarty. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Game over, Chicago wins 4 to 2.

KINGSTON, Oct. 11.—It is understood that the vocational training department for returned soldiers will erect a large building in connection with Queen's Military Hospital. Classes in civil service, as well as commercial work, have been carried on for several weeks, but the instructors are finding it difficult to secure satisfactory accommodation for their increasing needs. Kingston will be one of the main centres of vocational training in the Dominion.

KINGSTON, Oct. 11.—It is expected that Barriefield Camp will be closed about the 20th. Although the tents are all well closed in and have raised floors, the men are not comfortable at night. The Cereal Barracks is not quite ready for the soldiers. A number of improvements are being made.

"THE DANCER'S PERIL"

Y. M. C. A. ACTIVITIES

During the past two weeks the members of the employed staff and the Physical and Boys' Work Committees have been giving considerable attention to the matter of improving the organization of the Boys' Department with a view to arousing a higher degree of interest and securing participation in the religious, physical and social activities on the part of all our boy members. As a result of these efforts the following plan has been adopted as the programme for the present season, this organization to stand in all the activities to be conducted.

The Boys' Department is to be divided into six classes, each class to consist of two groups, each group to consist of two teams and each team to consist of eight or more boys. Each of these classes will have its own color by which it will be distinguished in all lines of activities.

A contest has been organized between the six classes, which will terminate at Christmas time, the winning class to be given a sleigh ride and a supper. The winning class is to be determined by a system of scoring which will include the attendance at gymnasium and Bible classes, the results of game tournaments and general deportment of the class members and points awarded for securing new Association members. Three of the main classes represent three grades of employed boys and three represent three grades of school boys. The programme provides the following—

PHYSICAL.

Each of the classes will have special gymnasium and swimming periods, and contests in basket ball and indoor baseball, conducted between the four teams of each of the classes. Each team has a captain and is considered a unit of organization.

SOCIAL.

Tere will be game tournaments conducted between the members of each class. The three high men in each class to enter an inter-class tournament, making possible individual awards as well as working up a fine class spirit.

RELIGIOUS.

Each class is divided into two Bible study groups, the study period of which will come at about the time of the gymnasium periods fixed for said group. Some of the teachers already secured for these groups are Mr. George A. Gall of Farm and Dairy; Minto Brownscombe, Charles Armstrong, Ralph Meserve, Harold Copp, G. H. Roper and C. N. Meserve. Other teachers are needed—in fact, if the Bible class programme were to attain its maximum efficiency, twenty-six mentors or teachers should be secured.

On Saturday four of the Bible Study groups were organized and game tournaments are to be started immediately. There is the greatest enthusiasm among the boys over the plan outlined and it is thought that there will be the co-operation of the largest number of boy members that has ever been attained.

The organization outlined above will also be the basis of a membership contest to be conducted the latter part of this month and the offer of a free ticket to each boy who secures 5 members is being made and is now open to competitors. To cover the budget for the year $1400 in membership fees will be required before the 1st of Jan. next and the goal fixed is 300 new members and renewals secured before the close of the year. The officers of the Association are confident that this goal will be attained through the organization effort that is proposed.

WEDDING BELLS

LOCKIE—ANDERSON.

A very quiet wedding was solemized at 5 o'clock p.m. on Thanksgiving Day, Oct. 8, at the home of the bride's parents at Lock No. 3, when Pearl Anderson was united in marriage to William George Lockie, 495 Chamberlain Street. The bride was given away by her father, and was unattended. She looked charming in a dress of pale blue taffeta silk. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. A. McKenzie, in the presence of a few relatives. The young couple will reside in Peterborough.

BAILEY—ELLIOTT.

The first wedding in the recently renovated Methodist Church, Stirling, took place yesterday, Oct. 10th, when Miss Edna Minnie, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Elliott, was united in marriage to Mr. James Wilmot Bailey, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Bailey.

The church, attractive in itself, was made much more beautiful by the quantities of ferns and chrysanthemums which had been arranged by Mrs. Walt and Miss E. Watts.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. McLennan of Peterborough. At 1.30 p.m. the bridal party arrived at the church, the bride entering with her father to the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, and was met by the groom at the altar. Miss Hazel Elliott, the bride's sister, was bridesmaid, and the groom was ably assisted by his brother, Mr. Ewart Bailey. The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the church, Rev. F. H. Howard, assisted by Rev. Harold Neale of Toronto. The ushers were Mr. G. G. Thrasher and Mr. H. C. Martin.

The bride was married in her traveling suit of Burgundy broadcloth with hat to match and white fox fur, and carried a bouquet of pale pink roses and maiden hair fern. Miss Hazel Elliott wore grey broadcloth and grey velvet hat with rose trimmings, and carried deep pink roses.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the bride was presented with a Bible from the Methodist Church, in consideration of the fact that she is the first bride to be married in the church. The presentation was made by Mr. T. G. Clute, Rec. Steward.

During the signing of the register Mrs. King of Peterborough sang "Love's coronation," and as the bridal party left the Church, Mendelssohn's Wedding March sounded triumphantly from the organ.

The groom's gift to the bride was a Columbia Grafanola, to the bridesmaid an onyx ring set with pearls, and to the groomsman, a five dollar gold piece.

The gifts to the bride were very numerous and very costly. Among them are a dining room suite in golden oak from Mrs. Bailey, a cheque from Mr. Bailey, a mission wood living room suite from Mrs. Elliott, a dinner set and mahogany bedroom suite from Mr. Elliott, and a cheque from her brother Harold, now overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey motored to Belleville and took the train for Toronto and London, Miss Hazel Elliott and Mr. Neale accompanied them as far as Toronto.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Elliott and Mr. McCutcheon of Baltimore, Ont., Miss Edith Richardson, Peterborough, and Miss Clara Elliott of Toronto.

On Sunday evening the many friends of Miss E. Elliott gave her a kitchen shower, which included everything she could possibly need or use. A most enjoyable time was spent by all.—Stirling News-Argus.

"THE DANCER'S PERIL" AT THE EMPIRE

A Stupendous Picture in Which Appear a Big Cast of High-class Actors

Miss Alice Brady numbers her friends and admirers by the hundreds of thousands and all of these friends will want to see her in "The Dancer's Peril," her latest screen production, in which she comes to the Empire Theatre to-day and to-morrow. This is one of the greatest productions yet made by the World Film Corporation. It is gorgeous from a scenic standpoint and the story told is marked by high spots of romance, intrigue and intensely dramatic situations. In this drama Miss Brady appears as the big star of a Russian ballet and there makes a tremendous hit. The impresario of the ballet becomes infatuated with her, but she is in love with a young man. Love triumphs, but only after many obstacles have been overcome.

KETCHECUM CLUB BACK

The Ketchecum Lake Club returned on Saturday, with the exception of Mr. D. J. Lundy, J. Logie and E. A. Peck, who stayed behind to enjoy the exceptionally fine weather. The members report splendid luck in the fishing season, but bring back the dismal prediction from the settlers that a severe winter is imminent. This is known by the exceptional crop of all nuts.

GREAT DUTCH ARTIST TOO PROUD TO PAINT FOR THE MERE CASH

Matthew Mavis Died in London, a Hermit and in Poverty.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Correspondence of the Associated Press.—A genius who might have amassed a fortune died in comparative poverty and obscurity in London recently, because he was too proud to give the world work which did not attain to his ideals. Few people, even among those in the art world, remembered that Matthew Marts, the one famous Dutch painter, was still living and fewer knew that London was his home, until the announcement of his death at the age of 78 appearing in a morning paper.

Matthew, the last of the family of three gifted brothers, was one of the geniuses who approach to madness. His smallest picture was worth from $10,000 to $20,000 in the auction rooms, but one rarely saw the light. He painted only when he felt moved to paint, and he felt moved very seldom. Of late years he absolutely refused to sell his work. Some of those who knew him say that he was a great idealist, but others with a more commonplace point of view, declare that he was merely lazy.

Maris lived almost the life of a hermit, and was supported by the generosity of a few friends. His studio was barred to everybody, sealed against the world religiously. What the old painter did there no one knows, but it is believed that he painted pictures—the least of which the greatest galleries of the world would covet— and then burned them because they did not realize his visions.

Art dealers who approached him with checks and flattery were driven away. He told them his pictures were not worth selling, and he did not propose to impose them on the public, which followed the fashion like sheep, and would buy anything but a name. For the same reason he would not sign a picture, holding that every work of art should stand on its own merits regardless of the author's name.

The work he did was not turned out quickly. He one remarked that he had started a portrait of two babies some years ago, that the babies were now grandparents, and he was still working on the picture. His chief vexation was the income tax collector, who would not believe that an artist who was one of the highest sellers was without money.

Binghamton "Press"—The government must go a great deal farther than it has in stabilizing prices. It is unjust to limit one man's profits and leave another unrestrained. And the public will not be satisfied until the consumers have some assurance that the prices they pay are made necessary by war conditions and not merely by the greed of producers who are fixing prices entirely in their own interest.

GERMAN JOURNALIST CONDEMNS GERMANY

A book in some ways even more significant than the famous "J'Accuse," which was a most powerful indictment of Germany by a German is "Two War Years in Constantinople," by Dr. Harry Stuermer, former correspondent of the Cologne Gazette one of the most influential of German newspapers. Dr. Stuermer appears to be one of those "good Germans" of whom we have heard frequently, but whom few people have seen. An exile from home because he tried to tell the truth is he saw it, and having nothing to hope for, he tells the outside world that what the Allies have said about Germany in regard to atrocities in Belgium, France and elsewhere is true. He confirms the report of the Bryce Committee on Armenian massacres, and admits that the real facts with regard to the rape of Belgium are even more terrible than the world has supposed. He is a brave man, is Dr. Stuerner, and as the New York Nation says in reviewing his book, an ornament to the profession of journalism.

WHAT HAPPENED IN BELGIUM

Dr. Stuermer has had unusual opportunities for reporting the war. He went first as a soldier to the Eastern front and fought through the Masurian campaign. Here he met many officers who had been in Belgium, and in private conversation they did not scruple to admit what had been done there. One officer remarked: "When we wanted to make a requisition or plunder a house, we had a very simple form of procedure; one of my men was ordered to slip a Belgian gun through a cellar window in the house in question. Then we made a search for hidden weapons, and if we found only a rifle we were ordered to confiscate everything, without pity, and bring away the people." One of the best-known of German correspondents, Paul Schweder, assured Stuermer that "there had been thousands of cases of women and young girls of the best Belgian and French families" assaulted by German soldiers who remained unpunished in most instances. In private conversation, Schweder would make his reader's hair stand on end with his revelations, although in his correspondence he said nothing that the German Government would not approve.

WHAT HE SAW IN TURKEY

Dr. Steurmer was invalided from the army on the Eastern front, and when his health was partly restored he was sent by his newspaper to Turkey in 1915. In Constantinople he beheld with his own eyes the beginning of the terrible crusade against the Armenians. Thousands of refined Armenian men, women and children were obliged to leave their homes and set forth on the journey which was to end in death in the desolate plains of Asia Minor or on the parched shores of the Euphrates. For months he would daily encounter bands of these people being driven through the streets. One evening when his wife was passing a police station she heard frightful groans from within, and a policeman told her calmly that they were torturing an Armenian. He was told by other Germans that nothing written about the Armenian massacres could possibly be exaggerated.

GERMANY IS RESPONSIBLE

Dr. Stuermer does not waste his indignation upon the Turks for what they did to the Armenians. He says that the Germans had Turkey absolutely in hand, and could have put an end to the outrages at a moment's notice. But his own official countrymen, however, merely washed their hands of the blood of a million human beings. "When the Armenian patriarch used to come to our Ambassador with tears in his eyes begging for help—and I witnessed this scene more than once at our Embassy—no interest was shown for anything but German prestige, wounded vanity, but never any compassion for the fate of the Armenian people." Individual German officers, he charges, were even worse than the Turks, for when the Ottomans had not the heart to fire on women and children who had taken refuge indoors, the Germans turned their guns on the buildings and engaged in "cynical artillery practice." To Dr. Stuermer's own knowledge the Kaiser was informed of what was going on in Turkey and was prayed to intervene, but he paid no attention to the communications.

A BRAVE CORRESPONDENT.

Dr. Stuermer did what he could. He wrote to his paper of the horrors he had witnessed. The censor suppressed his articles, and presently his employers dismissed him. When he continued to send back stories of outrages he was ordered to rejoin the colors, although he had been declared absolutely unfit for service Steurmer, however, managed to escape to Switzerland, by means that he properly fails to divulge, and arrived there in safety, but now a man without a country, he has produced his book. When one bears in mind that Steurmer is a loyal German, that he has been a German soldier, and that it is without hope of reward, but only to clear his own conscience, that he has spoken, his great service will be appreciated. In the years to come, and when Germany begins to win her way back to a standing as a civilized nation, she will regard as her saviors the men like Stuermer, and not the men like Hindenburg.

PRIZE MONEY FOR THE MEAFORD MEN

Canadian Steamer Sank a German Submarine in the Mediterranean

TORONTO, Sept —Mr. George E. Fair, Managing Director of the Farrar Transportation Company, has received a cheque for $500 from the Department of Naval Service, Ottawa, for distribution among the crew of the ship Meaford for sinking a German submarine in the Mediterranean on June 12.

The Meaford was chartered from the Farrar Company for transatlantic and Mediterranean service by the French Government, and was proceeding to Bona, from Swansea, when it met the submarine off Scilly, in the Mediterranean. Gunners on the Meaford replied to the fire from the submarine, and had the satisfaction of seeing the submarine sink with the third shell.

The Meaford was under the command of Captain C. Dusting. It plied on the Upper Lakes, but was frequently seen in Toronto harbour. It is the familiar "Welland Canal" size, and was built at Newcastle-on-Tyne for the Farrar Company in 1903.

$70 A WEEK IN FACTORIES.

Employers Complain That Labourers Won't Stay Even at This Rate.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. — Good wages were paid in this city before the war; high wages were the rule after the United States entered the war, and now "an era of extravagant wages seems to have set in," according to C. E. Bilton, President of Manufacturers' Association. Many workmen in factories here are getting $50 a week, while $70 and up is not uncommon.

All lines of manufacture are affected. Factories are paying 60 cents an hour for almost unskilled men and complaining that they cannot hold them even on those rates. Street labourers have passed the $3 a day mark, and now are getting $4. Mercantile establishments and offices report that they are suffering because their employees, male and female, are leaving to go to the factories.

The draft and contracts that must be filled on time are mainly responsible for the new condition, help being scarce and employers competing for what there is available.

You Can't Brush Or Wash Out Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completey dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky, and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

IMPERIAL MUNITIONS BOARD TO SPEND $1,000,000 A DAY

OTTAWA, —Big business is assured for Canada in the coming fall and winter. The sustenance of national prosperity in the season when ordinarily a pinch is experienced is involved in the expenditures which are in prospect.

The Imperial Munitions Board, financed by Canadian credits, plans to spend roughly a million dollars a day. The war cost, considerable of which is for supplies at home, amounts to about $850,000 a day, while other Government outlays bring the daily total to a million; on shipbuilding fifty millions of contracts are in process of execution, and in general lines the outlook is optimistic.

An Enormous Problem.

The financial situation, however, presents an enormous problem and it is in connection with it and the full utiliaztion of Canadian resources that Lord Reading, representing the British Treasury, and Lord Northcliffe, heading the British Mission to the United States, are coming here next month.

The adverse balance of trade against Great Britain is so heavy and the complicated system of exchange, which few attempt to explain or understand, is so adverse, that the financing of this immense volume of business depends very materially upon Canada's capacity to raise the money.

By way of loan money is advanced to the British Government to finance its purchases. The measure of the country's war business and ability the measure of its capacity to provide money for dollar credits. It is being done partly by the Government itself, partly by the banks and partly by the war loans and smaller savings, schemes employed to help out on various lines.

$30,000,000 a Month.

The Imperial Munitions Board, which has been a fountain head of industrial prosperity, is not going out of business. When on the crest of the wave, the expenditure mounted to fifty millions a month. Conservative policy has caused a reduction to the basis of thirty million a month. It will likely continue on that basis all the winter, ensuring a sustained output and the extensive employment that goes with it.

The shipbuilding industry is an offshoot of the board's activities, but unlike the munitions business it will continue after the war is over. Three new contracts for steel ships were let this week, bringing the total up to thirty-seven. On the coast they are building several of 8,800 tons capacity, on the lakes ships of smaller size, 3,500 are under way, while on the St. Lawrence and the Atlantic the average is 5,000 tons.

Building Wooden Ships.

At the same time 47 wooden ships are being constructed. Every yard of any consequence from Victoria to Sydney has its shipping contract The steel ships are being constructed on the ordinary contract basis, the wooden vessels on the cost plus a percentage basis. While there have been some delays, much better progress is being made than was anticipated, and Canadian yards are doing their part in helping to supply the world shortage of tonnage due to war conditions.

The financial problem incidental to the war and its outlays is indicated by the fact that Canada has raised by war loans $350,000,000, has advanced to the Munitions Board $325,000,000, has spent under the head of war expenditure considerably over $600,000,000 up to the first of the present month.

New Internal Loan.

The new internal loan of about $150,000,000 will be launced in November. The Canadian bankers last week provided credits for eighty millions to move the crop, and money is being raised in every conceivable way consistent with national finance.

What the public does not understand is how closely allied to the raising of these loans and credits is the unparalleled prosperity resulting from war orders. Unless Canada can put up the money, adverse conditions of exchange and enormous outlays all over make it difficult for England to do it, despite her being still the banker of the world. The wheels of Canadian industry will not slacken this winter, according to the plans now in progress, but it is pointed out as necessary that economy be exercised and that it is desirable, if not essential, that all available savings be placed in those national avenues of finance which are the dynamic force in running not only the war, but all the prosperity bearing industries that have sprung up from it.

A WONDER OF SURGERY.

Boy, Once Given Up as Dying, is Perfectly Restored.

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Before many representatives of medical journals and students of surgery, Dr. W. J. Hurley, head surgeon of St. Bernard's Hospital, performed the second operation on George Vincent, ten years old, who a year ago was given up as having no chance of recovery from injuries received by the discharge of a shotgun directly in his face. By the transplanting of a rib Dr. Hurley was able some months ago to make a new lower jaw and a chin for the boy, but the operation left him with an imperfect mouth. Yesterday, Dr. Hurley, assisted by Dr. F. C. Jacobson, cut Vincent's face open from the corners of the mouth to the ears, and Dr. Oscar Streck inserted a bridgework of eleven teeth in the upper jaw. The face was then sewed together, and when the stitches were removed the boy who was given up for dead, will return to his home at Sault Ste Marie with a perfect mouth and no disfigurement.

Before broiling a slice of ham rub brown sugar on it. The ham will then have a delicious flavour. It is an improvement to soak in sugar and water a while.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

CHAPTER VIII.

That evening, from her garden, Ramona watched The Thanksgiving as the vessel crept out of the harbour and disappeared in the gloom toward the west. A vast feeling of relief swept over her. Barton's companions had gone without him. He was hers, now, wholly hers, to nurse, to watch over, to—love. The fates had accorded her a month, within which to find happiness; she dared not look beyond that. A feeling akin to that if the mother animal for its young stirred within her; she would fight for this man against sickness and death—later perhaps, against Ormiston and all the world. She went into the house and sat beside his bed. She had sat there the greater part of the day, and of the preceding night, fanning him, moistening his fever-cracked lips with water, and the juices of fruit, serving him in those poor ways that her inexperience suggested. She did not dare send to the town for help; once the wounded man's presence beneath her roof became known, she would but nurse him to save him for Ormiston's wrath.

His fever-flushed face was drawn with pain, yet mercifully he did not feel it. Long periods of unconsciousness, linked by a web of delirium, robbed him of all knowledge of his surroundings. At times he imagined himself aboard ship, giving orders to his men, caling for Captain Willoughby to relieve him, to bring him water. At others he fancied himself back again in New Bedford, and held long and earnest conversations with Ramona in the belief that she was his mother. It brought to the girl's heart a sombre joy; she pressed his hand, and kissed him softly upon the forehead, as his mother might have done. So great a capacity for loving had the bitter years given her that passion burned with a white and virginal fire, akin to mother love.

Pedro, not unacquainted with the simple remedies employed by the natives of the island, prepared dressings of healing herbs for the wound; he informed his mistress that it was not necessarily fatal—a shrewd guess, no doubt, yet a correct one. The fever that came with it was the chief thing to be fought; for that he had Lucia make teas from the roots of certain plants. What merit lay in these concoctions Ramona did not know. Barton's rugged health was doubtless his most potent weapon in the fight for life that ensued. Yet for well nigh ten days he tossed in the throes of a delirium, so that Ramona grew white and haggard from long hours without sleep. Only by the greatest efforts could Lucia persuade her to leave the sick man's side. Then she would snatch a little rest upon the rattan couch that stood in the outer of the two rooms that comprised the main part of the house.

One evening, as she came in to him with cupful of orange juice, she fancied that, for the first time, he recognized her. The thought caused her to tremble; she clutched at the post of the bed, and stood gazing down at him, afraid to speak.

The madness had gone from his eyes. He smiled up at her, and moved one of his hands, as though seeking hers.

"You—you know me?" whispered the girl at length.

He nodded, very slowly; she saw that the effort cost him much.

"Where am I?" he asked.

She told him, soothingly, her hand upon his forehead.

"In my house," she said "You must stay here until you are well again."

That was all, but it seemed to satisfy him. His return to consciousness was but temporary, vague; he drifted into a quiet sleep as soon he had drunk the cup of hot milk that Lucia brought.

On another occasion, a day or two later, he seemed stronger, his faculties more thoroughly awake. She had come to him early in the day, to find him just rousing from a restful sleep. His wound, which had been giving him a great deal of pain, was slowly healing, the inflammation had ceased, his fever was a thing of the past. He was exceedingly weak, but that, she very well knew, was a matter of small moment, now.

He stretched forth one of his wasted hands and touched hers as she placed it on his forehead.

"You have been very good to me," he whispered.

"Why should I not be?" she replied, then wondered whether he would understand why—whether, indeed, she wanted him to do so.

For a time he turned restlessly, gazing through the doorway into the outer room. Some thought within his brain seemed to trouble him. Presently he made as though to rise, but his strength was not great enough; he fell back upon the pillows.

"What it is, John" she asked, fearing his answer.

"I must join my ship," he muttered uneasily.

"John—dear John——" she caressed him with her voice. "Your ship has sailed these two weeks."

"Two weeks!" He gasped out the words, amazed. For a long time he seemed unable to realize their import. "What do you mean, girl?" he presently asked, his eyes raised to hers almost imploringly.

"Two weeks have you lain here, wounded, burnt with a fever. Do you not remember?"

He shook his head. A vague unrest clouded his eyes.

"Even now," Ramona went on, "the wound in your side has but begun to heal. You must be very quiet, and not excite yourself." She smiled radiantly at him, happy in the mastery his weakness gave her. "I am your nurse, John. You must do as I say."

"How came I by the wound?" he asked her.

"Have you forgotten—the night you came to me, to say goodby—the shot from beside the road—how you fainted, here in my garden. We—my servants and I—brought you into the house, and nursed you. For many days you raved in a fever, and talked of those I know not. Now you are almost well again." Her soft Spanish accent gave to her words a charming piquancy.

Barton, however, seemed roused to further unrest.

"My comrades — my friends," he asked—"did they not seek for me?"

"Yes." They came the next day. Two sour old men in black. I told them nothing. They went away."

"Girl," he answered, eying her sternly, "you should not have done that."

His manner almost brought tears to her eyes. Had her care of him then been nothing, that he resented the manner in whcih she had given it?

"I could not tell them," she cried. "They would have taken you away, and you were too weak to go. You needed my care. It would have killed you, had you gone." She might have added that it would have come near killing her as well. "I felt that if you stayed, you might—get—well." Her voice broke; he knew so little of the terrors that surrounded her.

Some of the unrest that haunted Barton's face passed away with her words. He say her eyes, carressing, infinitely tender, beneath their veil of unshed tears. The nearness of her, the mantle of love with which she wrapped him about, brought to him a closer knowledge of what she had done for him, and perhaps, too, a vague suggestion of her reasons for having done it. Certainly love was written large across her white and tired face.

"How can I ever thank you?" he said slowly, very tenderly.

"I want no thanks," she told him, with a charming simplicity. "I have been very happy."

He took her hand and pressed it within his trembling grasp. There was small strength in him, as yet.

"I shall remember always, how good, how sweet you have been. But surely now I am well enough to go." Again he tried to raise himself in the bed, but she pushed him back, very gently, upon the pillows.

"Ah—no—no. Do you not see how weak you are? You cannot go away for a long time. Come—let me give you a little wine. It will bring you strength." She turned to the table at her side, and took from it a cup of sack.

Barton drank it, in response to her pleading. When he spoke again, there was a new note in his voice.

"Why should you do all this for me?" he asked, regarding her closely.

She turned away to hide her embarrassment. In the presence of this man she was conscious of a singular constraint. Yet there had seemed nothing strange in her desire to serve him. She loved him. It was enough.

"You needed me," she said, very softly, "and I—I was lonely—very lonely—you could not understand."

Barton lay for a long time regarding her in silence. Few women had entered his life, none, in truth, save his mother, and the chance acquaintances of their little New England town. The sea had up to now been his mistress, his love. Regarding the compelling beauty of the woman before him, he, too, became conscious of a strange embarrassment.

"I thank you, girl, with all my heart," he said gravely, as she took the cup from him. "There—I am better now. But for your sweet care—"

"It was nothing," she interrupted. "I am glad—oh, so very glad—to see you grow well again." She laughed nervously, with little blushes that she strove to hide by busying herself with the arrangement of his pillows. "And yet," she added gayly, "almost I am sorry, if you grow tired—and—want to—leave me."

"But, child," Barton said, "surely must find my people——"

"They have gone, I tell you. There is nobody, now, but just you—and—me." Her words, when she had spoken them, terrified her; she turned away, crimson.

"But—your parents," he stammered. The wonder of the situation grew with the moments.

"My parents are dead. Once before I told you. Have you forgotten?" She did not wish to speak regarding these matters. How could he understand—how could she hope hope ever to make him understand?

"You live here alone?" he asked with mounting surprise.

"Yes—alone." She bent her head to hide the shadow that swept over her face.

Money In the Idea.

"There is money in maintenance," the Electrical Merchandising Magazine points out. "Large hotels do not buy glassware; they contract with a glass concern which keeps them stocked at so much per month regardless of the amount of breakage. Taxicab companies in the big cities do not buy tires; they contract with a tire dealer to keep their cars equipped at a set price per car per year, regardless of punctures and blowouts. Now comes the story of an electrical contractor who is profiting by keeping the electric equipment of his customers in order on a monthly maintenance basis.

"The idea is not new. The glass man borrowed it from somewhere; the taxi tire man borrowed it from him, and so it goes. Originality is almost an unknown thing. A clever business man is simply one who adapts borrowed ideas successfully—and who does it first in his locality."

A Daylight Saving Scheme.

Instead of setting clocks an hour forward in spring and an hour backward in fall, Professor Lecorbun suggests to the French Academy of Sciences a simple method of making the change gradually and with the seasons. This consists of altering slightly the length of the pendulums of clocks at the winter and summer solstices, so that beginning with Dec. 21 they would gain thirty seconds a day, and beginning with June 21 would lose thirty seconds a day.

The effect of this would be that by March 21 they would be forty-five minutes ahead and by June 21 they would be an hour and thirty minutes ahead. After which the pendulums would be changed, and the clocks would lose at the same speed.

Under such an arrangement we should have to set our watches forward or backward half a minute every night.

Voluntary Prisoners.

During the early weeks of occupation of Port-au-Prince by the American marines the patrols rounded up seventy-three prisoners. The jails being unspeakable at that time, these prisoners were parked out in a clean, roofed over corral, where of course they were regularly fed. A few days after the collection was put into the corral the captain of marines asked his sergeant to go in and make a careful count of the prisoners, as he feared some of them might have escaped. The sergeant counted over his haul three times. "Well," said the captain, "are they all there?" "I can't make it out, sir," said the sergeant, "we put seventy-three of 'em in here on Monday and there's a hundred and two of 'em, mostly soldiers, in there now."—George Marvin in World's Work.

Didn't Win by His Teeth.

"Our first president owed his wonderful health to sound teeth."

I assume that the dentist knows more about teeth than he knows about history. Washington's teeth were his one physical defect. They amounted almost to a facial blemish when he smiled, and one sour critic of our first president who knew him well said the reason he so rarely laughed was his dislike to showing the ravages of decay in his mouth.

Fighting Seasickness.

There is one place in a ship where the voyager may be at rest. This writer discovered it during a mid-Atlantic storm when he went down to the bathroom, tumbled into a warm sea bath and floated. The vessel was performing the most amazing antics, but the water in the bath kept its usual gravity, and the bather floated with a smile upon its bosom.—London Tatler.

Proof of the Fact.

"I can prove to the satisfaction of the court that my client in stealing the watch of the complainant was actuated by the most laudable motive of economy."

"What was that, sir?"

"He merely wanted to gain time."

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood, and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

GALA DAY FOR THIEVES

Lack of Police in London Hampers Adequate Patrol Work.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The skeleton of a police force left after the demands of the military authorities have been supplied is having a very busy time just at present. Notwithstanding the enormous numbers of business men who are acting as specials, the police department find it practically impossible to cover all the patrol work necessary, especially in the suburban districts.

As a consequence thieves are having a particularly successful season. Every day the police are called to the store of some tradesman and find that in the early hours the place has been entered and a good haul of goods taken, while the thieves have departed without opposition or discovery.

Soft goods firms are the chief sufferers. The method of the thieves is to drive up in a van to the door, and entering either by the use of a skeleton key or forcing the lock, proceed to load their van with goods removed from their boxes and bundle as for delivery to the wholesale trade. Having taken the cream from the stock they walk out, close the door, and drive away.

An instance of the disposal of these stolen goods is given by the inspector of a North London district. A shop handling shirtwaists was entered one morning shortly after 6 o'clock, and a quantity of voile blouses taken. Before the end of the week the police discovered that practically the whole of these had been sold by hawkers to the women in the neighbourhood at half their original price as part of a bankrupt stock.

A Buttonhole Watch.

In spite of the fact that there is no article of jewelry more useful than the watch it seems hard to stow it away in a suit of clothes. It has been tucked away in vest pockets and belts, attached either to an ornate chain or an inconspicuous ribbon, and has adorned the wrists of all classes.

But the very latest and most conspicuous location yet chosen for it is in the buttonhole of a coat lapel. The buttonhole watch is necessarily tiny, and fits into a gunmetal case which resembles a large-sized collar-button in shape. When worn merely for the convenience of the owner the watch is usually turned upside down, so that the time may be seen at a downward glance, without even lifting the lapel of the coat.

It is said that the diminutive size of the watch does not interfere with the accuracy of the works.—Popular

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Noted Duelist's Last Fight

A Story of the Reign of Louis XV.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Frenchmen have been more prone to settle their differences by the code duello than any other nationality. The French also have maintained the practice longer than other people. But the French code of the sixteenth century and the French code of the twentieth century are two different propositions, the latter being an enervated form of the former. During the reign of Louis XIII. so many men were killed in duels that the government issued an edict making dueling punishable with death. In the first decade of the twentieth century there were few duels, and those were only carried to the loss of a little blood.

About the middle of the eighteenth century there flourished in Paris a duelist, Louis Fontaine, who killed so many men that at last the king sent him through the proper channel a notification that his next killing under the code would be followed by his own demise at the hands of the executioner.

The last duel of Fontaine's was especially inhuman. Young Albert Le Vert had just been married to a girl very much admired in Parisian society. One day Le Vert passed Fontaine in that street which is now Rue Rivoli. They met near where stands the Louvre. It had been raining, and the sidewalk was wet and muddy. The streets of Paris in those days were not the well paved thoroughfares they are today. Le Vert happened to step in a puddle of water and bespattered Fontaine's boots. The boots were covered with mud already, but this did not prevent Fontaine's making a pretext of the incident to send a challenge to Le Vert. The next day it was all over Paris that the young husband had been carried home mortally wounded by Louis Fontaine, the cause of the killing being that Le Vert had unintentionally bespattered Fontaine's already muddy boots.

So much indignation was excited among the Parisians that the government felt compelled to take notice of it; hence the communication sent to Fontaine.

The duelist dared not disobey the injunction, but he showed his contempt for it and public opinion by sending invitations to persons with whom he had fought and only pinked to a supper celebrating his enforced retirement from the dueling field. This act only inflamed the more the citizens of Paris, especially Le Vert's sympathizers. The government was not in a position to forbid the supper. At any rate, it did not attempt to prevent it, and the invitations were generally accepted, for those of Fontaine's former admirers whom he had not killed were duelists with sufficient skill to have saved their lives. Such men were inclined to be proud of having been out with the noted Fontaine and did not conceal the fact that they would be present at his supper celebrating his retirement.

So far as the duelists were concerned the meeting was a success. Among those whose relatives had been killed either by the host or some one of his guests there were mutterings, and during the evening a number of them gathered at the house of a man who had lost a son by Fontaine's hand, and it was proposed that they go to the place where the celebration was being carried on and express their disapprobation.

Men in those days wore side arms.

so it was not necessary that they should provide weapons which they might find necessary. Most of them had rapiers, but some carried the clumsy pistol in vogue at that time. They marched to the house where the supper was being eaten and, stationing themselves under a window, began to jeer and groan.

Fontaine, seizing a pistol, went to the window, followed by his guests, and stood out on a balcony. Some one below fired a shot at the gang above. This was a signal for the duelists to send a fusillade down into the protestants, whereupon the latter immediately dispersed, some of them having been wounded. They were followed by ha, ha's from the duelists, who shouted after them, calling them cowards and other contemptuous names. When the company again took their places at the supper table Fontaine addressed his guests, expressing his regret that he had been stopped from exercising "self defense," as he called it, in the only way befitting a gentleman. But the government was too powerful for him to oppose, and he must needs retire on his laurels already won. He had fought his last duel.

When the meeting broke up the guests all pledged this admirable representative of the custom they advocated. Then as they passed out each took him by the hand, expressing the expectation that since he had passed his last danger he would live a long life in comfort.

When the door had closed on the last departing guest Fontaine threw himself into the chair he had occupied at the head of the table. Whether it was the change from conviviality to loneliness or whether "that still, small voice" spoke to him, a depression came upon him in contrast with his recent exhilaration. He closed his eyes and, to shade them, covered them with his hand.

While sitting there before him passed all his encounters, most of which were crimes. Last of all came the murder of young Le Vert, whom he had snatched from his bride before the honeymoon had passed. There being no one present before whom his pride would induce him to show his usual braggadocio, he emitted a suppressed groan.

It seemed to him that it was answered by a sigh—a wail, rather—from one near him.

He opened his eyes.

There at the other end of the table, facing him, her sad eyes bent upon him, sat a woman. She was young and beautiful, but she wore the garb of a widow.

As Fontaine lowered his hand from his eyes it trembled. He had heard no one enter. Was this the shade of the widow of one of his victims? He would have questioned her as to who she was and how she came there, but this man who had faced steel and lead imperturbably was now deprived of his voice.

The visitor sat like a statue, gazing at him through a pair of lustrous eyes that seemed to his excited imagination to grow larger and larger, until they enveloped his soul. He sat staring at her as one paralyzed.

Finally her lips moved.

"You are supposed, monsieur, to have fought your last fight. You have celebrated your retirement from the field of your many murders; you have counted your victims. There is one of whom you have not taken note."

She paused. Fontaine, in an almost inaudible voice, asked her whom he had omitted.

"Yourself," was the reply.

Fontaine shuddered.

"All Paris longs for your taking off. You easily drove away strong men tonight because they feared you. You cannot drive me away, because you fear me. You have celebrated your last duel before the fact. It is yet to be—with a weak woman."

"May I ask, madame," gasped Fontaine, "who it is that has honored me with this visit?"

"I am Christine Le Vert, the widow of your last victim."

Again Fontaine shuddered.

"You separated me from my husband not a week after our marriage and blighted my life. You are said to have splendid nerve, M. Fontaine. It remains for you to prove that you have better nerve than one who is indifferent to existence."

"I cannot fight a woman."

"This is no test of strength nor of skill. It is a mere matter of nerve. Therefore it is no stigma upon your brilliant career to fight with me. Come, M. Fontaine, let us begin. The cocks will begin to crow soon, and you must die before the first rays of the sun gild the summit of Montmartre."

From under her cloak she produced two pistols. They were of the old type, large and single barreled, with flintlocks. One she tossed to Fontaine, the other she laid on the table before her."

"Madame," Fontaine began, "I protest"—

"A protest will avail you nothing, monsieur. I have been sent to close this career of yours as is befitting. You have shed the blood of some of the best men in France. It is meet that the end of your deeds should be brought about by one of the softer sex."

Fontaine slowly put out his hand and as slowly clasped his fingers about the weapon. A singular look came upon his face—a diabolical look—but it vanished as quickly as it had come. It expressed a thought to raise the weapon and kill his tormenter before she could fire. That it was only momentary was the only redeeming trait in the fiend's career. He valued his career too highly to end it by murdering a woman. His opponent read what had passed in his mind, but it had no visible effect upon her. Her weapon lay before her on the table, but she made no move to take it up.

"Who shall give the word?" asked Fontaine.

"You."

He sat still, benumbed.

"Come, M. Fontaine," said the lady. "You who have stepped up so firmly to so many frays are surely not going to weaken at this crowning exploit."

Fontaine raised his pistol with a trembling hand.

"Give the word yourself," he gasped, white as a sheet.

"One!" she said.

She raised her pistol.

"Two!"

She cocked it.

"Three!"

One shot rang out.

A gendarme passing without ran into the building, upstairs and into the room where the shot had been fired. No living being was there. Fontaine sat in his chair lifeless, his body bent forward and resting on the table. The gendarme called for assistance, and the body was examined for a wound. No wound was found. There was no weapon in the room. And yet the gendarme swore that he had heard a shot.

In the morning all Paris was talking about the turn that had taken place in this celebration of the noted duelist's last encounter. How he died no one ever knew. The doctors pronounced all his functions in perfect condition. There was not even the slightest heart weakness.

Fontaine's singular death caused the practice of settling differences by the code in France to fall away, and from that day it has degenerated. It has never since been the deadly thing it was before. True, it has since been much abused, but today dueling in France is a mere mockery of what it was.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.

Breakfast Under Water.

Admiral Colville has a good story to tell of a breakfast, eaten under water in the Dardanelles, which deserves to take its place among all other good breakfast-table stories and for all time. A submarine was proceeding up the Straits when the captain happened to notice through the periscope that a floating mine had attached itself to the rudder. He imparted the information to the lieutenant, and they agreed not to tell the crew but to have breakfast and consider what was best to be done. In twenty minutes a plan for removing the mine was matured. The plan succeeded.

Temperature of Earth.

The temperature of the earth appears to increase from the outer surface downwards at the rate of one degree Fahrenheit for every fifty or sixty feet, and at the relatively short distance of a very few miles the temperature must be exceedingly high.

A New Industry.

It is proposed to start a new industry in British Honduras for the production of oil from the cohune palm, which grows prolifically in that country.

Loam soil weighs seventy-five to ninety pounds a cubic foot when dry.

Use Subs To Fight Subs

IT is as a neutral, devoted friend of the Allied cause, says Dr. R. Anema, described in The London Daily Mail as a well-known Dutch thinker, that I propose in all modesty my idea to the highly competent advisers of the Allies, with the following explanatory remarks:

Qualities a fleet of submersible destroyers should possess: The submarine destroyer, built with the object of sinking U-boats, should be twice the size of the boat it has to attack, should have double the surface speed and diving capacity, the external plaiting should be twice as thick as that of its adversary, and its armament should be twice as powerful.

Supposing Germany possesses 300 submarines, the Allies should have a fleet of 3,000 submersible destroyers to chase the 300 pirates. This fleet of submersible destroyers should be divided into different squadrons, to be stationed in waters which the pirate mostly haunts. Each squadron should be ready to start out as soon as a German pirate has been signaled in its zone.

Why the technical success of the submarine destroyer seems to be assured: Taking the submarine as it exists, the application of my idea, from a technical point of view, has this advantage, that it has not to go through the stages incumbent on an altogether new invention. The necessary stages of every new invention are: (1) The conception of the idea in all its technical details; (2) the trials and experiments before the idea can be put into practice. All this means time, which, at the present, is an exceedingly valuable factor.

Why the submersible destroyer should be more practical than the surface destroyer: Why do I imagine that the submarine itself can be made specially effective in hunting the submarine? In answering this question I would recall the habits of a certain tiny Javanese duck which lives almost as well under as above water. In presence of danger it dives, usually long before the hunter can reach it, just as the German submarine dives as soon as it smells danger. To approach the duck the hunter makes himself almost invisible. His gun lying in front of him on the bow of the boat, he lies prone in an extremely low and small canoe, paddled by a clever little native. Were he able to convert his surface canoe at will into a submersible, to dive and reappear close to the flock of ducks, he certainly would have a better chance of surprising them than now, when he has to remain a long way off and trust to a skill that few shots possess.

The ocean-going German submarine (we know this from the logbooks of their commanders) keeps out of the way of its enemies. The submersible destroyer would have another advantage over the surface destroyer: that of being able to make itself invisible by diving if attacked.

Lack of adaptability, a weakness of the Allies in this war: I believe that the Allies in this war have often been behindhand in adopting the ideas of others. They should have been quicker to adopt war methods, even those of the Germans, who, having prepared for almost half a century for this war, doubtless had devices worthy of imitation. One of their ideas was the siege guns which reduced Liege and made Charleroi possible. An instance of German adaptation is the zeppelin, an engine not their originally, but which in their hands has become a force in naval battles. Then there is the submarine.

I am of the opinion that the Allies underrated the technical capacities of their opponents. To underrate one's enemy is a mistake. Even now, after nearly three years of war experience, one hears intelligent people say that the Germans only imitate. For argument's sake let this be granted. There are, however, moments when the adaptation of principles and devices proves more useful than new inventions. The Germans have realized this. They adapted such inventions as the dirigible, aeroplane, and submarine, and with these "perfected" engines they are doing an immense amount of harm, so much so that at a certain moment it looked as if the pretended submarine blockade of the English coast had become a reality. I sincerely hope the Allies will take this lesson to heart. I am convinced they can do it now by adapting an invention of their own, that of the submarine, and building a large fleet of submersible destroyers. It should not take them long, now that America is with them, to launch some 3,000 speedy, heavily-armed undersea destroyers.

This undersea fleet would, I believe, soon out-manoeuvre, if not altogether destroy the relatively small number of German pirates manning her U-boats. The war is not over yet, and the victory of the Allies is still some way off. I, who know the Germans, am convinced that the Central States will put up as strong a defensive action as the offensive with which they began. The declaration that the decision of this war lies on the seas becomes more and more true. The submarine for Germany is an extremely powerful weapon and a great factor in a peace "without annexations or indemnities," which for them would mean victory. A large fleet of submersible destroyers, added to the other excellent measures of defence and attack already in existence against the U-boat, would, I am sure, soon cure the German submarine evil. This is the opinion of a neutral who since the beginning of the war has done his duty towards the cause of the Allies, their cause being his, as it is that of all humanity.

How English "Slackers" Have Managed to Avoid Doing Their Bit in War

THE British authorities possess to-day an amazing record of conspiracy to avoid military service. Part of the story has been told from time to time in the courts. More will be told as the net is drawn tighter. Much that has been discovered may never be revealed, for others might thereby be encouraged into the temporarily profitable paths of crime. It began at the beginning of compulsion. While there was a great rush to answer the call, there was a small but determined move toward evasion. Young men walking the streets in civilian attire, letters from mothers wanting to know "Why my boy is taken and so-and-so is left," open boasts that men had "done the authorities," soon told the tale. Recruiting raids—denounced in some quarters as "interference with the liberty of the subject" and the rest—confirmed suspicions, and the authorities were soon at work fighting the criminals.

Personation was the first discovery. Two hefty men arrested as suspected persons produced army rejection certificates. Inquiry showed that in each case a man suffering from locomotor ataxia had twice gone before the medical boards, afterward handing the men the rejection certificates thus obtained. That form of personation was resorted to in other cases. It is no longer possible, for reasons which need not be discussed here, although there is reason to believe in some cases medical specialists have been imposed upon by some similar trick by men anxious to secure certificates for presentation to tribunals.

Foiled in the personation game, the master minds in a criminal conspiracy resorted to forgery. Rejection certificates were obtained from men justly entitled to them—obtained by criminal methods. Occasionally they were purchased from unscrupulous holders for a few shillings; often they were stolen from men under the influence of drink or drugs. Then, with ready acid and pen, the forger, having found a purchaser, changed the name and address on the certificate, and parted with it for a good round sum. A man, or men, in the North of England "collected" several of the earlier certificates in this way, and came to London. The first forged "rejection" form was sold for £15. Later, forms were parted with for sums ranging from £5 to 5s. That process has been stopped.

Again, numbers of blank certificates were stolen from a recruiting office. Months later they were found on men who had evaded military service by their use, properly filled in, stamped, and signed, and so completed as to deceive any but those with the most detailed knowledge of the recruiting service.

A later form of fraud involved the use of a merchant seaman's papers, stolen or purchased from some inebriated sailor in the purlieus of the docks. American seamen frequently parted with their papers. These papers were sold to some man anxious to avoid army service, and until the fraud was discovered, quite by chance, served as a sufficient answer to police or recruiting office inquiries as to the position of the holder, for merchant seamen are exempt from service.

Stimulated, or even artificially induced, symptoms of tuberculosis, synovitis, and debility are still met with. The introduction of the tubercle bacilli into sputum submitted for analysis has been heard of; the allegation of synovitis induced by an injection has been publicly reported. Men, it is believed, on the advice of the doctors, have starved themselves and gone without sleep for days before going before the doctors. There are records of one young man who starved himself for five days, who had practically no sleep for the same period, and then, the night before the medical examination, rubbed shampoo powder into his eyes and drank himself into intoxication. He would have been rejected as "unfit" but for a discovery that need not be related, and he is now in the army, a category "A" man.

Drugs are constantly employed—so constantly and so cleverly that there must be expert advice in the background. At one London recruiting station a young man arrived in answer to a call-up notice in a state of collapse. His face was a greenish-gray and he was apparently in pain. An experienced officer had him placed in a private room and kept under observation. Five times during the morning the man vomited. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon he was well, and by 3 o'clock, after an exceptionally thorough examination by all the members of the Medical Board, he was passed Class "A." Doping takes many forms. In one place there was apparently an epidemic of "disease of the middle-ear," marked by discharges of apparently purulent matter. The analyst was called in, and the matter turned out to be tobacco juice or condensed milk, or a mixture of both.

Malingering, too, has been proved. The "deaf" man who withstood every test, and even received a rejection card, only to succumb when an astute clerk whispered, "You have forgotten your two-and-nine-pence"; the man with the "palsied" arm, who owned up when the doctors spoke about an electric battery; the man who stayed in bed "paralyzed," while his tearful wife went to the recruiting office to explain that he could not answer the call-up, but forgot himself the next day, and was seen walking in the street—these are minor cases of attempted fraud easily discovered. Much more serious are strange stories of drugging and inoculation, which are difficult to prove.—London Times.

DON'T NEGLECT YOUR SKIN!

An eminent specialist tells us that if only one-seventh of our skin were destroyed death would follow. It is obvious, therefore, that a diseased condition of even a small portion of the body's covering has injurious effects upon the health. Hence the necessity for keeping the skin free from disease, and for this purpose there is nothing so suitable as Zam-Buk.

Immediately a Sore, a Rash or any skin trouble makes its appearance it should receive prompt treatment with Zam-Buk. This rare herbal balm destroys all germs as soon as applied and prevents the disease spreading. Then Zam-Buk grows new tissue, which replaces the diseased, and the skin is quickly restored to health.

Zam-Buk contains absolutely none of the coarse animal fat or mineral drugs found in ordinary ointments, which invariably irritate and inflame and sometimes even poison the part they are intended to soothe and heal.

Speaking of Zam-Buk, the famous English Chemist, W. Lascelles Scott, says: "I have analysed Zam-Buk and find it exclusively of vegetable origin. I have no hesitation in certifying its purity and value for skin diseases and injuries."

Zam-Buk is found in the homes of the best people of the Dominion to-day, because of its unique composition, and once tried its reliability establishes it as their household balm for all time.

Zam-Buk is unequalled for eczema, ringworm, running sores, abscesses, ulcers, boils, bad legs, blood-poisoning, piles, cuts, burns, scalds, and all skin injuries. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send this advertisement and 1c. stamp (for postage) and free trial box will be sent you.

FEIGNED BLINDNESS.

Captive Professor Worked Game on the Germans.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—A professor of the Sorbonne, the great French University, recently secured his release from a German military prison by a remarkable exercise of will power. He fell into the hands of the Germans in 1915. Deciding at once to get free in some way he feigned blindness.

From that time it was impossible for the German military doctors or eye specialists to catch him off his guard. They subjected him to the severest known tests such as sudden apparitions of unfamiliar and unexpected objects, sudden transitions from complete obscurity to dazzling light. He was tortured by scientific ways of verifying sigthlessness, but never once departed from a fixed blank gaze, presenting always an absolute absence of expression in his eyes. He was finally declared totally blind, and included in a recent exchange of permanently disabled prisoners.

EVERDAY HAPPINESS.

A Recipe for Everday Happiness
TRY IT!

Take a little sprinkle of cold water,
And a small leaven of prayer;
And a little bit of sunshine gold,
Dissolved in the fresh morning air.
Add to your meat some merriment,
And a kind thought for your kith and kin,
And then, as your prime ingredient,
A plenty of work thrown in.
But spice it all with the essence of love,
And a small whiff of play:
Let a wise Old Book and a glance above
Complete this Happy day.

Behind The Guns

MR. A. H. HARRIS, Special Traffic Representative of the C. P. R.

WHEN the war broke out in August, 1914, the Imperial and Canadian Governments were faced by no greater problem than that of the assembling and transport overseas of the army supplies required from this country, not only for the Canadian Expeditionary Force, but also for the British and Allied Armies. Expert knowledge was required otherwise confusion, delays, and expensive operation would be inevitable, and experts with the necessary knowledge for such gigantic business were not easy to obtain. Lord Shaughnessy came to the Government's assistance by loaning Mr. A. H. Harris, Special Traffic Representative of the C. P. R., and righthandman to Vice-President Bosworth, with a large staff of traffic experts selected from various departments of the C. P. R., to act as a nucleus for the Overseas Transport Office. The work of this office has grown amazingly, so that to-day Mr. Harris directs no less than four-fifths of the export trade of Canada, inland and overseas, and the best evidence that the work is being well done is the fact that the Government railway and steamship interests are all satisfied, while the general business of the country has been continued with a minimum of disturbance. In fact, the number of people in Canada who are aware of conditions is infinitesimal.

Between August 14th, 1914, and February, 1915, War Office Supplies were moved overseas in chartered vessels; between February, 1915, and date transports have been supplied by the Admiralty under an arrangement negotiated by Mr. Harris in London.

The bunkering of transports is done on this side, under the direction and supervision of the director, as is also the dry docking of vessels when necessary

The magnitude of the work of the Department may be gauged from the fact that, exclusive of officials and representatives at Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Regina, Winnipeg, Fort William, Toronto, Quebec, Three Rivers, Halifax, and West St. John there is a clerical staff of 45 in Montreal alone.

The number of checkers, longshoremen, and dock laborers under control of the Department at the several Canadian ports used by the Department now exceeds 1,600 men, with a pay roll of $33,000 a week.

The volume of tonnage cleared from the seaboard has been facilitated, and delays minimized from the fact that the Presidents of the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Railways, recognizing the growth of the Transport Service, considered concentration of authority necessary to efficient direction and accordingly issued instructions to their Operating Officials that the regulation and control inland of all Imperial transport should be vested in the Director of Overseas Transport. Instructions were concurrently issued that all transport consigned to his order should be given priority of movement on the railways over all traffic, excepting passenger. As a consequence thereof, notwithstanding the volume of tonnage affected, transports have not been held for cargoes, nor has there been congestion at the Canadian seaboard, such as has been experienced at U. S. Ports.

The actual time occupied by vessels in loading at Montreal has been under 4½ days.

Canada has indeed reason to point with pride to the successful operation of its transport service due to Mr. Harris' administrative ability and the tireless energy of an efficient staff.

Famous Landmark in Irish Capital

REGENT HOUSE, Trinity College, Dublin, where the Irish Convention held its first session, is one of the landmarks of the city of Dublin, although only those who know the Irish capital well, and have entered into its life activities, will recognize it by that name. To the casual visitor, Regent House will be remembered as the gateway of Trinity College, the famous Palladian facade of which, with its blue clock and its pigeons, faces on to College Green. If the casual visitor to Dublin remembered little else of Trinity, he would surely remember the high, massive iron railings on the low granite wall; the great iron gates swung open, and beyond them the tunnel-like gateway leading under Regent House into the cobble-paved quadrangle beyond.

Regent House has been the scene of many interesting meetings. Most of the university societies still meet there, and thousands of Trinity men, the world over, recall, with mixed feelings, the written or viva voce examination held within its walls. Certainly, the Irish Convention could not have met on more historic ground. If the members, in moments of relaxation, look out of the windows facing west, College Green lies immediately beneath them, with the well-known statute of Henry Grattan in the foreground; and beyond, the length of Dame street, with the notorious statue of King William, in the garb of a Roman emperor, leading an imaginary host towards the heights of Cork Hill. Then, on the right, is the subject of the whole matter, namely; the old Irish Houses of Parliament, now occupied by the Bank of Ireland. Quite apart from its momentous present-time associations, this building is easily the most striking object to be seen from the western windows of Regent House. It was the work of five different architects, and took nearly a hundred years to complete; but it is generally recognized as one of the most beautiful one-story classical buildings in the world. As one writer well says, it is a remarkable combination of "symmetry and picturesqueness."

As to the general view, from this side of Regent House, it is one of much going and coming. The outside cars still swing round the front of Trinity, out of Grafton street, or back the other way; whilst all the trams in Dublin seem to find their way, sooner or later, through College Green. If, however, one crosses to the other side of the room, and looks out through the windows facing east, the scene is indeed a changed one. In College Green all is the hurry and bustle of a great city. In the famous cobble-paved quadrangle of Trinity, which lies behind Regent House, all is academic calm. They say in Dublin that you may always know a Fellow of Trinity by his walk. It is an exaggeration, of course; but, like most exaggerations, it has in it an element of truth. Certainly those who walk much across the cobble-stones of Trinity find there is a certain "nice and mincing step" which gets over the ground most easily.

But to return to the view: It is a grateful view at all times. In summer, however, when the trees are in leaf, and the daisies on the grass patches insist upon showing themselves, lawn mowers or no lawn mowers, it is specially good to see. To the right is the Examination Hall, with its "Armada" organ and chandelier, and, beyond, the famous library one of the four which, under the Copyright Act, is entitled to receive a copy of every volume published in the United Kingdom. On the left are the chapel, the printing house, and the dining hall, with its high oak paneling; its pulpit, from which once preached the famous Bishop Berkeley; and its long rows of oil paintings of famous Irishmen and benefactors of the college. Directly opposite the gateway, where the cobblestones definitely give way to the grass of Library Square, is the beautiful Campanile, erected in 1853 by Lord John George Beresford, Archbishop of Armagh and chancellor of the university. It is chiefly remembered by Trinity men by reason of the fact that the great bell hung within it is tolled on examination mornings. Behind the library is the Fellows' Garden, and beyond it the famous College Park. These are not included in the view from Regent House, but it may be ventured that many of the delegates will find their way, now and again, into the park, and be invited by the Fellows into their garden.

About Felines.

R. I. Pocock, superintendent of the London Zoo, explains that those felidae or cat family that have an elastic ligament between the ceratohyal and the upper elements of the suspenssorium (lion, tiger, leopard, jaguar), roar, but never purr, while all the other species of the felidae, with normally constructed hyoids, purr but never roar, and among these are the cheetah and puma.

Woman in Munitions.

Of the 500 different processes in munition work, upon which women are engaged, in England, two-thirds had never been performed by a woman previously to a year ago.

War Workers.

The number of British workers engaged in war industries has nearly doubled during the first two years of war. In 1914 there were 1,986,000; to-day there are 3,500,000.

In 1915-16 the average number of children on the roll of the London elementary schools was 728,657 and the average attendance 640,520.

A Place of Safety.

At a recent gathering, in the Guildhall, when Mr. Balfour was given an official welcome by the City of London, the following notice was on the program: "Should the proceedings be interrupted by the presence of hostile aircraft, of which ample notice will be given, it is suggested that the guests of the corporation should adjourn to the crypt beneath the Guildhall, or to the adjoining crypt under the Council Chamber, until the raid is over. The staircases on the north, south, and west sides of the Guildhall give access to these crypts, which are spacious, well lighted, and in direct communication with other parts of the building." There is something peculiarly precious about the "house agent-like" description of the crypts as "spacious and well lighted." Altogether most desirable palces, in fact. Three years ago, even the hint of the possibility of such an announcement would have been accounted a most extravagant flight of fancy.

An Athletic Dog.

Apropos of the retirement of the master of the Tower Bridge, in London, some delightful stories are being told of his long tenure of office. One especially, of a dog owned by the superintendent of Billingsgate Market, is worth repeating. The dog, it appears, one day had a mind to cross the river to the Surrey side, and, as was usual with him on such occasions, he went by way of the Tower Bridge. Just as he reached the middle of the bridge, however, one of the huge bascules began to be raised, to allow of a boat passing up or down the river. It would have been quite simple for him to have turned back, but he knew all about tower bridges, so he just adjusted himself comfortably on the rising bascule, went up with it, came down with it, and then, as the two sides were meeting once again, leaped lightly across the gap, "and continued his journey without a bark."

Enforced Geniality.

"Biggins is the gloomiest man I know of."

"And yet his wife is always making him get his picture taken."

"Of course. The photographer is the only person who can persuade him to try to smile and look natural."

Lead.

Lead was early known to the ancients. Allusions to it in Scripture indicate that the Hebrews were well acquainted with its uses. The rocks in the neighborhood of Sinai yielded it in large quantities, and it was found in Egypt.

Putting on the Screws.

"I never knew such a complaining lot of customers," growled the baker.

"Same here," answered the butcher. "They seem to take advantage of the fact that we can't get along without 'em in our buisness."

Life and Age.

Life does not count by years. Some suffer a lifetime in a day and so grow old between the rising and the setting of the sun.—Augusta Evans.

WHEN MAN'S AT WAR.

Most Trying Time is That Before a Charge "Over the Top."

Everybody wonders what are the sensations and emotions of the indivldual soldier as he waits in the front line trench for the order to charge and as he rushes across the death-swept zone toward the enemy. Does he think of the chance of death? Is he physically afraid? Does he shrink from the necessity of facing and inflicting death? Donald Hankey, the Englishman who wrote so frankly and interestingly of the soldier's experiences at the front in "A Student in Arms," considers this matter in one of the articles in the new volume, "A Student in Arms, Second Series." Mr. Hankey spent nearly the whole of two years at the front in the trenches and in the supporting lines, and was killed in action at the battle of the Somme. He says:

"The fact is that at the moment of a charge men are in an absolutely abnormal condition. Their emotions seem to be numbed. Noises, sights, and sensations which would ordinarily produce intense pity, horror, or dread have no effect upon them at all, and yet never was the mind clearer, the senses more acute. It is before an attack that a man is more liable to fear. Of all the hours of dismay that come to a soldier there are few more trying to the nerves than when he is sitting in a trench under heavy fire from high-explosive shells or bombs from trench mortars.

"You can watch these bombs lobbed up into the air. You see them slowly wabble down to earth there to explode with a terrific detonation that sets every nerve in your body a-jangling. You can do nothing. You cannot retaliate in any way. You simply have to sit tight and hope for the best. Some men joke and smile; but their mirth is forced. Some feign stoical indifference, and sit with a paper and a pipe, but as a rule their pipes are out and their reading a pretense. There are few men, indeed, whose hearts are not beating faster and whose nerves are not on edge.

"But you can't call this the fear of death. It is a purely physical reaction of danger and detonation. Personally, I believe that very few men indeed fear death. The vast majority experience a more or less violent physical shrinkage from the pain of death and wounds, especially when they are obliged to be physically inactive, and when they have nothing else to think about. But this is a purely physical reaction, which can be, and nearly always is, controlled by the mind. Last of all there is the repulsion and loathing for the whole business of war, with its bloody ruthlessness, its fiendish ingenuity, and its insensate cruelty that comes to a man after a battle, when the tortured and dismembered dead lie strewn about the trench, and the wounded groan from No-Man's Land.

"But neither is that the fear of death. It is a repulsion which breeds hot anger more often than cold fear, reckless hatred of life more often than abject clinging to it. The cases where any sort of fear, even for a moment, obtains the mastery of a man are very rare."

Effort to Enlighten.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is an overt act?"

"My son, an overt act is something that either compels you to be so rude as to fight or to be so polite as to pretend that you didn't notice it."

How Your Hair Grows.

According to an authority, the hair grows half an inch a month until it reaches its natural length. With men the natural length is from eight to twelve inches. With women it grows anywhere from eighteen inches to their heels.

A well-known society performer volunteered to entertain a roomful of the Colney Hatch Lunatic Asylum, and made up a very successful little monologue show, entirely humorous. The audience in the main gave symptoms of being slightly bored, but one highly intelligent maniac saw the whole thing in proper light and, clapping the talented actor on the shoulder, said:

"Glad you've come, old fellow. You and I will get along fine. The other dippies here are so dashed dignified. What I say is if a man is mad he needn't put on airs about it!" — London Opinion.

BRITISH MAKE SUCCESSFUL AIR RAIDS

FOE ATTACK ON VERDUN FRONT FAILS

German Invaders Have Been Reinforced With New Forces

Huns Are Developing Their Success in Oesel Island in the Gulf of Riga According to Petrograd Reports To-day---British Aerial Forces Make Raid Over German Positions in Belgium---Attack on French Front at Verdun is Repulsed.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

BERLIN, via London, October 16.—The occupation by German forces of the "main portion of the island of Ossel" was announced by the War Office to-day.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PEEROGRAD Bulletin), October 16.—German landing forces on the Russian Island of Assel is developing its success, the Russian War Office announced to-day, and the Teutons are being reinforced with additional troops.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), October 16. — Northwest of Bullecourt early this morning Irish troops carried out a successful raid. The enemy's artillery showed considerable activity during the night in the neighbourhood of Ypres-Staden railway.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 16.—French war ships destroyed two Teuton submarines in the western Mediterranean in the last week of September, says the French Ministry of Marine.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 16.—A German attack on the Verdun front last night was repulsed by the French, it is announced officially.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Bulletin), October 16.—The aerial raids over Belgium were continued yesterday. In patrol encounters two German machines were driven down by British aviators.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, October 16.—In his speech at the Wurzburg Convention, Herr Ebert, president of the German Socialist party, said speedy conclusion of peace was a vital necessity for workmen in all countries, and that the policy of the mailed fist would disappear after the frightful horrors of war.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 16.—The Provisional Government has postponed the opening of the preliminary parliament from October 18 to 20. Premier Kerensky, who has recovered sufficiently from his recent indisposition to travel, will return to Petrograd to-morrow and will open parliament. There are grave fears here of a German invasion of Petrograd.

REPRISAL AIR RAIDS TO BE MADE

Bonar Law Makes Formal Announcement in House of Commons

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 16.—A formal announcement that England intends to make reprisal in kind for the German air raids over unfortified British towns was made in the House of Commons by Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law, this afternoon. He stated the Government's intention to make air raids and bombard German towns "as far as the military needs will release the necessary machines."

Lloyd George's Libel Actions Are Withdrawn

Offending Papers to Apologize For Statements Made

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The libel actions brought recently by Premier Lloyd George against the Exchange Telegraph Company, the Westminster Gazette and the Daily News, for publishing a statement that he left London when an air raid warning was given has been withdrawn, the terms being an apology for the publication and the payment of a certain sum to indemnify the Premier for his costs in the action. The Premier was present when the case was called at a special sitting of the King's Bench Division to-day where the settlement was announced.

MAY ANNOUNCE GENERAL POLICY OF AIR SERVICE

British Parliament Assembled To-day After Recess of More Than Two Months—Biggest Duty the Passing of New Vote of Credit

TWO BILLS TO-DAY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Parliament assembled to-day after a recess of more than two months, and began grappling with a grist of legislative and administrative work. Its most important duty will be the passing of a new vote of credit. This probably will bring up for discussion the general war situation, but will be a few days before that business is reached.

For to-day there is nothing more exciting scheduled than the second reading of the bill giving the Government control over all petroleum and the consideration of the titles deprivation bill which is aimed at those who take up arms against Great Britain and her Allies.

Chief interest centred in the prospect that the Government will take advantage of the opportunity to announce a general policy of its air service, a subject which has been brought into the foreground by the recent raids over London.

NO NEED FOR UNION

Is a Splendid Triumph For Plans Laid by Sir Joseph Flavelle and Sir Thomas White in the Opinion of Sir Sam Hughes

"AN UNNECESSARY STEP"

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LINDSAY, Ont., Oct. 16.— Major-General Sir Sam Hughes to-day freely expressed his views upon the creation of the Union Government, which he claimed is an unnecessary step.

"What do you think of the new Union Government," the General was asked.

"It is a splendid triumph for the plans long ago laid by Sir Jos. Flavelle and Sir Thomas White," replied Sir Sam. "It is now more than a year since the movement to form a National or a "National trust" Government, as it was sometimes termed, was proposed by Sir Joseph and his friends. It is understood that the undertakings involved at that time a replacement of Sir Robert Borden by Sir Thomas White."

"What was the motive?"

"Search me," as the Yankee said.

"You seem to think there was no pressing need for coalition."

"None whatever; that is, had the Government done its full duty during the last year."

"But Laurier had held up the proceedings for the successful carrying on of the war?"

"Nonsense! Laurier had nothing to do with it. If was Sir Thomas White, Sir Joseph Flavelle, Sir Geo. Perley, Baron Shaughnessy, and possibly a dread of the Nationalist party in Quebec under Bourassa."

"But did not Laurier force this war-time election?"

"I do not see how. On three different occasions the Government itself planned elections in war time. Once immediately after the session of 1914, again about the time of the sinking of the Lusitania, third when Rogers made his famous and inspiring Montreal address. It is understood there was still another occasion.

DOESN'T FAVOUR LAURIER.

"Do I favour Laurier? No. As I said in one of my addresses on the floor of Parliament, I could conceive only one greater calamity to Canada than losing the war and that would be the triumph of Laurier. What I do mean is this: The great Conservative party which could have swept the country, has been brought to its present pitiable state by the control over the Prime Minister of Sir Thomas White, Sir Joseph Flavelle and Sir George Perley. Had Borden eliminated their influences he could have swept Canada with 80 per cent of the electorate behind him and 99 per cent. of the soldiers."

DISCUSSES THE CABINET.

"What have you to say regarding the strength and weakness of the Cabinet as it stands to-day?"

"As men the new timber has good qualities. Some weeks ago when Gen. Mewburn and Col. Ballantyne, both my "boys" were individually condemning conditions under Borden, and when each asked me why I did not break out and take hold of things myself, I thanked them for their confidence and loyalty, but showed that the results might be the placing in power of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. To them as to many thousands of others who wished me to rebel and lead actively along proper lines in the war I made the same reply. It would have meant the splitting of the Conservative party.

Sifton and Calder are both able men and I do not think would readily become passive in the hands of White and Flavelle."

NOT FAIR CHANCE.

"Party Government has not had a fair trial in recent years in Canada," said Sir Sam, concluding. "The members of Parliament have been too prone to be servile followers of the Cabinet. The Cabinet have kept control too much by exciting hopes in the search of the members for positions where their declining years will be passed in ease and comparative luxury. The people as a whole have not sufficiently made the members of Parliament and the Cabinet feel the lash of their power. This Cabinet has been run too much by outside influence. There has not been enough independence of thought in Parliament. Therefore I say, responsible Government has not had a fair chance."

The Veterans Decide To Hold A Conference With The Citizens

Will Hold a Meeting Next Monday Night and Discuss Club Building Campaign With Representative Men and Women of the City Before Launching Project.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO THE CLYDE.
His Majesty invests Pte. Harry Christian of the Royal Lancashire Regiment with the Victoria Cross, conferred for conspicuous bravery in holding a crater position.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETINGS

The proposed campaign for funds to secure a permanent headquarters, was the principal business before the members of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association at their semi-monthly meeting in the recreation room of the armouries last night. President H. J. Staunton was in the chair and there was a large attendance of members, including Lieut.-Col. Johnston, who was invited to a seat on the platform.

The net result of the discussion that took place over the campaign question was the decision of the meeting to hold a conference with a number of representative citizens of Peterborough and district, ladies as well as gentlemen, with a view of securing their opinion on the matter before definitely launching the proposed campaign. It was the feeling of the majority of the members that this step should be taken, and it was decided to hold a meeting on Monday night next, Oct. 22, in the recreation room of the armouries to which will be invited a number of prominent citizens. Upon the result of this conference the future course of the Veterans will be based.

In introducing the matter Secretary Wharley, for the benefit of the members, gave a resume of the meeting held last week between representatives of the G.W.V.A. and the citizens committee. He informed the members that some opposition had developed towards starting a campaign at the present time and also towards the proposal to dedicate the proposed building as a memorial to the Peterborough soldiers who had died overseas.

During the discussion that followed several members were in favour of going ahead at once with the campaign.

Consult the Citizens.

However, the majority were in favour of the suggestion made by Comrade Hirst, Lieut.-Col. Johnston and others, that the views of representative citizens should be obtained before going further and finally a motion to this effect was carried. Monday night next being selected as the date. Reeves of the surrounding townships and representatives of the various women's patriotic organizations will be included in the invitation.

The meeting then discussed possible ways and means of raising the money. President Staunton informed the meeting that one suggestion that had been made was a house to house canvas. It had been suggested that the G.W.V.A. be divided into companies, platoons ad sections, each unit to be responsible for a certain portion of the city, under the leadership of its commander. Another suggestion advanced was that the employees of factories be asked to donate a day's pay to the fund and still another that a collection be taken up in the city churches.

Not a Memorial.

There was considerable discussion over the question of whether or not the proposed headquarters should be termed a memorial or not. It was explained that many people in Peterborough who had lost relatives in the war were in favour of a permanent memorial in the form of a statue or monument and did not regard a Veterans' club house as fitting for the purpose suggested.

This opinion met the views of the majority of the Veterans and on motion it was decided to drop the proposal to call the proposed headquarters a memorial. Only two members

NO RUSH SO FAR SHOWN BY CLASS ONE MEN

No One Has Reported For Service Under the Military Service Act Here Yet While There Have Only Been a Few Requests For Exemption Forms

PAPERS ARE READY

Although all men coming under Class One of the Military Service Act are now held to be soldiers on leave of absence, without pay, there has been no rush on the part of Peterborough or District men affected by the proclamation. At the local postoffice no one has yet asked for a report for service form, while the applications for exemption blanks have been few and far between, the total up to noon to-day being only fifteen.

Letters for Class One Men.

One fact of the utmost importance must be borne in mind by all men in Class One. When filling in a form at the postoffice there is a place wherein to put down the address to which the Registrar is to direct all communications to the draftee. The Registrar will notify each man personally by registered letter, when and where to appear before the Exemption Board, and when and where, if eligible, he is to report to the colours. These letters will be addressed to the draftee, and as they are registered, they cannot be delivered to any other person by the postman but the draftee, unless the draftee leaves a written order at the address which he gave the Registrar authorizing the postman to deliver the letter to the

TOTAL RESULTS SO FAR.

Number examined	589
Fit for trenches	337
Fit for non-combatant service overseas	34
Fit for duty in Canada	53
Unfit for any service	165

Yesterday, the first day of the third week of the sittings of the local Medical Board under the Military Service Act, saw a new record set in the number of examinations made, inasmuch as fifty-eight men were inspected by the Board at the three sessions. The percentage of men fit for the trenches was high throughout the day, a total of 29 men, or 65 per cent. of those examined being pronounced fit for the front line. The total rejections for the day numbered only thirteen.

Twenty-two were examined at the morning session with 13 qualifying for Category A, two for Category B, and 7 unfit for any service. In the afternoon, out of nineteen examined, fourteen were placed in A Category.

A NATION OF LIARS.

Spain will have to get a better excuse for its questionable neutrality in permitting the crew of a German submarine to escape from a Spanish harbour, where it was interned. The excuse is that the German officers "broke their word of honour." Any official, Spanish or other, who, after the experience of the past three years, can even think of trusting to the word of honour of a German, it fit for a straight jacket. The word "honour" in its real meaning finds no place in the lexicon of a German officer, from the Kaiser down. If the Psalmist, had lived long in Germany and had had experience with official Germany, he needn't have said: "In my haste, I said all men were liars"; he could have said it deliberately. One might as well put a wolf on parole near a flock of sheep as to trust to the parole of a German officer.

Germany is encouraged. It finds greater success from its favourite weapon, back-door intrigue on the eastern front, than contending with the "steam roller" of Britain's "contemptible little army."

POULTRY AND ITS PROVENDER.

Last spring the Organization of Resources committee urged the raising of more poultry. With pullets at from $1 to $1.50 each and eggs at 50 cents per dozen, the temptation to embark in the poultry business is strong. We are told, however, on the one hand that families, with considerable waste food, can make poultry raising a big help to stocking the larder. On the other hand most families have signed food pledge cards, committing them to a scale of saving that will not leave enough waste to feed one chicken, not to speak of many. Poultry raising for amateurs may be all right under favourable conditions, but the high, all-round cost of everything creates a condition that not only militate against profitable poultry raising, but against the profit in many other forms of business. Perhaps one of the causes of the high cost of foods is the high cost of other things. As to poultry raising, we are told to save food to the extent that there "won't be no core"; but it might be the best saving to feed scraps that won't make very palatable warmed-over human food to help raise chickens and eggs that will taste like food.

In Toronto the churches are to be made Red Cross collection headquarters.

CANADA AND SHIPPING.

While, in general, industrial and commercial conditions after the war are so much matters of mystery as to deprecate useful speculation, there are some things that are certain, or to be made certain. It is reasonable to think that there will be great activity to replace the destruction of all kinds that has occurred in the war areas; and there is more certainty of extraordinary efforts to replace the shipping that has been so diabolically wasted by the submarine. Great Britain's commercial supremacy and prosperity, are conditional upon her shipping, and she is providing that she shall not, on this score, be put to disadvantage, after the war.

The government has decided, it is stated, to retain control of "shipping, shipbuilding and kindred industries" for one or two years after the war, instead of six months as originally intended. The object of this is to provide shipping for Britain and her allies and to prevent Germany from obtaining ships from British shipyards till Britain's own requirements and those of her allies have been met.

The indications are that "Britannia," will, after the war, as she does now, "rule the waves." Already British shipbuilders are full of orders for delivery after the war. It is stated that during the current week orders for one hundred ships were received by British shipbuilding firms.

It is probable that with proper government encouragement and initiative, Canada can come into her own in the matter of shipbuilding. Private enterprise has demonstrated that we are able to do a good deal in this line. The fact that one of the largest freighters on the inland lakes was built at Port Arthur need not be true only of Port Arthur. Though at present Canada cannot, for reasons of cost only, hold her own in shipbuilding with the Mother country, yet a prudent and liberal scheme of government subvention would help equalize the conditions, and permit of Canada building her shipping for the moving of her own products. We have splendid raw material for shipbuilding; we have creditably demonstrated our ability and skill in this direction; and Sir Robert Borden's pessimistic declaration that Canada "could not build a warship in twenty-five or fifty years," now that he is the head of a new government, unhampered by political limitations, should not stand in the way of Canada being helped to do more effectively and largerly what she has most creditably shown she can do—build ships and sail them, too. With reasonable government assistance and leading Canada can be restored to the proud position she held a few years ago—in the memory of living men—the third ship-building and ship-owning country in the world.

If Labour were as well represented in the Union Cabinet as it is on the Canadian battle front, there wouldn't be a "big interests" member in its make-up."

A CALL FROM THE MUD.

The following from the trenches contains a kernel of food for thought, and a spur to action in the matter of Red Cross appeal for funds. A despatch tells how wounded and other soldiers, fighting in the mud, suffering the worst miseries of winter warfare, with stretcher bearers sniped by Hun devils:

"Came back to the field dressing stations where there was warmth for them and hot drinks and clean bandages for their wounds."

The clean bandages, for the blood-oozing, mud-caked wounds, of the mud-drenched soldiers, and the warm drinks, were the gifts of the Red Cross workers. These are just such bandages and comforts as we are asked to help supply. Doesn't this come home to us?

The Kaiser can't come up to Macbeth; instead of shouting, "damned be he that first cries 'hold, enough'," he whines for peace in his own crooked way.

GOOD-BYE, PATRONAGE.

A despatch to the Globe from Ottawa, says:

"One important benefit of Union and non-partisan Government is already manifest. The patronage burden is being lifted from the shoulders of the Ministers. There is a ready answer for all seeking the influence of their geographical Minister to do something affecting another department of State. The answer is that patronage has been cut out, and that each departmental head must decide questions of policy and appointment solely in the interests of the State."

There is something comforting and reassuring in this if it holds true. At the same time there is a charming naivete in declaring that the patronage burden is being removed from the shoulders of the ministers. Sir Robert Borden is responsible for this. Before getting a "union and non-partizan government" together he provided that there should be few patronage burdens left for the new government. He did this by employing his last power of patronage in filling all the good positions in sight with his partizans. The retirement of ministers from the old cabinet was purchased by the gift of offices that carried large salaries—better, to private members who sought retirement than their sessional indemnity, and better, or as good to, the ministers, as the cabinet salaries they "sacrificed" on the altar of win-the-war patriotism.

If Sir Robert has left the patronage burden outside the new cabinet he didn't sacrifice much— the material for its exercise was pretty well exhausted; the big offices all filled with his old time followers, and the new government relieved of power and temptation to exercise patronage.

It is to be hoped that the Globe's despatch is true in the respect that "the patronage burden is being lifted from the shoulders of the ministers," for, for the past six years it has been a sinister element in national administration, tending to waste of public money and paralysis of effective war administration. If the union government does no more than do away with the evils of partizanship expressed through the patronage system, it deserves the gratitude of the country.

It will take some of the old time Grits and Tories a long time to make up their minds to fall into line behind the union government. They think "it is neither fish nor flesh," but only a "red herring."

Six Hour Day For All When The War Is Over

A sensation has been created in London, says the New York Tribune's coresponden, by the prediction of Lord Leverhulme of the coming of a six-hour day for all after the war. Lord Leverhulme was president of this year's Welsh National Eisteddfod, at which Lloyd George was one of the speakers. Discussing the enormous financial burden now carried by Britain Lord Leverhulme developed some startling ideas as to the near future. He said in part:

"By this time we have, with our brave and illustrious allies, won the 'unconditional surrender' of our enemies, our load of war debt may easily have gone to a total of £10,000,000,000, involving us in an annual charge to be met by taxation for interest and sinking fund alone of £650,000,000. We shall be under the absolute necessity of maintaining for many years a combined naval and military expenditure of from £100,000,000 to £200,000,000 a year.

"We shall have to raise another £100,000,000 or more for government civil expenditure, and at least another £100,000,000 or £200,000,000 for old age and military pensions."

Enormous Annual Burdens.

Other expenses, Lord Leverhulme said, would bring the burden of taxation probably to £1,300,000,000 a year. Continuing, he said:

"Can we bear the load and carry the Empire with its trade and commerce back into the calm safety of prosperity and sound finance We can only do so provided all classes and both sexes, following the example set by our King and Queen, continue to make after the war the same sacrifices of ease and comfort to continue to work as hard and with the same spirit of brotherhood as has been displayed by all classes without exception, during the war.

Need Six-Hour Day.

"But we have learned much the last three years on the subject of fatigue, overwork, and excessively long working hours. We have proved conclusively that prolonged hours of toil with resulting excessive fatigue produces under a certain point actually reduced results in quantity, quality and value than can be produced in fewer hours when there is an entire absence of overstrain or fatigue.

"Fortunately, however, this logical effect of overlooking hours of continuous work does not apply, except to a very limted extent, in the case of machinery and mechanical utilities. Therefore, a solution of this one of our difficulties can be best and most readily found by working our machinery for more hours and our men and women for fewer hours. We must have a six hours' working day and for men and women.

"Not only can we produce, when all ranks and all classes of both sexes are workers for six hours each day for six days each week, all the ships, machinery, factories, homes and goods we require both for home requirements and for exchange for raw materials through our export markets, but the homes can be built in beautiful garden suburbs; we can have mental and physical, and military training for national defence.

"In addition, all being workers, our burden of taxation will—being then wisely laid on wealth produced —be borne by all without impoverishment or oppression on any. There must be no idle overfed and underworked men or women or no overworked underfed men and women.

"It has been estimated that less than half of our total population are actual producers of wealth, but if we are as a nation to make good the wastage of this war and to maintain our posiion among the nations of the world after we have won complete victory and the unconditional surrender of our enemies, then it will require that all able-bodied men and women, from school age to dotage, of all ranks and stations, shall be workers for six hours each day and six days each week.

"There will be no place in the whole British Empire for the idle rich or the idle poor. We cannot consent as a nation to there being any loafers, nor can the British Empire become a loafer's paradise if it is to continue to exist."

Association of Cowes With British Yachting Goes Back Many Years

THE association of Cowes with yachting goes back many centuries; back, indeed, to the spacious days of Queen Elizabeth, for it was in 1588, the same year that her admirals defeated the Spanish Armada, that Queen Elizabeth had built for her, in the shipyards of Cowes, "a pleasure boat." Cowes, however, had little more to do with yachting until the establishment of the Royal Yacht Squadron in 1812, and it never really seriously took up the matter until the golden age of yachting, which began about the year 1870. During racing week the morning papers give the events for the day, and the evening papers report the winners. Every house in Cowes has its visitors, every available hotel is filled to overflowing. The waters of Cowes Roads are filled with all manner of yachts, large and small, while across the blue Solent is seen the green and gray of the Hampshire downs, rising against the blue sky beyond Portsmouth. The view from the famous parade is an animated one at all times, for the Solent is never dull. When there are no yachts, there are warships; when there are no warships, there are great liners making their way slowly between the island and the mainland, from Southampton down the Channel, and so away to the west.

Nowadays, of course, it is all very different. There are few yachts in the Solent, and the great ocean liners no longer turn their sterns to "the Island" and steam off up Southampton Waters, or, bow on, come down out of the north, where Gosport hails Ryde across the narrow channel, for Southampton is a closed port. Nothing, however, can take away from the Old World beauty of Cowes itself or its surroundings, for it is singularly beautiful for situation. It is a twin town, of course, East and West Cowes, one on either side of the Medina, a name which always falls so exotically on the ear. Each town is an urban district, and the port between them is the chief one on the island, and the headquarters of the Yacht Squadron. Behind it all the houses rise picturesquely on those gentle wooded slopes which are so characteristic of the Isle of Wight.

The towns owe their origin to two forts, or castles, built on each side of the mouth of the Medina by Henry VIII., about the year 1540, as part of his great system of coast defense. The eastern one has disappeared, but the western one remains, and is used as a clubhouse of the Yacht Squadron. Then, close to it, is the marine parade of West Cowes, and the famous public promenade, so well known to the visitor as "the Green." And it is "the Green" that is, perhaps, the center of interest during Cowes Week. It is here that that curious, indefinable thing called society marks the end of another season. At Cowes, in Cowes Week, society has definitely left London behind. Before the day of the motor car made it possible to get back and forth so easily, society was wont, perhaps, to shake off the dust of London when it went to Goodwood. Nowadays, it has put off doing so until it comes to Cowes. After Cowes, there is a scattering to country houses, and "events of the season" are at an end.

And so, by day and night, "the Green," in Cowes Week, is a scene of much animation; but it is at night, perhaps, that those who have ever attended the famous week will remember it best, for it is at night that the sea and the sky seem to merge into one, the sky spangled with stars and the sea with countless little lights, white, red, and green, with, every now and again, a veritable constellation marking the place where a yacht, or a warship, illuminated to the masthead, is riding at anchor.

A Modern Decoration.

The parish church of South Hackney is ultra-modern in its decorations. It has, at its west end, the fragment of a zeppelin, with the inscription: "Portion of zeppelin brought down at Cuffley, in September, 1916, after having passed over South Hackney. Offered by the War Office to the parish church. For the daring and the courage of our aviators, we praise Thy name, O Lord!" There can be no question of lack of appreciation there, and the example of South Hackney parish church might be followed with advantage by those ridiculous people—they are happily not numerous—who vent their annoyance, at being bombed, on the British aviator, than whom no more "lion-hearted" fighter exists, nor more successful, provided he is given a chance.

Espionage Web Broken.

The conclusion of the Gerlach case at Rome ends a remarkable chapter in the history of espionage, and throws a light on some of Italy's peculiar difficulties in conducting war against her former partners in the Triple Alliance, says The London Daily Chronicle. Monsignor von Gerlach, the Roman agent of the Austro-German spy system in Italy, was a highly placed ecclesiastic at the Vatican, whose connections with Vienna in peace time have naturally been numerous and intimate. From that antage point he spun his web all over Italy, being connected across the frontier with an office in Vienna next door to the German Embassy.

The Italian Intelligence Service contrived last April to obtain the papers from the Viennese office, by the remarkable expedient of releasing the two cleverest burglars in the Italian prisons, and inducing them by a pardon and the promise of a large monetary reward to "burgle" the office in question. Their success placed in the hands of the Italian Government full information, and it only remained for them to catch the disclosed traitors in Italy and bring them to trial.

Monsignor von Gerlach, warned telegraphically from Vienna the moment the burglary was known, escaped and is still missing, as is the guiltiest of his associates. Six others were tried and received heavy sentences last Saturday. Some of them were convicted of selling military secrets to the enemy; others of receiving large bribes to run anti-war newspapers. In any event a most dangerous web of espionage has been effectually broken up — a matter of the utmost military importance, and the Italian Government has probably secured enough further information, unused for the moment, to make it exceedingly difficult for the enemy to construct another.

Ambiguous.

"Did your late employer give you a testimonial?

"Yes, but it doesn't seem to do me any good."

"What did he say?"

"He said I was one of the best men his firm had ever turned out."

"SUNNY ITALY."

We all know sunny Italy in print, we know that the phrase as applied to the genuine amiability of the people of Italy. What we are learning, those of us who only have casual observation or reading on which to form opinions, to know is a quality in the Italian temper that has along with the sunniness an indomitable strength. Some of the greatest men from colder climes have come to know Italy well and they have told the world of her inherent greatness; these men have been statesmen, writers, artists and of late, business men. We all know what Browning, Shelley, Hawthorne and Henry James found in Italy and how they acknowledged their debt. But now it is the news expert who of all men is cosmopolitan who is making a picture for us of Italy—the real Italy—in action.

There has been and is unrest in Italy over war conditions; only when there is open outbreak do we hear of it and it has never obstructed the push forward of Italy's armies. Italy has less wealth than most of her allies, yet she has asked less aid than have any of the Entente nations. To the complaints behind the lines General Cadorna sends this message: "Any weakness behind the lines at this moment will be considered treason. We are all armed now with the will to conquer and victory is at hand. All classes and parties must remember that Italy knows only one way." It is a good way. We might well profit by its example in dealing with our own weaknesses behind the line. Moreover we might well consider possible means of aiding Italy "armed with the will to conquer."—Rochester Post.

The New Warfare

Aeroplanes Will be Used for Transport in Future Wars.

The army of the future will have an immense equipment in artillery; the infantry will be few in number but heavily armed, each man with a machine gun, capable of holding a width of front that otherwise would need a company armed with rifles. Trench warfare, at any rate on the scale that has been witnessed in France, will disappear, for the aeroplane will overlap the trenches, and substitute a war of movement for a war of fixed positions.

The aeroplane will be used not only as at present for reconnaissance work, signaling ranges to the artillery, for raids on communications, and for bombing a retreating army, but also for the transport, on a large scale, of infantry. One can easily imagine aeroplanes sufficiently large to carry fifty or even a hundred infantrymen. A hundred such planes could transport an army of ten thousand with incredible rapidity to any point behind the hostile line desired by the general in command. Such movement will make trench-lines absolete. The whole art of war will have to be re-written from its elements. The development of the uses of the aeroplane will change the strategical and tactical direction of the war, from a game comparatively elementary, like draughts, into an elaborate and complicated game like chess, with greater variety of moves and endless possibilities of fresh combinations. Such a game will be too difficult to be fought with millions. With proper use of mechanical invention a company of men will be able to do the work of a division in this war. We shall go back to the days of small professional armies of long training and high technical equipment; the great general of the future will be he who is able to divine best all the possibilities of this new war-movement, and military power will no longer depend on numbers but on the genius of the direction and the technical accomplishment of a comparatively few human instruments.—Atlantic Monthly.

At the farmers' conference in the country store the talk drifted to the work done by the various wives of the committee present.

"Wal," contributed Uncle Ez, "my wife is one in a million. She gets up in the mornin', milks seventeen cows, gets breakfast for ten hard-working men before six o'clock, by heck."

"She must be a very robust woman," volunteered the commercial traveller who happened to be present.

"No, stranger, she ain't whot you'd call so strong; she's more pale and delicate like. Gosh, with a burst of enthusiasm, "if that woman was only strong, I don't know the work she couldn't do!"—"Everybody's Magazine."

IN FEAR OF HANGING, CAPTAIN REFUSES TO FIRE ON U-BOAT

IT WAS A NIGHT SUCH AS POETS DREAM ABOUT, SAYS OFFICER BUT HE SOON FORGOT IT.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Saturday—Gliding leisurely through a choppy sea, about fifty miles off the coast of France, a big British freight steamship bound in ballast for America, caught sight of a submarine less than two miles away. And, what was worse, the submarine caught sight of her at the same time. The story of the chase which followed is told by officers and others of the crew of sixty when the vessel arrived, unscathed, at this port.

"It was one of the most beautiful nights imaginable," said an officer; "just such a night as poets write about, with the moon swinging along serenely overhead, inviting to song or to tales of romance of to 'dreaming.' Well, I was looking out over the light crested, dancing waves and 'dreaming' when the lookout shouted: 'Submarine astern to the starboard!'

"I had been on the port side, and in the short time it took me to get over to the other side of our vessel I found that others had been even more alert, and already the lifeboats were being swung out and everybody was fastening on a lifebelt. Our vessel was instantly veered so as to present the stern to the beast-of-prey-like enemy, and our gun was pointed directly at her.

A FIRST CLASS CHANCE.

"It looked like a first class chance. Only two miles away and our 4-inch gun capable of going through thick steel like cheese five miles away. I was wondering why our captain didn't shout the order to fire. But I guess he knew best. Neither he nor the submarine captain did any shooting, both evidently relying on speed—we to get away, the other fellow to overtake us."

The captain of the steamship explained the reason for not firing on the U-boat.

"If we could have had a guarantee that we'd hit and sink the submarine," he said, "nothing could have pleased me more than to give the order to fire. But there might have been a deflection of the 'steenth' part of an inch in the aim, and then, if the U-boat had overtaken us, the question of who fired the first shot would have made all the difference in the world in the final settlement of the case. Those U-boat captains are just about in the humor to hang people they don't like; and as I had sixty necks to look out for I thought it wiser to let the music start from the other side.

"We crowded on all steam and our vessel was going along nicely under forced draught. We were getting away slowly but surely and that was encouraging enough. We could see that the U-boat was making all sorts of manoeuvres to get into position to launch a torpedo, but somehow no favourable opportunity presented itself; and so, after a two hours' pursuit just as daylight was making the moon look pale, the submarine began to submerge and soon she disappeared."

The chase had begun at five minutes to three o'clock in the morning, five hours after the steamship left port; and it was five o'clock in the morning when the submarine relinquished hope of bagging her prey.

LATEST TYPE OF U-BOAT.

The U-boat was of the most recent type, the captain said, and carried two large guns on her deck. Why she did not fire is a riddle to him and the other officers, as she was within range during the entire race. The only solution of the problem they could think of was that the craft had run out of shells, and that, they thought, might also account for the efforts made to get into position to fire a torpedo.

"I scarcely think that it was kindliness of feeling that prevented them from trying to sink us with gunfire," said the captain.

Potatoes Show Evidences of Rot

Undisputed evidence of the efficacy of spraying for potato blight is submitted by a number of backyard gardeners who within the past few days have completed the harvesting of the crop. In nearly all cases in Peterborough where spraying was not carried out the presence of blight is noted. Some of the potatoes recently dug show evidence of rot, but not to any alarming extent.

The nurse who is "just ready to drop" will find a wonderful stimulant in FRY'S delicious Cocoa. Of course it feeds every tired muscle—it nourishes bone and nerve—but it really does more. FRY'S possesses in full measure that subtle "spirit of cocoa"—theobromine—which is one of the most beneficial stimulants known. So you see FRY'S is a tonic as well as a nourishing food.

CANADA

Will Class One Provide The One Hundred Thousand Men?

It will be greatly to the advantage of Canada if the entire quota of 100,000 men to be raised under the Military Service Act can be secured from the first class; that is, from the men between the ages of 20 and 34 who were unmarried or widowers without children on July 6th, 1917.

This is almost self-evident for the following reasons:

it is admitted that, between the ages of 20 and 34, the average man is at the height of his physical strength and is most adaptable to the change of conditions from civilian life;

the military Service of unmarried men and widowers without children would occasion less distress than that of most others, since they are largely without dependents. Also, it would entail less financial burden for Canada, through separation allowances, etc.

Authorities estimate that, after all proper examinations have been allowed, Canada should be able to produce from the first class 100,000 men fit for service, so the drain upon the man power of the country will not be severe.

Members of Class One will be well advised to present themselves for examination immediately to the Medical Board in their district. Upon examination as to their physical fitness, they will be placed in one of the following categories:

Category A—if fit for service in overseas fighting units.
Category B—if fit for service overseas in Army Medical Corps, Forestry Battalion, etc.
Category C—if fit for service in Canada only.
Category E—if unfit for military service of any nature.

If not placed in category A, the applicant will know that he is not liable for immediate service, but will go to the Post Office and send in a claim for exemption with his Medical Certificate attached, when he will receive in due course a certificate of exemption until those in his medical category are summoned for service.

Where a man, who is placed in category A, feels that exemption should be allowed, an application form can be secured from the postmaster. This form, when filled in, will be forwarded by the postmaster to the registrar of the district, and the applicant will be informed by mail as to the time and place for the consideration of his application by the Exemption Board.

Issued By The Military Service Council.

MORPHINE TAKES OPIUM'S PLACE AS CURSE OF CHINA

The Medical Record reports a statement made by Wu Lien-Ten (G. L. Tuck) in a recent issue of the London Lancet, wherein he said that the year 1917 will be historic as the one in which opium, the curse of China for seventy-five years, will be officially and finally banished from the country.

In this year the ten year agreement made between Great Britain and China regarding the importation of opium into China, including the last two seaports, Shanghai and Canton, will come to an end, so that even in the British settlement of Shanghai the remaining opium shop will be closed by the month of March. The Medical Record says:

"The whole nation will rejoice at the happy termination of an awful vice, which once looked as if it might exterminate the Chinese race. Such hopes cannot be sustained with regard to morphine, for up to the end of last year all statistics point to increased importation into China. The supply of morphine comes mainly from two firms in Edinburgh, and one firm in London.

The declared exports of morphine from Great Britain alone in in 1912 equaled 7 1-2 tons, in 1913 11 1-2 tons, and in 1914, 14 tons, while in 1916 the estimate is at least 16 tons. In Japan a ton a month was imported for medicinal purposes.

MORPHINE IMPORTS

"There is a large firm in Japan which acts as agent for the manufacturing firm in London.

"In 1913 alone this agent in Japan imported 2 1-2 tons of morphine by registered post via Siberia. The two other British firms exported 2 tons by the same method and 1 3-8 tons came from Germany, making a total of 6 1-4 tons in 1913. So far it has been ascertained that neither Japan nor Germany has got the necessary plant to manufacture morphine on any large scale, and the alkaloid has come mostly from firms in Great Britain.

"Once arrived in Japan the morphine is usually made up in small packets or placed into small bottles, labeled in different ways, e.g., morphine, 'white powder,' 'soothing stuff,' 'dreamland elixir,' etc., and exported, openly or smuggled secretly into China by way of Dalny, Antung and Formosa. Almost every Japanese drug dealer or peddler in Manchuria sells it in one form or another, and does so with impunity because no Japanese can be arrested without complaint being first lodged at the consulate.

"From these Japanese agents and subagents, the drug may be passed on to disreputable Chinese who frequent the coolie depots and inject a solution, usually very dirty, with a hypodermic syringe which may be made with glass, metal or even bamboo. Rigorous imprisonment for two years is a common sentence for Chinese found with morphine in their possession, but the principal culprits often escape punishment.

DRUG'S TERRIBLE TOLL.

"Wu Lien-Ten reports that during his five years' residence in Manchuria he has seen terrible havoc wrought upon the population by this drug. Thousands of poor people die in the large cities during the winter months, partly from cold, but principally from inability to work on account of their morphine habits. The evil appears to be spreading. Enormous profits are made by the dealers in this illicit trade. The profits made on six and a quarter tons by the dealers in China in 1913 amounted to about $4,200,000. Unless a strong action is taken by the medical profession, as was done in the case with opium, morphine will spread further and render futile all efforts in the direction of opium eradication.

ATTEMPTS AT RESTRICTION

"What is to be done?"

"Three opium conferences have already been held at The Hague—in 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914. At the second conference forty-four out of forty-six powers of the world had agreed to append their signatures to the convention, and at the third conference the United States, the Netherlands and China deposited their ratifications so as to act forthwith upon the articles of the convention to restrict the evil effect of opium, morphine, cocaine and allied drugs.

"Although the representatives of Great Britain were instructed at the second conference to declare on behalf of their government their readiness to ratify the matter has so far been delayed.

"The establishment of a central medical council would facilitate matters immensely in eradicating the trouble, and if requested the two Chinese associations (medical) would depute members to render the necessary assistance in drafting the laws for control and the sale and use of hypodermic syringes, since no Chinese medical man can procure a syringe for any use, and they cannot be imported into China except in the case of duly qualified foreign medical practitioners, foreign chemists and druggists, civil hospitals established by government in any province, military and naval surgeons, and medical colleges complying with certain conditions.

"This gives an opportunity for impostors to do so without punishment, while the bona fide practitioners have trouble in obtaining the drugs under discussion and hypodermic syringes."

SENTIMENT IN SWEDEN.

It Is Inclined to Be Anti-American and Pro-German.

LONDON, Oct. 13. — M. Widen, who has been asked by King Gustave of Sweden to form a Cabinet, will attempt to construct a Ministry solely of Liberals, says the Stockholm correspondent of the Daily Mail.

As to the effect of the American blockade, the correspondent says the manner in which the policy of the United States is to be answered is indicated by the Government's announcement that Germany will supply to Sweden grain, potatoes and sugar, which the allies have refused. This announcement, if realized, will naturally stimulate the pro-German trend of public opinion developed by the Washington news of the last few days. It adds that particular resentment has been provoked in the press by the statement that the Swedish delegates to the United States had suppressed the facts in relation to Sweden's exportation of iron ore to Germany.

Rev. Mr. Greatrix's Inspiring Sermon To Court Stanley

In his sermon to Court Stanley, A. O.F., at St. James' church on Sunday night, Rev. Mr. Greatrix, who chose as his text, Daniel 10:11, spoke to the Foresters, first of his appreciation of such orders as the Foresters, which, he said he felt, being associations to relieve distress and spread the fellowship of man, could not be antagonistic to Jesus Christ. Secondly he spoke of the splendid percentage of the order, number 162, of which three had made the supreme sacrifice who have already gone overseas. After which he delivered the following uplifting and splendid sermon:

A Lover of Men.

"I am a lover of man. I am not blind to his weaknesses, to his faults, failures or sins. Yet I can see such magnificent possibilities for goodness for service, for heroic deeds that the possibilities for evil are counter-balanced by the possibilities for good. God never intended man to be a failure, a weakling, a creature of circumstances, to submit to tyranny or to be enslaved. The creature God made in His own image is regal, majestic, designed to rule and to have dominion is the Royal command to His offspring—man. I am aware there has been an interruption in God's plan, but not defeat. An eclipse of the glory intended, but not complete or permanent. God will never allow His gracious and benevolent design to be frustrated by evil. The only defeat God can suffer is at the hand of his creature, willing in opposition to His will, preferring the counsel of evil to the direction of His spirit.

The Condemnation.

And this is the condemnation—that light has come into the world and men love darkness better than light. The motive for their action is clearly revealed because their deeds are evil and man's original purpose and equipment, divine, splendid and complete, only makes the ruin more complete more to be deplored.

Louvain in ruins is a terrible indictment against Hun hate and savagery, but infinitely greater is a ruined man.

Possibilities of Man.

But it is of the bright possibilities of man I love to dwell upon. When Andrew brought his brother Lemon and introduced him to the Master, He saw the possibilities of the man. With discipline, pruning and instruction, Peter the irresolute, the boaster, the ambitious, became Peter the Preacher—the Apostle of Hope. It is the just conception of man, his dignity, his marvellous power, the stored wealth of his being, the heights to which he can rise, that the mean, petty imaginings of life would hide themselves as bats before the splendid of the day. It is the world's depreciation of man's superlative value, knowing men to be cheap, common and plentiful that lies at the very foundation of social unrest, political chaos, degeneracy, inefficiency, partizanship of the politics of the Dominion and fails to take a comprehensive view of the world's situation.

Present Conditions.

I grapple fearlessly with present conditions and evolve a policy that would appeal to all classes, irrespective of politics and creed, at the disposal of the nation for its deliverance from the awful nightmare of militarism, as represented by Prussianism, that knows neither pity or mercy to the man or money power of the nation. It is the callow blindness to man's worthfulness that leads profiteers to heap up colossal fortunes at the expense of peace, good will and comfort of the common people. It is this heartless indifference to man's interest that has led to world-spread graft and man's readiness to take advantage of their fellows necessity that breeds a cynicism that regards all men alike as being ready to prey upon the people. Needless to say this is causing widespread dissatisfaction and murmuring, shaking man's confidence in their fellows' honour, upon which alone a nation can stand with a sense of security and content. Man has been blinded to the worth of man. In the days of Jesus property was regarded as higher worth than man. The rebuke in the parable of the saving of a man on the Sabbath, 'How much better is a man than a sheep,' would be ludicrous but for the irony of it.

Germany the Same.

The descendants of the Pharisees are not dead: Germany, thirsting for world power, is playing the same game on a larger scale. Thirsting for world power, sacrificing in attempting to gain the impossible, her own good, principles of innocent boys and men; filling the world with desolation, death, sorrow and heartache; willing for the sake of imposing these convictions upon the nations of the earth to drench the world in blood, to convert into Gehenna what was intended to be an Eden. The fearful loss is simply immeasurable. Think of the buildings consecrated to the wishes of God—dedicated to science and art, the palatial homes and cottages, the fertile plans, destroyed beyond repair. The world is poorer, its very life blood is being drained and poured into the shrine of the worshipper of super man. Man has lost sight of the value of man. What the world needs is a baptism of Divine purpose in creating man, to gain the viewpoint of values, to discover the superlative value of man to cherish those ideals, to be governed by those principles that will secure to him the place, the privilege and opportunity that will admit of his development along those lines and will realize and achieve God's purpose concerning him. Then the thirst for money and power will be replaced by the more God-like view that was described and emphasized by the Maker when He said: "I am among you as one that serveth," as John the Baptist dying for the interest of his fellows, Paul giving up his life for the redemption of his fellows, the thousands of lads from Canada and other parts of the empire dying that truth, honour and freedom should not vanish from the earth.

The brightest star will not be the man who has lived a selfish, indolent life, but he who has walked in the Maker's steps serving and conscientiously going about doing good. This is where your society and all kindred societies must stand, by their teachings and actions, a protest against the mercenary, proud and selfish spirit that would in the pursuit of its ambitious spirit trample people under foot, outrage public sense of justice and render the burden of their toils the heavier. I would emphasize the value of man, woman and child, irrespective of origin, poverty and ignorance. It must have the gift of discernment."

Hears From His Brother After A Long Silence

Fireman W. H. Suddards Had Received No Word For Nineteen Years

Fireman W. H. Suddards of the Peterborough Fire Department has received a letter from his brother in West Silverton, London, England, after a lapse of nineteen years under unusual circumstances. Pte. D. Edwards, brother-in-law of Fireman Suddards, was wounded in France, and was invalided to England, where he was sent to Guilford Hospital. The hospital authorities asked him if he knew anybody whom he would like to have come and see him, and he recollected that Fireman Suddards had a brother, Edward, living in the district. Accordingly he was sent for and called at the hospital. Afterwards he decided to write to his brother here, and the silence of nineteen years was broken:

The letter, in part, was as follows:

My Dear Brother Harry—I expect when you receive this letter from me you will be somewhat surprised. I hardly know how to start after a lapse of nineteen years since I saw you or heard from you, and now this strange meeting. I have only just come off night work and was in bed when Gerty came up in the bedroom and told me I was wanted at the front door by a Police Sergeant. When he told me his business and said to me D. Edwards was lying wounded in Guilford Hospital and wanted to see me, I nearly fell down with surprise. I went down and saw Mr. Edwards and spent two hours with him, and it was then that I learned all about you and your good life and bairns. I can assure you I found him a very nice man and he speaks well of you as his brother-in-law.

BIG YEAR FOR PEANUTS.

They are Growing in Two Million Acres of American Soil.

Listen to this—there are 2,001,000 acres planted to peanuts this year! The statement comes from the Agricultural Department, and just note the exactitude of the count! Not a rough guess of two million acres but an actual count that tacks on another thousand acres! Texas alone will gather a goober crop from 600,000 acres! The greatest crop of peanuts since the first circus travelled across Chaldea 5,794 years ago, is in the autumnal promise! If the yield of peanuts averages only 10 bushels to the acre there will be over 200,000,000 bushels of this joyous ground fruit added to the country's food stock!

Apparently, Mr. Hoover forgot when he was sending out the calls last April, to "raise more corn, raise more beans, raise more potatoes, raise more pigs," etc., to mention peanuts. But all the same, the peanut farmers began to hustle. The increased the goober acreage 61 per cent. over that planted last year. Weather conditions have been good all over the goober area, which embraces all the Southern States from North Carolina to Texas

Peanuts are used in these enlightened days in more than a score of different forms of food service. There are many people who rate the goober above the chestnut, the almond, the pecan, or the walnut. It is a commodity retailed all over these United States from a million pushcarts. It is exported by the shiploads The boys in the camps and likewise in the trenches will not be short-rationed on this particular delicacy. Nobody has a corner on the peanut market and there is no reason whatever why the price should be boosted. —Baltimore American.

Annual Meeting Of Lily Lake Red Cross Society

On Wednesday evening, Oct. 3rd, the Lily Lake Red Cross Society held their annual meeting of 1917, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Young. Despite the disagreeable weather quite a number were present. After a short programme had been rendered the secretary gave a report of the work accomplished by the society for the past eyar, which was voted satisfactory. The society consists of fourteen members and the contributions sent to the Public Library consisted of the following articles:

175 suits pyiamas.
94 pairs socks.
18 1-2 doz. many-tailed bandages.
6 doz. towels.
4 1-2 doz. hot water bottle covers.
5 1-2 doz. pillow covers.
1 quilt.
7 pairs socks were knitted for trenches.

Our officers were then elected for the ensuing year.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Refreshments were then served.

1 I vote for / Je vote pour
2 I vote for the Government / Je vote pour le Gouvernement
3 I vote for the Opposition / Je vote pour l'Opposition
4 I vote for the Independent Candidate / Je vote pour le candidat Indépendant
5 I vote for the Labour Candidate / Je vote pour le candidat Ouvrier

HOW THE SOLDIERS WILL CAST THEIR VOTE.

Formation of a Union Government will not interfere with the details of administering the military voters' act, under which Canadian soldiers will have a vote at the coming election. The ballot was carefully prepared so as to cover every contingency, and while it says nothing about the Union Government the word "Government" alone is quite sufficient. The voter if he desires to vote for any particular candicate or candidates designated by name, shall write the name of the candidate or candidates in the first white space, or if he desires to vote, for a party he shall make an X within the white space containing the name of the party for which he intends to vote. Each of the ballots goes into an envelope on which the soldier states, among other things, his place of last residing, or, if that is uncertain, the riding in which he wishes his vote to count.

British Casualties 23,035 Last Week

Slight Decrease from the Losses of the Preceding Week.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Total casualties in all British ranks in all theatres for the week ending to-day are reported officially to have been 23,035. Officers killed or died of wounds, 103; men killed or died of wounds, 4,430; officers wounded or missing, 432; men wounded or missing, 18,070.

For the week ending September 18 British army casualties aggregated 27,164. The report for the present week includes the operations in Flanders last Thursday, when the British made a considerable advance, while in the previous week there was no marked infantry action on any British front.

HE BOMBED CATTARO.

Noted Italian Airman Planned Dangerous Expedition.

Italian Headquarters, Oct. 13.— Gabriele D'Annunzio, who was lately promoted to be a Major, organized and directed the recent raid over Cattaro, which, after Polo, is the greatest Austrian stronghold in the Adriatic. No dangerous raid has occurred since the beginning of the war in which D'Annunzio has not participated. This time he planned one of the most daring expeditions undertaken, both because of the distance to be covered and the formidable defences protecting Cattaro.

Before his departure D'Annunzio had supper with his companion aviators and harangued them. He reminded them that they were starting on the day of St. Francis, "the most Italian among the Saints and the most Saintly among the, Italians," who has been the patron of sea passengers since he left Ancona to go to the Holy Land and marked across the waters the sea belonging to Italian influence.

On Honolula Bay

The Ukulele accompaniments to "On Honolula Bay" as played by the famous Louise and Ferera and are simply great. Hear it on Victoria Record 18212 at the Victrola Parlours of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Ltd. The other side of the record is "In the Sweet Long Ago," sung by the Sterling Trio. B. H. Britton, Manager, Royal Bank Buildings, corner George and Hunter streets.

NO "UNDUE PROMINENCE."

Walter Long Denies Deeds of Dominion Troops Are Overestimated.

The Colonial Office vote led to a varied debate in the Imperial Commons. Mr. Walter Long denied that undue prominence had been given to the deeds of Dominion soldiers—described the patience with which the Empire has borne the limitation of imports—emphasized the intense loyalty of native races, which asked to serve in France—and suggested that, since the word emigration implies exile, we should substitute "migration" for it. Many men and women will wish to "migrate," and they should be assisted and guided. The suggestions of the Imperial War Conference as to Indian labour in Crown colonies would not be "pigeon-holed" and forgotten. The other resolution about soldiers' graves has been acted upon, and these are as peaceful and beautiful as graveyards at home. A committee of Ministers, with Mr. Long as chairman, is looking into the resolution dealing with the difficult problem of developing the Empire's resources. The Imperial Conference had shown that the whole Empire was determined to secure a complete victory and a lasting peace. —London News.

Just One Application And The Hairs Vanish

(Toilet Talks)

Any woman can keep her skin free from unsightly hair or fuzz if she will follow these simple instructions: When hairy growths appear, apply a simple paste, made by mixing some water with powdered delatone. Apply this to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a harmless treatment, but be sure you get the real delatone.

MR. H. A. FRICKER'S RECITAL

In the uncrowded memories of the music lovers of Peterborough, the brilliant organ recital at St. Andrew's church last night given by Mr. H. A. Fricker, F.R.C.O., will not soon be forgotten. The distinguished organist of the Metropolitan Methodist church, Toronto, late of Leeds, England, received a welcome that was at once a fitting recognition of his abilities, and an indication of a local desire, perhaps a need, that is all too rarely satisfied. The unusually large audience filled St. Andrew's church to its farthest corner, and the temporary accommodation was scarcely sufficient for the overflow. There was no reservation in the warmth of this city's welcome to Mr. Fricker, who occupies a place of prominence among the foremost organists of the present day, and at the conclusion of the exacting programme he acknowledged the applauding appreciation of his work by giving an extra number. Peterborough should find considerabe satisfaction in the fact that last night's recital was the first Mr. Fricker has given outside of Toronto. That this distinction was generally recognized here was clearly demonstrated by the splendid attendance, a tribute to the recitalist and a reassuring reflection of this city's advancement in the musical education of its people. Incidentally it may be added, that last night's concert was made possible largely through the vision of St. Andrew's congregation in providing their church with an organ possessing more than the average register. As the mighty chords resounded through the auditorium the impression grew that this organ would be heard to even better advantage if it had more space to play upon. But the city is already deeply in debt to St. Andrew's without suggesting that this indebtedness be increased.

Mr. Fricker's programme presented six numbers of wide appeal and equally extensive demands of musicianship. To only a few, perhaps, was the masterly skill of Bach apparent in the weaving modulations of his clearly defined phrasing and the contrapuntal intricacies with which he developed his theme into a perfect whole, a tonal chiaroscuro; but the mystic beauties of the overture to Lohengrin, the exotic atmosphere of "Finlandia," and the stately grace of the lyrical Minuet by Boccherini, these kindled the imagination of the audience under the interpretative touch of Mr. Fricker, unfolding pictures of striking contrast that will not soon fade.

The prelude to Lohengrin, aptly described as an instrumental representation of the Holy Grail, was of exquisite beauty. Under the spell of the soft-sounding strings the music assumed an ethereal quality, remote, but gradually approaching until the blinding fortissimo flashed the dazzling presence of the Grail that receded, then, as it had advanced. In this number alone, Mr. Fricker demonstrated his title of place as a virtuoso organist. The illusion he created was complete.

Mr. Fricker displayed his talent as a composer in the presentation of his overture in C minor. His subject was developed over the entire compass of his instrument, pealing forth in massive chords and shading off to the upper register. The technique both of composition and execution, was manifest, and the clarity and skill with which the theme was embellished in its variations stamped the work as a splendid example of organ music.

Lemare's fantasia on the anonymous "Hanover" again brought out the technical skill of which Mr. Fricker is master, and especially his keen concept of musical values. Every number demonstrated that essential factor of interpretation, and with a complete command of his instrument the recitalist projected his ideas with convincing effect. In that respect his numbers were all of surpassing merit, but the "Finlandia" and the "Lohengrin" prelude, perhaps due to their thematic material, were particularly vivid. In the Bach fugue, Mr. Fricker emphasized the rythmical possibilities of the pipe organ in a decisive manner. The banks of manuals and pedals were under complete control that was employed with the impression of ease that is not usually associated with the pipe organ. Withal there was a crisp, clear tone that was free from distracting blurs, but after all these are qualities that one expected of an organist of Mr. Fricker's prominence. To the ger men who arranged last night's recital, and of course to Mr. Fricker himself, Peterborough is deeply grateful for these refreshing crumbs from Toronto's table.

The rest of the programme was entirely satisfying. Mr. George Chandler and Mr. John Smith, in their vocal solos acquitted themselves with the greatest credit. Mrs. Geo. H. King, soprano soloist of Trinity church, made a fine impression in her first public appearance in Peterborough. She sang "I will Lay Me Down in Peace," by Dudley Buck, displaying a voice of pleasing qualities, limpid, clear and resonant. Her enunciation, phrasing and technical finish gave her singing an added charm. Owing to illness she withdrew her second number.

The programme was as follows:

Concert Overture in C Minor ..... Fricker
Recit.—"Ye People Rend Your Hearts"—Mendelssohn
Air—"If With All Your Hearts"... Mendelssohn
Mr. George Chandler.
Vorspiel "Lohengrin" ..... Wagner
Prelude and Fugue in D Major.... J. S. Bach

Mrs. Geo. H. King.
Fantasia on the Hymn Tune, Hanover" ..... Lemare
"Consider and Hear Me" ....Wooler
Mr. John Smith
Minuet in A ..... Boccherini

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE AGAIN IN DISFAVOUR

Brought Opera Singers to His Headquarters in Special Train.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Bavarian Socialist newspapers are quoted by the Exchange Telegraph Amsterdam correspondent as protesting against the action of the German Crown Prince in inviting a number of singers from the Munich Opera to proceed to his headquarters by a special train. The newspaper critics characterize this proceeding as scandalous at a time when the railway congestion is so great that even foodstuffs cannot be transported. Two of the newspapers, it is added, have been suppressed for publishing the attacks upon the Crown Prince.

FEW ARE REPORTING FOR SERVICE

Practically All Reports in London District Are Exemption Claims

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 16. — From midnight last night until noon to-day more than five hundred reports under the Military Service Act had been received by the Post Office Inspector from the district covered by Military District No. 1. At the present rate more than one thousand reports will be in by midnight. Practically all are claims for exemption. Of eighty-eight reports turned over to Deputy Registrar W. E. Wisemer to-day by the postal authorities, eighty-eight were claims for exemption, and but two were reports for service.

BASKET SOCIAL

A Basket Social will be held in the Orange Hall, near May's School, in aid of the building fund of St. Alban's Mission, on Wednesday, October 31. Admission 15c. Ladies with baskets free.

person named in the order—his landlady, his mother, his father, or whoever the person may be. The responsibility of actually receiving the letter in his own hands rests upon the draftee, provided the letter is taken to the address furnished to the Registrar by the draftee. If he is not there to receive it, or does not take the precaution to have an order ready, as indicated above, and hence does not receive, and does not, as a consequence, appear before the Exemption at the proper time, he forfeits his right of being heard before an Exemption Tribunal; and if ordered to report for service and does not receive the letter, through lack of precautions that the letter would be put in his hands and does not report, he cannot set up as a defence that no word or instructions reached him. A draftee who changes his address after he has filed his application or report is required to notify the Registrar of such change of address.

Border Closed.

Any man in Class One who wishes to go abroad will not be able to pass the border line unless he can produce an exemption certificate. As exemption certificates will not be issued until after November 8, any man who wishes to go abroad must report to military headquarters of the military district in which he lives, and there state his reason for leaving the country. If they are sufficiently convincing, in the opinion of the military authorities, to warrant his going (such as on a bona fide business trip, or because of domestic affliction, or some other equally good cause), the military authorities will issue to this man a permit which will be honoured at the border. In order to obtain this permit the man must leave with the military authorities a photograph of himself, and a bond for he sum of $1,000, and the permit will not be good for a longer period than two weeks. The bond must be signed by the man himself and some other responsible person or concern, such as a bonding company. On his return to Canada the man must report again to the military authorities, so that his bond may be released. The photograph, of course, is for identification purposes. For men not in Class One the conditions governing the issue of passports will obtain as in the past.

WANT HARTY AS A UNION CANDIDATE

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

KINGSTON, Oct. 16.—Conservatives and Liberals have asked J. J. Harty to stand as the win-the-war candidate for this city, and he has the matter under consideration. Mr. Harty is president of the Canadian Locomotive Co., and a son of Hon. William Harty, ex-M.P.

The man who does things is seldom heralded by an advance agent and a brass band.

were opposed to the motion.

A number of sites and buildings were discussed for some time by the meeting. The majority of these were in the centre of the city, and several, it was thought, would do admirably for the purpose. However, there was no definite decision arrived at in this regard.

An Assault Case.

The case of a member of the G.W.V.A. who is on sick leave, suffering from heart and lung trouble, and who was forcibly ejected from a shop of a man named Fisher the other day was brought to the attention of the meeting. Before taking any action, the Investigation committee was empowered to look into the matter and report back to the next meeting.

Pte. Joe Temple, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who arrived home from overseas yesterday afternoon, was in attendance at the meeting and was welcomed by President Staunton. Pte. Temple said that he was glad to be back among the boys and to see that so many had got home safely.

Secretary Whatley informed the meeting that he had received no reply so far from the Minister of Justice in regard to the status of returned soldiers under the Military Service Act. However, he thought that the proclamation issued on Saturday fully covered the point and showed that men who had been in the actual theatre of war and had received an honourable discharge were exempt from all provisions of the Act. The Association is endeavouring to have a number of its members appointed as military representatives on the various tribunals which will hear claims for exemption under the Act.

At last night's meeting four applications for membership were read and on motion the candidates were admitted into the membership of the club.

The Investigation committee will look into the credentials of a local soldier who is wearing the active service button and who, some of the members claim, is not entitled to "put up" the button in question.

A large number of members subscribed for the first number of the official journal of the Great War Veterans Association, which is to be issued in December and which will appear monthly afterwards. It will be devoted entirely to news in connection with the Association.

Dyspeptics Should Avoid Drugs And Medicines

TRY A LITTLE MAGNESIA INSTEAD

Some people instinctively shut their eyes to danger and it may be that instinct or custom or habit causes dyspeptics to take drugs, patent foods and medicines, artificial digestants, etc.

But closing the eyes does not banish the danger and it is certain that neither drugs nor medicines possess the power to destroy the harmful excessive acid in the stomach, which is the underlying cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia. They may give temporary relief but ever increasing quantities must be taken and all the time the acid remains in the stomach as dangerous as ever.

Physicians know this and that is why their advice so often to sufferers from digestive and stomach trouble is "Just get about an ounce of pure bisurated magnesia from your druggist and take a teaspoonful in a little water immediately after every meal. This will instantly neutralize all the harmful acid in the stomach and stop all food fermentation, thus enabling you to enjoy hearty meals without experiencing the least pain or unpleasantness afterwards.

THE DISTRICT CONVENTION OF THE W. M. S.

The district convention of the Women's Missionary Society will be held in George Street Methodist Church on Thursday morning and afternoon. An excellent programme has been arranged. Mrs. H. D. Robertson will give an address on "Our Work in China," and Rev. Mr. Thomas will talk on "War and Missions." The music will be of a high order.

Limited To A Profit Of 50c. Per Ton

New Regulations in Regard to Coal Go Into Force To-morrow

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Oct. 16.—No coal dealer will be allowed to make a profit of more than 50 cents a ton after to-morrow, when the order-in-council recommended by the conference presided over by Fuel Controller Magrath of Montreal, yesterday, is issued. That was the principal matter under discussion at the conference yesterday. Mr. H. A. Harrington, Assistant Fuel Controller for Ontario, stated to-day. "The regulation will apply all over the Dominion," said Mr. Harrington, who explained that allowance for operating expenses and all overhead charges would be made so that the dealer would get a net profit of 50 cents. 'There will be severe penalties for the infringement of the regulation," added Mr. Harrington.

"By November 15 there will be coal for everybody," he declared. "Meanwhile the huge supplies going to the Northwest via the Great Lakes causes the shortage, and when the traffic closes they will be diverted here."

THE BRITISH CASUALTIES FOR THE WEEK

A Total of 14,096 Killed, Wounded or Missing

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 16.—British casualties reported last week amount to 14,096, divided as follows:

Killed or died of wounds—Officers 217, men 2,809.

Wounded or missing—Officers 837, men 10,473.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—British casualties continue to show a declining rate. The total reported in the last week was 14,096 as compared with 17,505 for the week closing October 9, and 21,179 for the preceding week. This is despite the fact that the British have been heavily engaged in Flanders during the past three weeks, scoring some of the most notable gains of ground in this year's fighting within this period.

Sammy Searting Is Fined $50

The Fair Day arrest of four alleged pickpockets entered its final phase this morning when Sammy Searting was fined $50 by Magistrate Dumble, the money to be paid forthwith, and in default of payment six months in jail at hard labor. The stated offence was the theft of $50 from Mr. Arthur Lazure.

When the case was resumed Chief Thompson pointed out the prisoner had not elected for trial.

Mr. Hatton stated that there was sufficient evidence to commit him for trial.

Mr. J. A. O'Brien, solicitor for Searting, intimated that if the Magistrate would consent to impose a small fine he would elect and plead.

Magistrate Dumble pointed out that there was evidence to show that Searting was guilty. He was one of the gang.

Mr. O'Brien—What do you think would be a reasonable fine?

Magistrate Dumble—You're asking too much.

Mr. O'Brien consulted with the prisoner as to the prospect of raising $50, and told the Magistrate he would consent to a fine of $25 or $30. He then elected by saying: "I think we'd better have a summary trial.

Magistrate Dumble declared Searting guilty and gave judgment as above, advising him to shun bad company and make a new start.

The prisoner said he was willing to join the army at once if freed.

The next debate dealt with the disposition of Searting's $12.43.

Mr. Dumble ordered that it be applied to pay the $50 Mr. Lazure had identified as his.

Mr. O'Brien protested that Searting did not steal Mr. Lazure's money.

Mr. Dumble—He was one of the gang.

Mr. O'Brien—Take it out of the gang's money, but leave this little fellow his $12.43.

Mr. Dumble repeated his order, adding, "I'm letting you off lightly, instead of sending you to the penitentiary."

Mr. O'Brien—How will he get out of town.

Searting broke in eagerly: "I'll walk out!"

Mr. Dumble remarked that he could not dispose of the fines.

Mr. Hatton—You can dispose of the money foreited.

Mr. O'Brien contended that the trial of the other three suspects who flitted as soon as they were freed on $1000 bail each.

Mr. Dumble—They haven't appeared for trial. They each have lost the $1000.

Mr. O'Brien said that his consent to trial of the three absentees would not remedy the present difficulty. They were not before the court and hence could not be given a preliminary hearing.

Magistrate Dumble—But they did appear.

Mr. O'Brien quoted old common law which he said contemplated the presence of an accused person to hear his disposition read.

Magistrate Dumble—What is the procedure when a man breaks his recognizance? We can't bring them back. The practice is to forfeit the recognizance.

His Worship said the defence wished to take advantage of a situation it had helped to create. "Is it a maxim of law that a man can take advntage of his own law? These men took advantage of the protection the law gave them."

Mr. Hatton stated that the rule Mr. O'Brien quoted simply meant the accused had a right to be present.

Mr. O'Brien offered to write the Attorney-General for instructions in regard to the disposal of the money taken from the three men.

Magistrate Dumble—The Chief holds the money and should be the proper person to write.

Chief Thompson was dubious of the result. In Toronto forfeited bail was left with the Police Commission to be turned over to the municipality or to the Police Benefit Fund.

The argument languished and finally it was decided to take the statement of men who had lost money at the Exhibition as to their identification of some of the rolls found on the Boston trio.

ROBBED IN THE TRENCHES.

Jacob Henry Isbister, of South Monaghan, testified that he lost $58 at the Peterboro fair. He had $60.95 which he counted before leaving home in the morning.

"I remember the denominations of some of the bills. One was a Union bank $5 bill. I am a blacksmith and that bill was given to me when my hands were greasy from drilling iron. This left a dirty thumb mark on my bill. I gave my wife $2 in Peterboro. I did not take the money out of my pocket all the time I was at the show until 5 o'clock when I was in the trenches.

Given a wad of bills Mr. Isbister picked out $5 which he recognized as his by a smudge of grease on it and a moment later changed his decision pointing to one the identification of which he said he was positive. It also had a black mark which the witness said had been made by his thumb.

"I have a recollection that I lost the money near the periscope in the trenches. I was crowded by a man I afterwards recognized at the police station as one of the prisoners who were here first for picking pockets. He crowded up against me on the left side. I turned around and said 'What the devil are you shoving.' He just laughed. A minute later I put my hand in my pocket and found my money gone."

Witness said he saw in the trenches three of the men who were held on the charge of picking pockets.

Mr. O'Brien objected that the examination was taking the form of a preliminary investigation, to which he objected. He was satisfied that evidence be taken to identify the money and to facilitate its return to its owners.

Mr. Dumble held that a little fullness of evidence did not hurt. The difficulty would have been obviated by the presence of three men.

It would be a well deserved tribute to the sacrifices they have made for our country and ourselves individually. They must have among their number many that are well qualified for the position, and their experience at the battle front would be of great advantage in the consideration of the various questions that would come before Parliament.

Yours truly,
J. GREEN.

Atmosphere Is Charged With Fight

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Receives Many Messages of Encouragement

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 16.—With Union Government almost consummated, interest is turning toward the Laurier camp. Throughout all the creative period of union, probably no man has preserved more extraordinary equanimity and poise than the man who now leads the forces against the union. He is as inscrutably philosophical as ever and goes with his head high as a man of fixed purpose and firm resolve. Each day he is at his office early, and he never leaves in the afternoon until after four o'clock. Callers come and go and there is much going on behind the beaver board walls. In fact the atmosphere is charged with fight. All talk of Sir Wilfrid Laurier retiring from the leadership has now ceased. He now has the appearance of a man whose hands have been unbound and whose faculties are free for the fight ahead. He has been receiving messages of encouragement from supporters all over the country and has never appeared more cheerfully aggressive. Reports from the west are to the effect that many of those who attended the Winnipeg conference have already reiterated to Sir Wilfrid the stand which they took there. Political forces are now divided into Conservative Unionists, Liberal Unionists and Laurier Liberals. Quietude reigns again today in the Union Government.

MR. FRICKER ENTERTAINED

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stocker entertained Mr. Fricker, organist of the Metropolitan Church, conductor of the Mendelssohn Choir and organist of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, at an informal reception at their home, Weller Street, after Mr. Fricker's recital in St. Andrew's Church last night. The organists of the city and a number of gentlemen, including Mr. Gliddon, Mr. Crane, Mr. F. Mather, Mr. H. Morphet, Mr. Chas. Coleman, Mr. C. Parsons, Mr. Geo. Chandler, and Mr. Smith, attended the reception.

Dainty refreshments were served, Mrs. Stocker, Miss Daisy Stocker and Miss Mather assisting, after which speeches by Messrs. Allan, Crane, Renwick and Gliddon, expressing their delight at the recital and hoping for an early opportunity of hearing Mr. Fricker again, were made. To these speeches Mr. Fricker made graceful reply, thanking all who had made his visit an exceedingly great pleasure.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

ANNUAL FIELD DAY WAS A FINE SUCCESS

J. Thirnbeck Won the Senior Championship and J. Porteus the Junior at the Oval Yesterday—Record Broken in One Event

At the annual Field Day of the Collegiate Institute held yesterday at Nicholls Oval, which, regardless of a drizzly downpour of rain, was well attended, the record for the half-mile junior race being broken by J. Ward, who, besides winning this distinction, won all the junior runs, and broke the road race record a week ago.

Won The Cup.

J. Thirnbeck, who tied in the 100 yards (Senior) race with H. Martin, won the Collegiate Cup for 1917.

Staff Pleased.

The staff and management expressed themselves well and justly proud of the fine sportsmanlike spirit prevailing amongst the girls and boys, both those who entered and those who essayed with the game regardless of weather conditions. The races and events were keenly contested and lent some exciting moments and startling final results, especially in the 880 yards' dash.

Girls Good Sports.

In the girls' events, all of which had brisk entries, a surprise awaited many an onlooker at what the girls of to-day can do with races, throwing balls and other sports in the field hitherto devoted to the stronger sex.

one in B, and one in C, while only three were rejected outright. At night the rejections comprised only three of the seventeen presenting themselves; eleven were graded Category A and three marked fit for duty in Canada. Although up to last night 570 men had been examined there is no sign of any slackening in the number of men on hand to be examined. Of course it should be understood that not all these men are residents of the city. The territory covered by the local Board is a large one and men have been coming from Campbellford, Hastings, Norwood, Omemee, Havelock, Millbrock and other villages in the district as well as from the surrounding country side.

The following interesting letter has been received from Pte. H. Clare, formerly of the 93rd Battalion:

France, Sept. 17th, 1917.

Dear Friend,—In reply to your card, which I was pleased to receive and glad to say that it found me fairly well, just going into the line, but was only six days there when I was sent to hospital slightly gassed, but am doing fine now and in a few days I hope to be able to rejoin my battalion and the boys for a little fun that is going on, for old Fritz has been up to his dirty tricks again, so we are going to have our own back. A few weeks ago we got him jumping; you should have seen him beating it across the open. It was one night or, to be more precise, it was early in the morning, just about the witching hour. Everything was intensely dark, with just a dim flare on our right and left. In our front all was darkness, a time when the Hun is wondering what kind of a stunt those Canadians are going to pull off, when, without a moment's warning the messengers of death were let loose, then the sky was ablaze with the Hun flares, turning the night into day. It was splendid, in all its horror of destruction, even like Hades let loose; it seemed impossible that mortals could live through it. No wonder that the Hun always seems dazed when we meet him and is ready to holler, 'Mercy Kamerad, mercy.' We go through the mill sometimes, but not like old Fritz, who is paying a hundredfold for his previous successes. It is a sight to see the boys the moment the barrage is lifted, a cheer for the artillery for the good work they have done as over the top they go, then look out Fritz, who you may see beating his way over the open or hugging the trench ready to cry 'Mercy Kamarad, mercy.' Then comes the time when the teaching of our mothers and ministers and the land to which we belong, when the point of the bayonet is lowered and the life of the enemy is saved. Phrases like these are often governing the doing and the intentions of our boys, even though the enemy is unworthy of consideration, the Canadian is ever ready to give him a fighting chance. Yet the thought comes to us when, Lord, Lord, how long must this strife go on, whilst we are always hoping that the end will speedily come.

That there will be a speedy re-union of loves now parted, is the wish of your old friend. H. CLARE.

Badges Ready Next Week.

Beginning next week, badges will be issued to all returned men and men who have been in the Canadian Expeditionary Force at any time, which will be official and have the sanction of the Government. There will be three classes of men, and buttons will be issued corresponding to these classes. Class A men will comprise those men who have seen service in France, or any theatre of war. Class B men will comprise those men who have seen service in England only. Class A men are included in Class B. Class C men are those who have seen service in Canada only. In all cases the men must have been honourably discharged. These buttons or badges, which will supersede those issued by the Canadian Patriotic Fund, will be available shortly. It is not expected that a man will have to apply personally for them, but lists of eligibles will be compiled through the agency of the M.H.C.C., the Soldiers' Aid and the G.W.V.A., etc., and forms filled out and mailed in.

Button for Rejected.

To men who applied for enlistment in the army and were rejected, Class D men, a button or badge will also be issued, provided that these men produce evidence that they have applied and been rejected any time before August 10, 1917, and that they have reported again since that date to a Medical Board and have been examined. These men will not be dealt with until after the New Year. It is not quite clear what will happen to a Class D man if he is examined and found fit for overseas but apparently he will not receive a button. In that case the new system will give little recognition to the man who was turned down before August 10, 1917, and accepted since that date. The man who was rejected five times and accepted under the draft will be classed just the man who never applied at all until he had to, if the present interpretation of the regulations governing the issue of buttons to Class D men is correct.

Pte. Joe Temple, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and was invalided back to England in April last, after seven months in the trenches, arrived home from overseas last evening. Pte. Temple was a member of No. 2 Platoon, A Company, of the 93rd. On reaching England he was transferred in one of the first drafts fdom the Peterborough battalion to the 5th C. M. R., joining that unit when it was on the Somme. He was taken ill just after the Vimy Ridge victory, and has been undergoing treatment ever since. He has to receive further medical attention at Kingston.

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—An Order-in-Council has been passed providing that men of the active Militia engaged in home guard duty throughout the Dominion shall be given the same subsistence allowance as men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, dating from Oct. 1.

At present there are some 9,000 men on guard duty in Canada, the great majority of whom are unfit for overseas service, who receive the same rate of pay as members of the overseas forces. In the past, however they have been granted a subsistence allowance of only $13.50 a month, while the overseas men have been given $20 a month.

HALIFAX, Oct. 15.—The alleged sale of liquor to soldiers landing here from hospital ships has roused the Returned Soldiers' Reception Committee and temperance organizations to demand action by the authorities. According to members of the Reception Committee, there were about 200 "bottleggers" plying their trade in Halifax.

Six hundred soldiers landed at the pier last week, were held over for a few days, and, being without funds, the military authorities arranged that each should get a payment of $10. The first night many of the men returned to the pier in bad condition as a result of liquor, the staff there was kept busy all night attending to them. Next day men with, perhaps, one leg gone could be seen with bandages on their heads for injuries sustained by falls, etc. It was alleged that liquor was put up in egg shells and sold to the soldiers.

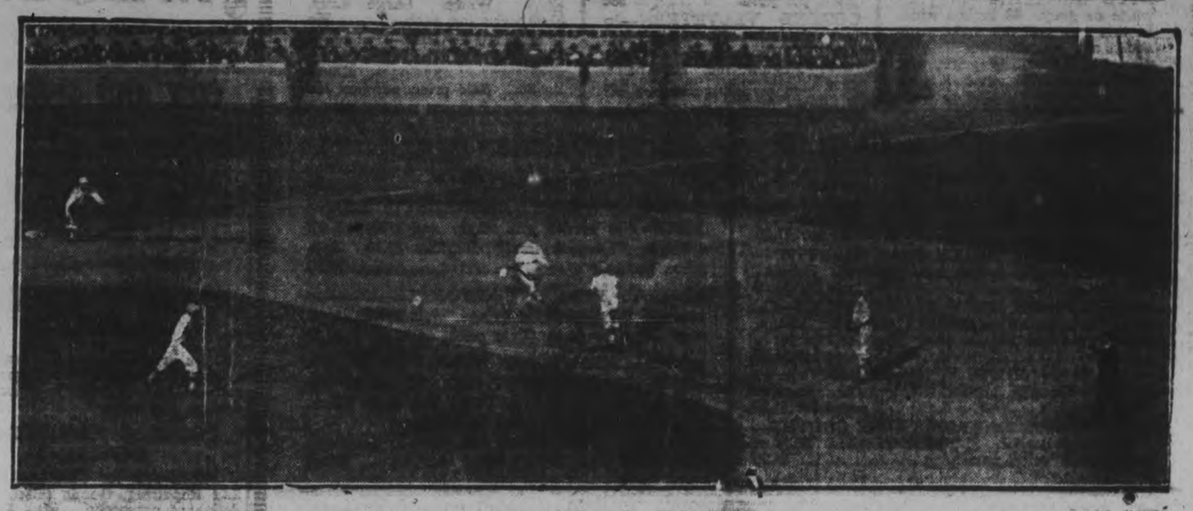
The military authorities had suggested not paying the men, but storekeepers had complained that such action was bad for the city.

Halifax is a dry town.

MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—Out of 339 men who applied at the post offices here on Saturday for registration blanks in connection with the Military Service proclamation only 18 did not seek exemption. The first to report for service was Victor Gaudet, a 20-year-old French-Canadian from Dalesville, Que.

It is estimated that 69,000 eligibles should be dealt with here, which means that an average of 2,750 should be handled each day during the 25 allotted registration.

Le Canada complains that the applicants are not allowed to take their blanks home fod study and that the formula are a melange of French and English. It is also objected that applicants are forced to sign their exemption blanks in the presence of the postmaster.



EDDIE COLLINS NIPPED OFF SECOND AFTER MAKING A TWO-BASE HIT IN THE FOURTH GAME.

After reaching second on a double to left field, Eddie Collins, the star infielder of the White Sox, was caught flatfooted off the bag a few minutes later by a fast throw from Schupp to Fletcher. The picture shows Collins being run down between second and third.

PRESS COMMENT ON AIR RAID REPRISALS

"Great Britain is Justified."

Rochester Union and Advertiser:—"While most of us will deplore the fact that Great Britain has determined to make air raids upon German cities in reprisal for German air raids on British towns, all must agree that Great Britain is justified in adopting such a course."

"Remarkable Self-Restraint."

Indianapolis News: "After two years of the most remarkable self-restraint the British and French have decided to adopt the policy of reprisal against the Germans for their bombardment of open towns from the air—notably London. What is proposed is not so much reprisal as retaliation."

"Only One More Disaster."

Chicago Herald: "German cities are to learn from the British, as they have already learned from the French during the last few days, what it means to have indiscriminate slaughter loosened from the skies. And for this terrible lesson their inhabitants can thank their German rulers.

"Hope for Speedy Ending."

Chattanooga Times: "Once raids are made on German cities and towns the civil populations will awake to the enormity and atrocity of such methods of diaboism and the direct effect may be an abandonment of the practice altogether."

"Will be Deplored"

Albany Knickerbocker Press: "The announcement that the British government has determined upon direct reprisals for attacks by German aeroplanes will be deplored by enlightened American sentiment. It may be said that America's freedom from the danger of aerial attack should force us to suspend judgment on the measures taken by our Allies whose innocents have suffered."

To wash a clothesline wind it round the lower end of a washboard, scrub, rinse and set out in the sun to dry. Dip piece of bread in the juice from the roast beef; brown them in a skillet on top of the stove. This makes a delicious toast.

THE SWEDISH MISSION MAY BE WITHDRAWN

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Sweden's economic mission may be withdrawn from Washington, a Swedish official declared to-day, because their diplomatic pouches are detained at the British Embassy. Unofficial hints are that the mail may contain secrets rivalling the Luxburg affair. The Swedish representatives claim the pouches contain principally food statistics. They display further indignation because they are denied the privilege of cabling their Foreign Office in code. The Swedes have been informed that they can have no serious objection to opening the mail in the presence of British officials if the contents are harmless. "This is an indignity," one Swedish official said to-day, "to which we will not submit. It is absolutely essential to the success of our negotiations with the American War Trade Board that we communicate confidentially with the Swedish Foreign Office." A cloak of secrecy has been thrown around the diplomatic pouches by the British Embassy here since the mail was taken o: a steamship at Halifax several weeks ago.

Canned Squash.

Cut the squash in two or three pieces and discard the seeds. Cook by steaming in the shell, the edges of the shell turned downwards, that moisture may not settle into the pulp; or, cook in a saucepan in the same manner as a steamer. When done, scrape the pulp from the shell, press it through a potato ricer and use to fill sterilized jars as solid as possible. Use a sterilized silver plated knife in packing.

"THE DANCER'S PERIL"

Miss Brady is seen at her brilliant best in this scintillating offering. This drama sparkles with the fire of romance, glows with life and throbs with the music of the dance. In it Miss Brady appears as the star of the Russian ballet—a character new to her and to the screen—and her impersonation is superb. Vivid dance scenes feature this production.

OBITUARY

ROBERT J. COOK.

Robert John Cook died last night at the family residence, 555 Bethune St., after an illness of about six weeks' duration. Mr. Cook was born in Peterborough 45 years ago, and has resided here practically all his life. Up to the time of his illness he was a machinist at the Wm. Hamilton Co. In business and in social circles Mr. Cook enjoyed the esteem and affection of all who knew him, and his death will be keenly felt by his wide circle of friends. He was a member of the C. O. F., and in religion a Methodist.

He is survived by his wife, whose maiden name was Ida Deering, of Detroit, and one son, George Carl, of Toledo; also three sisters, Mrs. Brown, Calgary, and the Misses Cassie and Jane, of this city.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30. Service at the house at 2 o'clock, before leaving for the Little Lake Cemetery.

FINANCING OF WHEAT CROP IS ARRANGED

Canadian Press Despatch:

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 16.—Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, to-day announced that the financing of the exportable surplus of the Canadian wheat crop of this year has been satisfactorily arranged. The amount involved is over 350 million dollars. The announcement by the Minister of Finance follows upon the recent conferences held here last week between Lord Reading, representing the Imperial Government, the Dominion Government, and the executive of the Canadian Bankers' Association. The payment to the farmers of the price fixed for grain is now assured.

A MILLION DOLLAR FIRE

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 16. — With upwards of 8,000 cattle burned to death, and eight acres of pens destroyed at a loss estimated at more than a million dollars, the fire in the Kansas City Stock Yards was under control at 10 a.m. to-day. Fire companies from both the Kansas and Missouri sides reinforced companies from the suburban stations fighting the flames. The cause of the blaze has not been determined, but rumours of incendiarism were without confirmation. Stock men believed the fire was caused by sparks from a passing engine. Firemen saved the major part of the yards.

FIVE REPUBLICS IN CENTRAL AMERICA CONSIDER MERGER

Conference to Lay Groundwork for Merger Probably Within Two Months.

PROPOSAL MEETS LITTLE OPPOSITION

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The movement for the creation of a Central American Union—the welding of the five isolated republics into a single political organization—has progressed to such a point that it now seems probable that within a month or two steps will be taken to lay the groundwork for the merger.

In the stress of war little heed has been given this political enterprise, which has long been the dream of Central America. Gradually, however, the movement has gained impetus throughout the five republics. It is being watched closely by the United States government. State Department officials are, as yet, non-committal on the subject, but there is no doubt that Washington will look favourably on the project and probably will lend its aid in bringing it to completion as soon as it can be shown that it has the support of the peoples of the countries involved.

The suggestion of a political union of the five Republics originated with Honduras. Reports received in Washington indicate that it has been taken up readily in Guatemala, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Salvador. Public opinion in the five countries appears to be generally in favour of the undertaking, the only opposition coming from some of the political leaders, who are apprehensive that a general political merger under one government will bring about a curtailment of their activities.

May Meet in Washington.

The subject probably will be taken up for consideration at a forthcoming meeting of the representatives of the five republics to renew the Washington conventions, which will exoire in December. The subject of a meeting place is now under descussion. Both Panama and Washington have been proposed. It is not improbable that the latter city will be chosen, in view of the fact that it is far removed from disturbing influences which might interfere with the success of the meeting and that it was the place at which the existing conventions were agreed upon ten years ago. At that time the State Department, under the direction of Elihu Root, had much to do with bringing about the adoption of the so-called Washington Conventions, to the successful application of which is largely due to the revival of the hope in Central America for a federated union.

The most conspicuous achievement of the Washington conference was the creation of a Central American Court of Justice, the seat of which was at San Jose. It was authorized to settle disputes between the republics, and has been so successful that within the last ten years international disturbances in Central America have virtually ceased. Appreciating the benefits of this international institution the leaders in the five countries, with certain exceptions, hope to broaden the agreement to obtain for themselves the greater benefits of a direct political union. The war has probably given impetus to this movement.

No Conflict of Interests.

It is realized that one republic will be stronger than five scattered governments and that Central America will be in a much better position politically and commercially if its interests are consolidated under the direction of a single government. In general their interests are identical. There is no conflict among the five republics in this respect to arouse the hostility of one or the other toward a political union.

It is admitted in Washington that difficulties lie in the way of the accomplishment of this purpose. Political leaders, jealous of their position, undoubtedly will arise to oppose the undertaking, but it is realized that the time for discussing it is probably as favourable now as it has been since the days of the great liberator, Rufino Barrios.

The question of the choice of administration of the consolidated government is already under consideration. The name of Estrada Cabrera, President of Guatemala, is suggested for the Presidency. Luis Anderson, of Costa Rica, formerly Minister for Foreign Relations of the Republic and delegate to the last Washington conference, is mentioned for the Vice-Presidency. It is generally admitted that, if the merger is brought about, Mr. Cabrera will be chosen as the first President. He has been President of Guatemala for eighteen years, was a pupil of Barrios himself and is generally considered the strongest man within the five republics.

America to Move Slowly.

In view of the relations between the United States and the Central American governments it is probable that the State Department will steer a cautious course until practicable steps for bringing about the political union have been formulated. At present the United States does not recognize the Tinoco government, which is in control of Costa Rican affairs. That, however, would not interfere with the coalition idea. Nicaragua is virtually under an American protectorate. The influence of the United States cast in the balance at the proper moment undoubtedly would do much to make the Central American dream a reality.

Indications will be forthcoming within a few wekes of the extent to which the suggestion of Honduras meets with the approval of the other republics. In connection with the arrangements for the forthcoming conference, definite suggestions probably will be made and a course of action outlined. The events of the next two months probably will determine whether the movement is to succeed or fail.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals, or violent or extreme statements, must, to secure insertion, be signed with which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Never in the political history of West Peterborough has there been such unanimity of opinion between the two opposing political parties as is now manifested by their adhesion to the Win-the-War party. If they are all sincere in their professions, no one can object to the most fit and proper person being elected by acclamation and thus save the expense and turmoil of a contested election, and which would also produce harmony so essential for accomplishing the object in view.

I would therefore suggest that such a nominee be one of the fighting war veterans as may be chosen by the Association.

It would be a well deserved tribute to the sacrifices they have made for our country and ourselves individually. They must have among their number many that are well qualified for the position, and their experience at the battle front would be of great advantage in the consideration of the various questions that would come before Parliament.

Yours truly,
J. GREEN.

MARKETS CONTINUE VERY QUIET

Slight Declines Are Reported—The Cattle Market

Winnipeg reports the largest number of cars of wheat inspected Monday so far this fall, when 1,409 were inspected, of which 1,268 were contract grades. The markets continue very quiet, both for wheat and Canada Western oats. Excepting for the grades on which prices are fixed, slight declines are in order. Demand for export is good for the top grades, but supplies up to the present have been light.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2, northern, $2.20 1-2, store; No. 3, $2.17 1-2, including 2 1-2 cent tax, in store, Fort William.

American corn—Nominal, not quoted.

Ontario oats—No. 2, white, 62c to 63c, nominal; No. 3 white, 61c to 62c, nominal.

Barley—New, $1.16 to $1.18.

Ontario wheat—No. 1, winter, new, $2.22, basis in store, Montreal.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.72.

Manitoba flour—First patents, in jute bags, $11.50; second patents, $11; strong bakers, $10.60.

Ontario flour — Winter, according to sample, in bags, prompt shipment, $9.80 Montreal, $9.60 Toronto.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $42; bran, $35; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings, $45 to $46.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $12 to $13; No. 2, $11 to $11.50; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, car lots, per ton, $7 to $7.50.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 52 cars, with 790 cattle, 102 calves, 717 hogs, and 687 sheep and lambs.

Market was slow and draggy, with no life to trade. Prices were easier, and only for anything very choice was there any demand, and slow at that. Monday's heavy run seems to have more than met present requirements of the big packers, and the rest of the trade was of a scattered character and in small lots. Receipts of fresh cattle were light, but there were over a thousand cattle held over from yesterday's supplies. Quality and prices yesterday were mostly on the lower ranges, nothing choice being on the market.

Stockers and feeders were also a slower trade than for two weeks past. Too many rough light stockers in the market.

Butcher fat cows not holding quite so firm, though fair demand for anything choice.

The hog market was practically at a deadlock up to noon-hour, yesterday, when no transaction had been made. Bid prices were understood to be $18.25 to $18.50 fed.

Green Tomato Pickle.

Slice very thinly one peck of green tomatoes and two quarts of onions, sprinkling them all with a little salt, and let them stand till next day. Now drain them through a colander, put them on with enough vinegar to cover them, and boil very gently till clear and tender. Then drain them from the vinegar. Put into about the same quantity of fresh vinegar two pounds of brown sugar, one-half pound of white mustard seed, one-half ounce of ground mace, one tablespoonful each of celery seel and ground cloves, and boil them all together for a few minutes; then pour it over the drained tomatoes, which have been previously mixed with one dessertspoonful of cayenne, one full teaspoonful each of ground mustard and of turmeric; mix this all well together, add about half a pint of good salad oil, and, when cold, put it into jars.

Eating for Health and Strength calls for intelligent food selection. It is easy to keep in top-notch vigor of mind and body at low cost if you know Shredded Wheat Biscuit. It is 100 per cent. whole wheat—nothing wasted, nothing thrown away — contains more real body-building nutriment than meat, eggs or potatoes and costs much less. Full of nutriment, tasty and toothsome. Most people like the nutty aroma of the baked wheat, especially when served with hot milk. Delicious with sliced peaches, bananas and other fresh fruits.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

"Strange," he muttered, gazing about the room. Then, with a sudden afterthought, "You are not English?"

On this score she had reason only for pride.

"My father was a noble of Seville," she said, facing him with a new light in her eyes. "He was killed, fighting for Spain."

Barton let his eyes wander through the doorway of the room. A window in the opposite wall opened upon the garden. A mass of flowering vines clung to its fantastic iron grating. Through clusters of odorous blossoms he saw the rich foliage of palms, outlined with metallic hardness against the hot blue sky. A droning of insects came to his ears, together with the noisy chattering of birds. Within the room was an atmosphere of luxury quite foreign to his simple training and tastes. The carved bedstead, the rich hangings of the walls, the silk coverlet beneath which he lay, all told of a life far removed from that of his own people. To them, the touch of satin suggested contact with the Evil One himself, their virtues being as sturdy and uncompromising as their rough homespun. He marveled that his surroundings did not inspire him with feelings of distaste. Possibly, he reflected, they would have done so, had he encountered them in the rigid atmosphere of his native land, but here the brocades and satins, the brilliant colours, the heavy perfume of the flowers, the atmosphere of lazy luxury seemed but a natural and fitting part of the life about him. His smile, when he once more turned to Ramona, had in it no suggestion of criticism, but rather a hint of amused wonder, that he should find himself surrounded by such astonishing luxuries. A curious feeling of unreality persisted in his mind. When, two weeks before, he had staggered into the moonlit garden, with its atmosphere of song and romance, he had felt, for a moment, as though it were part of some extravagant dream with his return to consciousness the impression persisted. Here was he, a sturdy Puritan, accustomed to hard work and harder fare, to wind-swept decks and the roar of storms, with a narrow berth for a bed, lying beneath silken coverlets, in a dream room, surrounded by flowers, waited on by a girl of exquisite beauty, who seemed to find happiness only in serving him, in ministering to his comfort. It is not surprising that the situation seemed to him fanciful, unreal.

"A strange land, the Indies," he observed musingly. "In my country it would scarce be thought meet for a maid so young and fair to dwell alone, and play the nurse to strange men." He spoke in amusement, not in criticism, and smiled as he regarded his companion, but to her the words seemed to convey some sort of reproof. Knowing nothing of the rigid Puritanism that the training of youth had twined about his heart, she found herself confronted by an influence at once foreign and sinister, a something that chilled her, that made her feel afraid.

"Have I done wrong to care for you?" she asked tremulously.

He hastened to make amends, with quick appreciation of her hurt.

"Forgive me," he said. "For what you have done, I can never repay you."

"I want no repayment," she told him, quite simply. "I am repaid already, now that you are almost well again." She left him then, urging him to sleep, but her departure was more to give herself opportunity for reflection. A vast gulf lay between them—that she well knew. Would love suffice to bridge it? At times she doubted greatly.

The slight reference he had made to his native land clung insistent within her mind; she referred to the matter on another occasion.

"Tell me about your country," she said. "I—I would go there, some day when—when you are strong and—and well again."

"I fear me you would not like it overmuch," he replied. "It is cold and gray and sad, like winter skies. You would long for the warmth of the Indies."

She thought to tell him she would long for nothing, were he at her side but the words died in her throat. The man would laugh at her, should she so palpably show him her love.

He was in a laughing mood that day. Vitality, that had ebbed for so long, was now returning to him; it shone in his eyes, in the faint colour in his cheeks, in the rounding out of the hollows where supple muscles had once played.

"God knows how I shall ever get back there again," he went on, his thoughts with the somber folk of his little gray New England town.

"Must you then—go?" she ventured timidly.

"Surely you would not have me stay here always," he laughed. "I have my work to do—I could not be content to lie here and dream."

She knew that, had indeed always known it. Fate had given her a month, in which to live, and love. Why would her heart not be content?

"I know," she said. "You are right. I must dream — alone. Ah, well—perhaps it is better so. The good God has been very kind to me, even to give me these few weeks—these few little weeks." There was a sob in her voice; she found herself unable to repress it.

"We Puritans are a plain, blunt people," he went on, "with the fear of God ever in our hearts. Sometimes I think we dwell upon it overmuch." A reminiscent smile flitted over his face. "My father was a godly man, but stern and cold always. He thought it sinful even to laugh." There was a gleam of merriment in his eyes.

"To me it seems sinful not to laugh," Ramona remarked, "when there is so much of joy and beauty in the world. I cannot understand such things." She caught his smile. "Now you are laughing at me," she cried.

"No—no. I was thinking of what my father would have said, had he heard you."

"Dios!" She gave a shiver of pretended alarm. "Perhaps he would have wanted to beat me."

"I do not doubt it," Barton laughed. "He had no patience with those he considered ungodly. When I was a boy, I sometimes ran away to listen to the tales of an old sailor who had served with Drake, and sailed the southern seas. He told me wondrous stories of what he had seen, of fishes with wings, and mermaids, and serpents of the sea. Also he taught me songs—brave songs of love, that he had learned from the French. I sang one of them, once, for my mother. It pleased her greatly, but my father was not pleased. 'Remember the words of Solomon,' he said to her, when she strove to shield me. 'Spare the rod and spoil the child.' He had a fine, large, birchwood cane. It was years ago, but I remember it still."

Ramona, the ever-present tragedy of her life for the moment forgotten, laughed with him.

"It must have been very—painful" she observed, feasting her eyes on his face.

"It was. Another time I laughed in meeting, because my brother brought a frog, and dropped it down Mistress Wentworth's back. My father was obliged to get him a new cane that day."

Their laughter brought Lucia peeping to the bedroom door. Ramona rose. For the moment her heart had leapt with joy, but she remembered that her patient was still a sick man.

"Come. You have talked enough now," she told him. "Lucia shall fan you, and you must sleep." She beckoned to the mulatto.

Barton protested, but she laughed his protests aside.

"Do as I bid you," she said, with mock severity, "or I shall treat you as your father did." Then she left him.

In the large cool room beyond it was very still. She sat for a long time beside the window, gazing out to sea. How beautiful the world seemed, how brilliant the sparkling tracery of sunlight on the water, how marvelously sweet the flowers that dropped their heads in the heat outside the window! With fairy fingers Love had touched her eyes. The past seemed very far away.

CHAPTER IX.

The large outer room of the house lay still and ghostly in the vague half light that precedes the coming of the dawn. A single lamp, of beaten gold, loot from some captured galleon, hung before the grasscloth curtain that marked the entrance to the bedroom. Its light, dim and smoky, served but to intensify the shadows that clustered along the floor.

One of them seemed more than ordinarily real. Pedro, the hunchback, a misshapen black figure, lay across the threshold of the door, his head pillowed upon one arm. A constant twitching of his muscles indicated the restlessness of his sleep.

Presently the door leading to the garden was pushed softly open, and Lucia, carrying in her arms a jug of water, made her way into the room. Aginst the gray of the dawn her figure formed a shadowy silhouette.

The dark mass before the doorway stirred, then the hunchback crouched quickly to his knees, his hand seeking the hilt of his knife.

"Who is it" he muttered, his eyes upon the door.

The girl came toward him, smiling.

"It is I, hunchback, with the water. You keep close guard."

"Have I not been so ordered?" he said, rising and sheathing his knife.

"Where is the mistress?" asked the girl, glancing toward the curtained door.

"She has just gone in to the young Puritan. He is awake."

The girl went to the table and set the jug of water upon it.

"Poor lamb," she said. "She will wear herself out with all this trouble and care."

"So I have told her, but she only laughs."

"Now that he is nearly well again, I suppose he will go away."

"Better for her if he does," the boy muttered. "God knows what may happen to her, and to us all, if he stays here."

"Do you not see that she loves him?" The girl spoke very low, as though fearing to give expression to her thoughts.

"Ay, I see it plain enough. She'd better watch out for the master."

"No fear. Is he not still at sea?"

"Who knows? I am afraid—afraid." He started and slunk back into the shadows as Ramona entered the room.

She wore a long nightdress of silk, over which hung a cloak of crimson velvet. A candle, set in a massive silver holder, lit up the crowding gloom. With bare feet she moved noiselessly over the tiled floor, like some spirit of mystery, of tragedy.

Her hair was caught up loosely at the back of her neck, held in place by a silver comb. Her fresh young bosom gleamed like pale gold beneath the yellow light of the candle. Although her face was very white from lack of sleep, her eyes were bright with the fires of a consuming love.

No Spooning Allowed

IF you have been unfavorably impressed with the flavor of Roman Meal Porridge, sure enough you must have stirred it! Be fair to yourself and to Roman Meal! Don't stir it except while mixing meal and water. Remember "no spooning allowed."

Force of habit made you stir the porridge without knowing you did so, perhaps. Just get another package; make the porridge according to the directions. Surely it is no trouble NOT to stir Roman Meal porridge after mixing the meal and water.

Dr. Jackson's

Roman Meal

makes the most delightful flavory porridge of all—when not stirred. The flavor of grains lies in their DARK parts. Roman Meal is rich in the dark parts of wheat and rye.

It is made from the WHOLE berries of these grains, bringing to you every bit of their nut-like flavor.

Roman Meal also contains wheat-bran and flaxseed; and you know how splendid these are for relieving constipation. The flaxseed in Roman Meal is absolutely tasteless and odorless, rendered so by a special electrical process invented by Dr. Jackson.

Stirring Roman Meal porridge while cooking brings back the flaxseed taste and odor. Don't stir except while mixing meal and water.

Another important thing: Roman Meal is porous, because it is granulated, thus allowing the digestive juices to reach every particle and preventing indigestion. Stirring when cooking breaks up the granules, making a sticky mush instead of the delicious Roman Meal granular porridge.

Thousands of families all over America enjoy Roman Meal porridge every day—it is delicious. Doctors prescribe it for constipation and indigestion and all undertone conditions. You can bake with it: mix it with your white flour when baking, it helps white flour foods to digest and restores their lost balance. Ask your doctor about it.

BAD DREAMS ARE SYMPTOMS

Ill Health the Cause—Many Alarming Symptoms of Women's Ailments—How Cured.

Paterson, N.J.—"I thank you for the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies as they have made me feel happy and healthy. Sometime ago I felt so run down, had pains in my back and side, was very irregular, tired, nervous, had such bad dreams, did not feel like eating and had short breath. I read your advertisement in the newspapers and decided to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It worked from the first bottle, so I took a second and a third, also a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and now I am just as well as any other woman. I advise every woman, single or married, who is troubled with any of the aforesaid ailments, to try your wonderful Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and I am sure they will help her to get rid of her troubles."—Mrs. Elsie J. OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Sunday Morning

By F. A. MITCHEL

James Weatherby awakened at 6 o'clock on Sunday morning and lay staring at the walls of his room. On them were a dingy daub of a water mill and an engraving of Benjamin Franklin. Being in a court, not a ray of sunlight could permeate the apartment.

Six mornings had Weatherby awakened in this room, and this was the seventh—not the seventh day of the week, but the seventh day since he had awakened in his own little home. Turning on his side, his eyes rested on one of those framed words one sees here and there in lieu of pictures. It read "God Bless Our Home" and under it "Remember the Sabbath Day." He thought of the Sunday mornings that he had awakened at home. Little Jim climbed out of his crib and joined his father in bed, while Mrs. Jim went downstairs to start the breakfast. Big Jim, on his back, would hold little Jim up at arm's length, his feet under the child.

Then had come quarrels between Weatherby and his wife. Mrs. Weatherby was frugal, and Jim was careless with his money. He was hard for an economical wife to manage, and sometimes she would lose her patience with him. At last Jim declared he would no longer stand her harrowing, as he called it, and left her.

This was a week ago. As Jim lay looking at the words "God Bless Our Home" and "Remember the Sabbath Day" he went over and over again in his mind those happy Sunday mornings he had spent at home. After he and little Jim had had their play he had taken his bath, put on his Sunday clothes, and on that morning he had always helped Jimmie to dress. Then the three had met at the breakfast table, on which there was always something nice provided for Sunday morning.

While Weatherby was looking at the mottoes on the wall and thinking of his home the words were having their effect on his heart. It seemed to him that there was a connection between the two. "God Bless Our Home" caused him to think what home was, how different from the lonely room to which he had moved, and "Remember the Sabbath Day" set him to thinking in a quiet vein. After all, was not the economy his wife had urged necessary? Suppose he should be suddenly taken away. And suppose his wife should soon follow him. What would little Jim do? His father pictured him hustled off to some charitable institution or, worse, trying at a tender age to make his living on the streets.

The thought made Jim restless. He got out of bed, splashed a little water on his face, dressed himself and went downstairs. In his pocket were his week's wages that he had received the day before. He had been tempted to spend it in a saloon and went there to do so, but somehow the place didn't look as attractive as it had often looked when he knew that his wife would chide him on his return home. The full amount was intact.

He stood in the sunlight, thinking. It was 7 o'clock. His Sunday morning breakfast hour at home was half past 8. That home was three miles away, but he would gladly walk it to have his breakfast at home. He walked down the street, passing one restaurant after another, trying to force himself into one of them to get a meal. But his stomach rebelled.

"I can go home," he said, "and eat with Molly and the kid. But what use? There would soon be more trouble about the expenses, and every time I paid a car fare instead of walking home after a hard day's work I'd get a scolding."

Then the thought of little Jim left on the world came to him again.

He was walking in the direction of his home, and as he thought he walked the faster. When he had gone a mile he stopped. Then he went on for another mile and stopped again. A third time he stopped and stood looking at his home a short distance away.

A clock struck 8. Molly was getting the breakfast. Who was helping little Jim dress himself? He could get on his clothes, but could he get the buttons in the holes? Weatherby could see the window of the boy's room and fancied him trying to "button himself up." Involuntarily Jim started forward.

A few minutes later Molly Weatherby, standing over the range, heard the kitchen door open. Turning, she saw her husband. He had a roll of bills in his hand and handed them to her.

"It's yesterday's pay," he said. "Take it. You can run the finances better than I. I never want to see a cent of the money again."

Molly threw her arms around his neck.

"Where's the kid?" Jim asked presently, and without awaiting a reply he went upstairs.

"Hello, pop!" cried Jim. "Ain't I glad you came! This button is too big for this hole and won't go in at all."

Jim hugged the boy, then helped him to finish dressing. After that they went down to breakfast."

"Oh, Jim," said his wife, "somehow I couldn't bear to leave out the muffins you always eat for breakfast, though I didn't suppose you'd be here. Wasn't it lucky?"

"It wasn't exactly luck," replied Jim. He was thinking of the mottoes "God Bless Our Home" and "Remember the Sabbath Day."

Make Your Own Cough Syrup and Save Money

Better than the ready-made kind. Easily prepared at home.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy—costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations—can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (30 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 55 cents and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effectual pleasant tasting remedy. It keeps perfectly.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed or swollen throat membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough will disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, whooping cough or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

KILLED HIS TWENTY MEN.

An Incident of the War of the Boxer Uprising in China.

"Speaking of barbaric warfare," said an army officer who was in China at the time of the Boxer uprising, "I remember one day when the company with which I was attached in China was in a position to witness the execution of twenty rebels. The men had been caught with our assistance, and the leader of the Chinamen thought that we deserved the privilege of seeing them die.

"Our commander was particularly impressed with the looks of one of the rebels. He was a fine built fellow, about nineteen years old, and his face, even five minutes before he was scheduled to die, was wreathed in smiles. Our leader determined to save the fellow if possible and asked the commander of the executing squad to spare the young rebel.

"'I can't spare him,' the man replied. 'I have been ordered to execute the whole twenty rebels.'

"After much persuasion he agreed to allow the man to live. To follow out his orders, however, he summoned a local policeman, placed him in the squad and had his head cut off with those of the nineteen rebels. He killed twenty, followed out orders and pleased a visitor. He was well satisfied."

Aeroplane Special Delivery.

I do not think the aeroplane will supplant the steamship and railroad as a mail carrier because it will be too expensive. It would take a very large number of flying machines, perhaps a hundred, to carry as much mail as we now get into a mail car. You can easily figure how this would increase the expense. It will have the same advantage in carrying mails as in carrying passengers, and that is speed. This statement also needs some qualification, for when it comes to quick communication the aeroplane can never supplant the telegraph and the telephone. But we shall probably have a special rapid mail service by aeroplane, for which we shall pay a higher price and buy a special stamp. The flying machine will give a ten hour service between New York and Chicago and a two day service from the Atlantic to the Pacific.—Orville Wright in Harper's Magazine.

OVERWORKED, TIRED WOMAN TOOK VINOL

Now She is Strong and Hearty

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was overworked, run down, nervous, could not eat or sleep. I felt like crying all the time. I tried different remedies without benefit. The doctor said it was a wonder I was alive, and when Vinol was given me I began to improve. I have taken eight bottles and am now strong and perfectly healthy in every respect, and have gained in weight. I can not praise Vinol enough."—Mrs. Sarah A. Jones, 1025 Nevada St., Philadelphia, Pa.

We guarantee Vinol to make overworked, weak women strong or return your money. Formula on every bottle. This is your protection.

Women As Police Force

A Failure in England,

And a Writer Tells Why

EXACTLY why the Birkenhead policewomen resigned is perhaps known only to themselves, but the appearance of an announcement to that effect in daily papers led many people to wonder if the women's police service had achieved the unmitigated success of which they had been told, writes Hilda M. K. Nield in The London Weekly Despatch. It is a fact that the short history of the service contains many records of resignations, and not those of unsuitable women only; many women have resigned more or less in protest.

Miss Nina Boyle, the prominent publicist, who inaugurated the women police after being forced by pressure of work to put the management into other hands, severed all connection on account of the Women's Police Service adopting the very methods it was created to suppress. The idea in having policewomen was to have a body of sympathetic women trained specially to understand and to guard the general interests of women and girls, women whose heart interest would be to further the welfare of their sex, and who would use their powers to prevent petty tyranization over women in the workshop, the home, and elsewhere.

But policewomen as a body have been unable to maintain these aims in face of the tempting bait of petty officialdom, and all over the land all sorts of people give concrete examples of the mistaken methods adopted by the women in blue.

Policewomen have done things which, as a high police officer said lately, would have meant more than a reprimand for a policeman. They have been and are guilty of enforcing illegal restrictions upon the public, especially where women are concerned, and it is hard to protest against such things from the woman's standpoint, since the inevitable answer to such protests is this wise: "But the action of which you complain was taken by you women! It is the women alone who were responsible for this or that which was done!"

Actual official reports tell how policewomen wished to test their power to enter private houses—otherwise, to break the law of trespass. They entered a house where the mistress, whose husband was absent, was entertaining a man friend. The latter was at once dismissed. A little later a second false entry was made, when the man was again found on the premises, and again sent about his business. How can the Women's Police Service succeed if members are confessedly guilty of illegal actions, if they infringe the law of trespass with impunity, if they tyrannize over other women's personal rights and privacy not even according to the letter of the law?

In patrol work, too, women tend to oppress where they were meant to help. Early in the war an order was made at Cardiff—by the military, I think—enabling the police to order any woman to remain indoors between certain hours of the day, an order which naturally kept most women at home at such times. The order was entirely illegal, and when brought to the notice of the War Office, regret was expressed at there having been any attempt to enforce it.

Yet despite the Cardiff incident the same iniquitous order has been enforced elsewhere by the women police. In one town after it was brought into action women officials reported having patrolled the streets, visited picture palaces, and such places during the stated hours, and found all parts quite free of women and girls.

At present a petition is being prepared asking the London County Council to provide largely increased numbers of women police and patrols to deal with the "parks' evil." Copies of it were in most metropolitan places of worship, and the petition was signed by many people who know absolutely nothing of either the "parks' evil" or of the women's police service. The attitude of such signatories is fairly represented by a woman who, after telling me that she had signed the petition, naively added: "I don't know what it is about, but I always sign that sort of thing!"

Policewomen will not work miracles in a moment where male police have more or less failed for years past. The only women who can touch the realities of such evils are those few saints who "without fear of reward" have long dedicated their lives to the Magdalen of the metropolis, women who hear the call of sisterhood too keenly to play the part of spy, women with whom the love of humanity comes before the love of exercising authority.

Policewomen have more than failed—they have done wrong. They have sown harmful seed instead of good, and it is springing up all over the country.

THE CZAR'S INFORMERS.

Tremendous Spy System Existed in Russian Empire.

Thirty-three long lists of spies, informers, and agents provocateurs in ex-Emperor Nicholas' pay have been published by the Commission for Securing the New System of Government appointed by the Provisional Government immediately after the revolution. Fifty more lists may be expected. The total number of these secret legionaries of autocracy is expected to reach 80,000. Those whose guilt is beyond doubt have been put in jail, but it is not yet settled whether they will be tried and punished or merely kept in jail until all peril of a reactionary counter-revolution has passed.

The commission's reports depict precisely the same system of espionage and State provocation to crime as flourished in Turkey under Abdul Hamid II. The distinction is that Abdul Hamid ran his spy and provocation system directly from the Yildiz Kiosk, whereas Nicholas entrusted his system to the notorious "Okhrannoe Otdielenie," or security department, which occupied a big building in the Basil Ostrox district.

The first act of the triumphant revolutionaries was to seize the security department's secret papers. Many of these were burned in bonfires outside the building. The more precious documents, especially those relating to the state organization of crime, had been kept in safes; and they escaped destruction. The revolutionaries also seized tens of thousands of secret records in the departments, provincial offices, and from these, backed by confessions of imprisoned spies, are being compiled the lists. The lists will be followed by a five-volume official "History of Espionage Under Nicholas II."

As revealed by these inquiries, autocracy's spies and informers were much less picturesque and romantic than they appear in the typical "Nihilist novel." Most of them belonged to the more intelligent working class or to the minor bourgeoisie. They were paid badly, the average wage for organizing political crime or betraying accomplices being $20 a month. The spies were usually instructed to become members of secret revolutionary or terrorist organizations, among these being the social democratic party, the social revolutionaries with their "fighting committee," the populist socialists, and the Maximalists. On nearly every newspaper was at least one spy. The spies took part in committee meetings, incited to breach of the political repression laws or to actual crime, and kept the security department well informed.

Every spy had a "klitchka," or nickname, by which he was known to the police. The department's records bristle with such nicknames as "Fatty," "Longnose," "Sunday Boy," "Elephant," and "Arsenic." The spy had also two or three faked surnames, and he often changed his town and name when he fell under the revolutionaries' suspicion. Many spies and informers, like the famous Father Gapon, whose treachery on Bloody Sunday, 1905, led to his being hanged by a revolutionist engineer, were at one time genuine revolutionaries, and later became betrayers and informers. Some seem to have served both sides honestly and earned the approval of both, and some do not seem to have known which side they sympathized with. A notable case is "Trukhanoff"—real name Nikitin, nickname "Perky"—who aroused the suspicion of his terrorist comrades, was threatened by them with execution and to rehabilitate himself, was obliged to kill the gendarme officer with whom he collaborated. The murder of Grand Duke Sergius in Moscow in February, 1905, was due to the same motive.

The organization of crime with the aim of discrediting non-terrorist political associations and frightening Nicholas into repression, went on on a great scale. For blood money of $150 a mechanic was hired by the department to fire at General Djunkowski, Governor of Moscow, but he was instructed to be sure to miss. He executed his instructions, but, through carelessness, killed a passerby.

In violation of the Nihilist novel tradition, very few women were employed as spies or informers, but a few noted cases have been exposed. In Moscow three sisters named Palitsin betrayed scores of workmen, after getting confessions from them by means of simulated love.

The commission's lists show that the department was a hard taskmaster. In addition to paying its spies badly, it spied on them. Every security department record contains a note of the spy's history. Some are described as "moderately good," others as "indifferent," others as having "betrayed many revolutionaries," others as "energetic but unreliable," and others as "doubtful, should be watched."

Directory First!

WHEN you call a telephone number from memory or when you guess at it you are apt to be wrong.

¶ The mind has a trick of transposing figures—instead of "1263" you are quite likely to say "1623."

¶ Also, telephone numbers, firm names, etc., are frequently changed.

¶ And when you thus ask for the wrong number, you waste your own time, the operator's, and the time of the person called through your error.

¶ Directory first is a good principle. In the end it saves time and temper to first consult the latest issue of the telephone book.

FOOLISHNESS OF WORRY.

Forcefully Set Forth in the French Soldier's Philosophy.

"Everything might be worse than it is," is the cheerful conclusion of the French soldier, according to Kathleen Burke in "The White Road to Verdun." Here is the way she sums up the philosophy of the man in the ranks:

Of two things one is certain—either you're mobilized or you're not mobilized.

If you're not mobilized there's no need to worry; if you're on the front of two things one is certain—either you're behind the lines or you're on the front.

If you're behind the lines there is no need to worry; if you're on the front of two things one is certain—either you're resting in a safe place or you're exposed to danger.

If you're resting in a safe place there is no need to worry; if you're exposed to danger, of two things one is certain—either you're wounded or you're not wounded.

If you're not wounded there is no need to worry; if you are wounded of two things one is certain—either you're wounded seriously or you're wounded slightly.

If you're wounded slightly there is no need to worry; if you're wounded seriously of two things one is certain—either you recover or you die.

If you recover there is no need to worry; if you die you can't worry.

AIMING A BIG GUN.

A Task In Which Figure Chemistry, Mathematics and Physics.

Today there is about as much difference between aiming a big gun and aiming a rifle as there is between sailing a superdreadnaught and sailing a steam yacht. It was not very long ago, however, that a gun was aimed similarly to a rifle in that the direction in which it was pointed was obtained by sighting along its barrel.

But no things are not done that way. The gunners are often far out of sight of what they are shooting at, and the remarkable hits that they make are only explained by the use they make of careful scientific calculations.

To direct the fire of one of the bigger guns, for example, requires that no less than fifteen complicated corrections be made, says Popular Science Monthly. Each correction requires an average of five adjustments, all of which must first be exactly figured out by those in command. The most important corrections which are made are for the influence of the resistance of the air, the influence of the earth's curvature and the attraction of gravity on the distance the bullet may be carried.

In place of the guesswork of previous times is the use of the most advanced developments in the fields of mathematics, physics and chemistry.

HAITI CLEANS HOUSE.

Changes That Were Brought About by the American Occupation.

Five years ago in Haiti there was on the whole island not more than one mile of macadamized roadway, and the new streets, taking the place of combination trails and sewers, are the most noticeable changes brought about by the American occupation.

But more remarkable than the streets is the astonishing sight of squads of Haitians actually cleaning the streets. Under the old regime the chief occupations of the male citizens of Haiti were cockfighting and politics.

The refuse and smells have departed, and, better still, most of the children have disappeared from the streets. They are actually at school, where by Haitian law they are supposed to be, but where by Haitian lawlessness only about 10 per cent of them ever used to be.

About 4 o'clock every week day you will see this newly mobilized infantry coming home in squads clean and, unfortunately for the picturesque value of Haitian highways and byways, now thoroughly provided with clothes.

Humor Found Everywhere.

Among those pre-eminently gifted with humor were Abraham Lincoln, Disraeli, Goethe and Heine, the late Lord Salisbury, Arthur Balfour, Dickens, Thackeray, Fielding, Shakespeare, Queen Elizabeth, Henry VIII., Charles II., Dr. Johnson, Charles Lamb, Emerson and Byron. The only persons who lack it altogether are madmen. Criminals as a whole are never without it. There is the case of one murderer at the bar in London who on being asked if there were any reason why sentence of death should not be passed upon him replied, "No; I am disgusted with the whole proceedings." Another in a similar situation on being asked whether he had a last request to make said, "Well, I should like to learn to play the piano."—Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree.

Detecting the Submarines.

A book on the urgent subject of submarine exploits has been written by Mr. Alfred Noyes, who has chosen as the title of the volume "Mystery Ships." The author has had experience of trawlers, drifters, motor-boats, and other craft, and, speaking of submarines being "mapped," he says:

"A submarine may enter the seas indeed, and even go to America. She may even do some damage within their lines. But if she does this her position is known, and if there be any future damage done it will probably have to be done by another submarine, for she has called up a thousand perils from every point of the compass to close upon her return journey.

"I have actually seen the course of a German submarine—which thought itself undiscovered—marked from day to day on the chart of a British base. The clues to all the ramifications of this work are held by a few men at the Admiralty in London. . . . It is difficult to convey in words the wide speed and subtle co-ordination of this ocean hunting, for the beginning of any tale may be known only to an admiral in a London office, the middle of it only to a commander at Kirkwall, and the end of it only to a trawler skipper off the coast of Ire-

SETTLING OF NATIONALITY.

All Children Born in British Empire Are British.

Which country does a man belong to? That of his father, or that in which he was born? asks Answers. We know that an Englishwoman who marries a German becomes a German herself, but what of her children, or those of any other German born under the Union Jack.

At the present time this question is often discussed by people who, holding opposite opinions on the subject, sometimes express them with more force than logic. Those persons, for instance, who hold that you follow the nationality of your father are apt to argue on the lines of the old "cross-talk" comedian. "Do you mean to tell me," he says, "that if a cat walks into a fish shop and has kittens, those kittens will be bloaters?"

The theory, however, is not so simple as that. For if one is always of his father's nationality, it follows that the father is of the nationality of his father, and so on into the remote past, and as the inhabitants of Great Britain are very largely descended from Normans and Saxons and Danes—to mention only a few of the sources from which our race has sprung—it would follow that scarcely anyone would be entitled to call himself an Englishman if the rule held good.

Fortunately, however, it does not. A man's nationality depends upon the laws of the country in which he lives, but as different countries have different laws on the subject it is natural that there should be a good deal of confusion about the matter.

You hear it said sometimes that it is wrong that the sons of Germans living in this country should be allowed to fight in our army, for the German law is that they are Germans. Quite so, but our law says that they are not. The law—not only of Britain, but the whole British Empire—says that any child born within the dominions of King George is his lawful subject, and to object to such persons as Germans merely on account of their parentage is to place the German law above our own, which is hardly patriotic.

The object of the German law is clear enough. Germany has always wanted a large army, and has for long been losing many of her people through emigration, and she therefore says that these men and their sons, to no matter what quarter of the globe they go, are still Germans, and in time of war are bound to fight for Germany.

But Germany is by no means the only country in which this law obtains. It—or something like it—is in force in Russia, Austria, and, indeed, in nearly every country in Europe, with one most important exception—that of our neighbor and heroic ally, France. And beyond Europe, in the United States, Canada, of course, and in practically all the different States of South America, we find that children born in those countries, no matter whom their parents may have been, are recognised as subjects of the land in which they were born.

When you consider the question it is clear that it must be so of necessity, for all these are what we call new countries, whose populations are still largely composed of immigrants from the older nations of Europe, and if all their children were to be recognized as natives of the countries from which their parents had come the real natives of these States would in many cases form only a minority of the population.

Similarly, France—though Frenchmen do not emigrate in large numbers—has for long suffered from a decline in population, and consequently is eager to avail herself of all the persons born within her boundaries. So that it is just as much from motives of self-protection that these countries support one view as that Germany and Russia hold to the opposite.

England's position is, perhaps, somewhat different. It will be noticed that the two groups into which the nations of the world are divided by this question are, broadly, the old autocratically-governed servile states such as Germany and Russia on the one hand, and the free, liberty-loving countries, like France and America, on the other. It is but natural, therefore, that England, the home of freedom, should take her place among the latter.

Chinese Mails.

Before 1915 a letter was as safe in the Chinese mails as it was anywhere in the world, and only the older resident who knows China can appreciate what it means to have had nearly seven hundred million pieces of mail matter carried by the Chinese post that year against one-sixth that amount eight years before. This year postal employes are stealing letters for the stamps and throwing the contents into the waste-basket. I have heard complaints from a dozen people that the mail service is not only slower than it was in 1915, but is no longer safe.—Maynard Owen Williams in The Christian Herald.

MRS. GREEN GAINS TWENTY POUNDS

Was Almost Nervous Wreck When She Began Taking Tanlac, She Says

I have actually gained twenty pounds by taking Tanlac and my friends and neighbours seem amazed at the wonderful change in my condition," was the remarkable statement made by Mrs. William Green of 141 Hunter street Hamilton, recently. Mrs. Green has lived in Hamilton and vicinity all her life and has a wide circle of friends who rejoice with her over the return of her health.

I had suffered from stomach trouble until I was almost a nervous wreck," continued Mrs. Green. For two solid years I was unable to do one thing about the house and my stomach became so upset that I couldn't retain the medicine prescribed for me. For four months, about the only thing I could eat was milk and eggs. I was so weak I could hardly walk from one chair to another and for months I don't suppose I slept more than two hours a night. I spent eleven months under two specialists, who finally said they could do me no good. My case seemed to be hopeless, an operation failed to help me and I was told that nothing more could be done for me.

Of course I was discouraged, despondent and almost hopeless, and now it seems hard for me to believe myself what a wonderful change has come over me since I began taking Tanlac. If anyone could feel like like a new person I do and when I told one of the physicians who treated me what I was taking he said it certainly had done me a lot of good and advised me to keep it up. I have a splendid appetite now and nothing I eat gives me any trouble. My nerves are in good shape, and I can sleep all night and on until nine o'clock in the morning. I can do almost everything there is to do about the house now, all my despondent feelings are gone and everything seems so different. I am on my fourth bottle of Tanlac and can heartily recommend it to everybody."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by Warne Drug Co. Ltd.: in Havelock by A. C. Denike.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

Reconstructed Belgian Army is Stronger Than Ever Before.

How different conditions are today on this western front, especially on that part occupied by the British, from what was the case one year ago can best be learned from a summary of what is now taking place.

A year ago an advance on the Somme began which was a carefully planned and well executed campaign; it was the greatest attempt that Britain had ever made under arms; for the number of men under arms, the number of men and guns taken, and the tremendous artillery preparation beforehand were on a scale never before dreamed of. Hopes were high, and, while results were not all that could be expected, the move was a splendid training for field work, and converted the English amateur soldiers into veterans who, during this present year, have shown themselves the superiors of the pick of the German troops.

To-day the fighting front extends from the North Sea to St. Quentin, and British guns, outnumbering the German in the proportion of three to one, are throwing high explosives on nearly every mile of the 110-mile stretch. The supply of munitions is almost inexhaustible, and it has been possible to help out Italy and Russia with guns and shell.

Last year the Germans could mass sufficient forces on the western front to hold the British advance; to-day they are being slowly but surely driven back after most desperate efforts to avert the danger. The German man power is no longer what it was and this is shown each day in increasing signs. Possibly the number of men in the field is as great as ever, but the spirit of the troops is no longer the same. Victory seems by no means as certain for them, and this change of view is not so much due to hunger and want as to the successive checks to German arms and the continued pressure and increasing numbers of their opponents.

One great surprise—and a fact not generally known—is that the Belgian army has been entirely reorganized and is to-day larger in numbers, better equipped and more determined in spirit than ever before. It should be remembered that this army in 1914, not 100,000 strong, met the Germans, who had three times the numbers, and held in check for thirteen days the great invasion that had been under preparation for years, with the expectation that it would be irresistible. To-day the army occupies a front of twenty-two miles with several divisions of infantry, cavalry, and artillery.

LEARN TO SAVE MONEY.

Banking Merely a Dollar a Week Is a Good Investment.

"It is mighty hard," said an unfortunate workingman some time ago to the writer, "to save up a thousand dollars by laying aside a dollar or two a week and then to take it out of the savings bank and lose it to a get rich quick swindler, as I have just done."

The poor fellow could work and save, but he had not had even a kindergarten education in finance, else his story would have been different. He had never given a thought to interest and so was absolutely ignorant of growth through compound interest and, of course, had never heard of that wonderful process of accumulation known as "progressive compound interest."

One dollar deposited in a savings bank that pays 4 per cent will amount to $2.19 in twenty years. This is simple compound interest. Now, if you deposit $1 every year for twenty years, or $20 in all, the sum to your credit will have grown to $30.97.

Any wage earner can put by $1 a week. That money deposited in a savings bank for twenty years will have increased to $1,612. A deposit of $5 a week will have grown to $8,000, and this at 4 per cent will be $320 a year. There is no secret, no mystery, about this. It is as clear as the cloudless sun, and the method is just as clean and honest

HOW THINGS DO CHANGE!

Modern Improvements In the Lifetime of One Observer.

In the American Magazine Irvin S. Cobb has an article entitled "Looking Both Ways From Forty," in which he says:

"I've seen the Kansas cyclone find a worthy successor in Billy Sunday. I was present on the spot, so to speak, when the audible celluloid cuff, E. P. Roe, the pug dog, the congress gaiter, the hammer gun, the safety bicycle, the mustache cup, parchesi, the catcher who took 'em off the bat with his bare hands, the peach kernel watch charm, the pousse cafe, the operation for dehorning the human appendix and the Dowie movement gave way, inch by inch, to the spitball, the automatic ejector, the rest cure, the cold storage egg, Henry Ford, the cabaret, Orville and Wilbur Wright, eat-and-grow-thin, pay-and-grow-thinner, rural free delivery, the imported Scotch niblick, Elinor Glyn, midding meat at 42 cents a pound and stewed prunes at 4 bits a portion in any first class restaurant.

"And if I have luck I shall no doubt be an eyewitness to the fading away of these things into the background of the past and the oncoming of yet more timely evidences of the onward and upward march of progress, following along, one behind the other, in a mighty procession."

Warding Off Old Age.

A famous French general when asked how it was that he had such an erect carriage replied that it was because he bent over and touched the floor with his fingers thirty times every day. If he had acquired rigidity of the spine so that he could not do that he would have had with it weak abdominal muscles, which result in portal congestion. This portal congestion interferes with stomach digestion and with the action of the liver. The poison destroying power of the liver is lessened, autointoxication results, and arteriosclerosis and old age come on at a much earlier day. But by keeping the spine flexible and the abdominal muscles strong and taut the portal circulation is kept free and old age is held off.

Kid Gloves and Paper Collars.

The Twelfth corps of the Army of the Potomac was named "kid gloves and paper collars" by the Fourteenth corps of the Western army, owing to the West Point discipline of the Twelfth corps, which was the natural result of having been commanded first by Mansfield and then by Slocum, with as subordinate commanders such men as Williams, Hamilton, Gordon, Ruger, Andrews, Hawley and others. —Magazine of American History.

Mats For Potted Plants.

Leftover pieces of oilcloth or linoleum can be cut any shape or size and by being painted or varnished make excellent mats for potted plants and flowers. They can be painted any desired color and are easily cleaned by wiping with a damp cloth. These mats prevent the porch or stand from being scratched or stained by the pots.

Absinth.

Absinth, the most harmful and even fatal intoxicant, is made from a blue-green oil that is obtained from artemisia absinthium, a member of the wormwood family. Several less harmful species of artemisia grow throughout California.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Colour, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Suphur Compound no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A Little Commonwealth.

In Dorsetshire, England, there has been established a "Republic" called the "Little Commonwealth," which has its own coinage and which is used as a reformatory for youngsters from two years of age upward. The experiment has proved a success. The children sent down there from metropolitan police courts to reform earned eight to nine cents an hour, out of which they paid $2.75 a week for board and lodgings. The republic has been recognized by the home office as a certified reformatory.

Algoma and an Author

Sault Ste. Marie.

IF an author can be said to be the product of any particular district—and why not, just as much as a variety of flower, or fruit, or grain?—Alan Sullivan, the distinguished Canadian poet and novelist, should be most properly identified with Algoma, that curiously shaped county of Ontario, which stretches from the cities and settlements of the shores of Lake Huron and Lake Superior, up through the 2,900 square miles of the Mississauga Forest Reserve, to the great furtrading territories three hundred and sixty miles north, where it is bounded by the Albany River, the chief tributary of James Bay. The southern shores of this county were colonized some thirty years ago at the instance of C. P. R. agents, by hardy pioneers from the older counties of Kincardine and Bruce, but the city of Sault Ste. Marie has its roots in the remoter past, as it was a trading post for the voyageurs, who travelled for the furtraders of Montreal into the far West. Alan Sullivan, whose father was Bishop of the Algoma Diocese, was at one time engineer of the work of construction and ballasting the Algoma branch of the C. P. R. between Sudbury and the Sault Ste. Marie, and uses the local color in several of his short stories. "It was fascinating," he says, "in those days to watch the psychological effect of the arrival of the track, or even of the survey party on the settlers. They brightened up, and looked at their farms with new eyes. They were in touch with the world that heretofore had seemed so distant." The bush lives, the miners, the hunters, the mail carriers, the Indian agents, and the trappers have provided rich material for Alan Sullivan's stories, some of the best of which have been collected in the volume called "The Passing of Owl-I-But." More recently he has enlarged his field, and in his latest volume "The Inner Door," he takes for atmosphere the labor movement in a small industrial town. But the town is still in Ontario, a fact that makes it all the more interesting to the Canadian reader, who takes an interest in the now rapid growth of a distinctive Canadian literature.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

GERMAN WORKS IN BELGIUM ATTACKED

Tons Of Bombs Are Dropped By The British

HUNS PLANNING TO FLOOD GROUND BEYOND THE RIDGE

Realize That They Cannot Hold Passendaele Heights Much Longer If British Continue Their Push---British Naval Flyers Drop Tons of Dynamite on German Works at Bruges and Elsewhere in Belgium---Violent Artillery Fighting on French Front.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(By William Philip Simms.)
(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, October 17.—While Haig's guns and men break the German hold on Passchendaele Ridge, the Germans are striving desperately to throw against the ever-encroaching advance the barrier which the Belgians successfully invoked to stop the Teutonic hordes of 1914. The enemy is working night and day rushing to completion a dam above Dieuport by which they hope to flood the ground beyond Passchendaele Ridge. The very desperation with which they are carrying out the plan coupled with the extreme "jumpiness" which the Boche shows every hour of the day is due to the knowledge that the German troops cannot hold Passchendaele Ridge much longer if the British continue their push. Prisoned German officers examined to-day admit as much. One said, however, that plans had been laid so that if the Germans were forced to relinquish the high ground they would retreat five miles further to prepared positions. One evidence of how the enemy is rattled comes in the failure of his favourite mode of defence—counter attacks. They have been few and far between, and have been absurdly weak.

One of the many proofs that German artillery is disorganized was furnished on one sector, a full report of which was received to-day. There a German bombardment which lasted thirty-six hours did not cost the British a single casualty. I personally saw this bombardment. At least 40,000 shells must have been fired at a cost of $1,250,000—not including the wear and tear on German guns. This latter item as despatches have heretofore detailed, is not inconsiderable with Germany short of metal as she is now. By a strange twist of fate the British gas is now working havoc with the enemy throughout all this "Ypres sector"—exactly the same portion of the great western battle front where the Germans first used this devilish contrivance of war.

Driving A Wedge With Typhoon Of Fire Into German Lines

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, October 17.—With a veritable typhoon of fire the Allies are driving a wedge into the German line in Flanders. Sooner or later this wedge may split the Teuton line and permit of a flanking move instead of the unceasing frontal attacks which up to recent date have meant only throwing men into a maelstrom of slaughter without real tactical advantage.

This significant fact developed to-day in Secretary of War Baker's weekly war summary. The "typhoon fire" raged on the Germans is causing them real concern; in fact such deep worry that he has been forced to amend his tactical dispositions in an effort to meet the shock of the shells rained upon his lines. "The front has been so extended with the French ailing that the Flanders is practically revolutionary. "It is no longer to be considered a salient," says the summary, "but an ever extending wedge progressively driven into the German line."

From a military standpoint this is one of the most significant developments of the war, insomuch as it marks a departure from the out and out frontal attack which the tacticians have said is little more than continuous murder. With the wedge driven through the whole West front fighting would take on a changed character with a chance for strategy instead of shells and men as the predominant and determinant factor. The French are highly praised for their part along with the British.

FRENCH ARE BEING REMOVED

NEW YORK, October 17.—The Evening World to-day publishes a story from Amsterdam that the Germans are removing the French, particularly the women, from Lille, Roubaux, Tourcoing, Croix and the surrounding places, to work for them. Only women without children and young girls are now being selected.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, October 17.—The Norwegian steamer Thomas, 7,402 tons, has been sunk in the Mediterranean, according to an announcement by the Norwegian Foreign Office received here to-day. All members of the crew are missing.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, October 17. — The Berlin correspondent of the Fremdenblatt of Hamburg discerns indications that forces actually are at work in support of Chancellor Michaelis with the thought of a military dictatorship and having the Chancellor continue in office in defiance of the Reichstag, supporting himself by military backing.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, October 17.—German Socialist newspapers says the Socialists have decided to vote against the new war credit of ten billion marks which is to be submitted to the Reichstag in December, unless Chancellor Michaelis resigns.

Except for the Independent Socialists, represented in the Reichstag by about twenty deputies who broke away from the party last year, Socialists have supported the German Government through the war and voted for the war credits. The defection of the entire Socialist body in the Reichstag would represent a serious division inasmuch as the Social Democrats and the Independent Socialists combined have 108 seats, a greater number than any other party.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Bulletin), October 17.—Violent artillery fighting is in progress on the Verdun front east of the Meuse, the War Office reports. A German attack in this sector near Chaume Wood, and other thrusts near Juvincourt on the Aisne front, and in the vicinity of Mont Carnillet in the Champagne were repulsed.

DRIVER A. LEACH OF PETERBORO' IS BURIED IN TORONTO

Well Known Local Member of 33rd Battery Invalided Home From Overseas Service, Passed Away at Gravenhurst Sanitarium

A MILITARY FUNERAL

The news of the death of Driver Alfred Leach, a Peterborough member of the 33rd Battery at Gravenhurst Sanitarium, will be received with deep regret by his large circle of friends. Driver Leach, familiarly known as "Buster" to hundreds of Peterborough citizens, had been a resident of this city for a long period before he enlisted for overseas service. He was a member of the Midnight Sons Club, an ardent hockey and baseball fan, and a bright, cheerful youngster, whose infectious smile won him many friends. It was known that his condition was serious, but citizens generally will be shocked to learn of his death. The Toronto Star says:

The funeral of Driver Alfred Leach, of the 33rd Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, took place this afternoon at two p.m. from A. W. Miles' Funeral Chapel, 396 College street, under military escort.

Driver Leach enlisted with the 33rd Battery, C. F. A., in Peterborough on August 9th, 1915, and was invalided home in May, 1916, suffering from tuberculosis. After prolonged illness he died on Friday last while undergoing treatment at Gravenhurst Sanitarium. He was born in Lancaster, England, twenty-five years ago, but had resided in Canada since a boy of nine years. Besides his wife he leaves a little baby girl. Interment was made in the Veterans' Plot, in Prospect Cemetery. A detachment from the Royal Canadian Dragoons acted as escort and also made up the firing party.

TOTAL RESULTS SO FAR.

Number examined	643
Fit for trenches	364
Fit for Non-Combatant Service Overseas	38
Fit for duty in Canada	55
Unfit for any service	186

Fifty-two candidates were examined yesterday by the local Medical Board at the Armouries, six less than on Monday. The percentage of Class A was lower than the average, exactly fifty per cent. of the applicants being considered fit for the trenches. The number of total rejections was about the highest reached in one day since the Board commenced its operations. No fewer than twenty-one being pronounced unfit for any military duty. This is partially accounted for by the fact that a number of those examined were men who had previously been discharged from the service.

There were nineteen examined in the morning, nine being marked Category A, one for non-combatant duty overseas, one for home service and eight rejected.

In the afternoon the eighteen examined yielded ten front-line men, one for Category B, one for service in Canada, and six unfit for any service. Fewer than fifty per cent. of those examined at night reached the A category, only seven out of fifteen being found fit for the trenches. A similar number was rejected outright and one man was placed in B category.

Nearly all the candidates this morning were classed as farmers. There were twenty-one examined, and less than fifty per cent. were placed in A category, ten being considered fit for the trenches. There were eight rejected outright. There is still no sign of any falling off in the number of men presenting themselves for examination. Pte. J. H. Wilson, formerly of the 2nd Battalion is acting as Orderly for the Medical Board to-day. He was wounded at Ypres two years ago.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin is in search of a position for a returned soldier. The man in question was severely wounded in the abdomen and shell shocked. He will be unable to do heavy work, but professes a willingness to do the best he can. He is a married man and claims to have been offered a position at ten dollars a week. This, he asserted, is too small to keep himself and a wife. His requests for a job have been turned down in a number of places.

TORONTO, Oct. 16.—The Provincial organization of the Great War Veterans' Association have been promised a grant of $50,000 by Hon. T. W. McGarry, acting on behalf of the Provincial Government. The G. W. V. A. must organize twenty-one additional branches throughout the Province before the new year.

According to Secretary Turley the money will be proportionally distributed among the different Provincial branches and will be payable quarterly.

The members of the Provincial Executive of the G.W.V.A. who waited on Mr. McGarry were President C. E. Jeakins, of Brantford, First Vice-President K. C. MacPherson of Ottawa; Treasurer D. D. Shaw, of Toronto; Secretary W. E. Turley of Toronto, and Messrs. J. J. Shanahan of Toronto; J. Zivian of Ottawa, R. Dawson of Hamilton, and Chas. S. Norris of Stratford.

Brantford's splendid new home for the Great War Veterans' Association will be formally opened by the Duke of Devonshire on Oct. 24th.

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR MR. J. I. ALLEN

Superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Company Registers Another Milestone

Mr. John I. Allen, Superintendent of the Prudential Insurance Co., was given a surprise party at his home, on Weller street, last night. Mr. Allen being out of town, arrived home about 8.30, finding the home in darkness. Turning on the lights he found the men of the Peterborough staff ready to greet him. Cards were played. Mr. Fallon and Mr. Young being the lucky winners, after which a substantial luncheon was served, the table being decorated in red and white. A huge birthday cake was lighted which added to the decorations. After luncheon speeches were made by each member of the staff, and solos were given by Mr. Roy. At an early hour the men departed, wishing Mr. Allen many happy returns of the day, and thanking Mrs. Allen for her kindness. The surprise was arranged for by Mrs. Allen.

DONALD ROBERTSON IS FIRST MAN TO REPORT

Only One Man in Peterboro' So Far Has Signified His Willingness to Serve Under Military Service Act—Thirty-eight Have Applied For Exemptions.

CLAIM ILL HEALTH

Donald Robertson, aged twenty, of 588 Bonacord street, has the honour to be the first man in the Peterborough district to report for military service in answer to the Royal proclamation. Mr. Robertson walked into the post office last night and informed Postmaster Edgar that he wished to report for service under the Act. He is not only the first to report, but so far is the only one to do so. His medical history sheet shows that he has been placed in C category—fit for service in Canada.

Up to this morning there have been only thirty-nine registrations at the local post office, and of this number exactly thirty-eight filled out exemption blanks.

The majority of the men who have claimed exemption so far have been Class A men, and singularly enough the greater part of them have claimed exemption on the ground of ill health or infirmity. It is a queer claim to make after the men have been examined by the Medical Board and placed in A category, but nevertheless Postmaster Edgar reports that that particular ground for exemption is the favourite so far with the men who have applied for blanks. Just what chance they hope to have before a tribunal after being pronounced fit by a board of three doctors is by no means certain.

Although the post office was open last night for the benefit of Class One eligibles, there was no rush for papers. Only about twenty-five men registered, twenty-four of them claimed exemption, and the squad was handled within an hour. The post office will be open to-night and to-morrow night at 7.30 o'clock.

Not Realized Yet.

Judging by the small number that have so far registered it is evident that the men of Class One under the Military Service Act do not yet realize that by law now rests upon them. By the issue of the proclamation last Saturday, all Class One men are soldiers, absent on leave without pay and subject to military law. Every man in Class One under the Act, that is all single men and widowers without children must on or before Nov. 10th, 1917, either:

(1) Apply at the post office for a form upon which he will report for service, and give the said form to the Postmaster or his deputy, who will forward it to the Registrar; or

(2) Apply to the post office for a form, upon which he will make application for exemption from military service, the reason for such application being indicated by the letter "X" being placed beside one or more of the sentences which set out the causes for which application for exemption can be made ,and give the said form to the Postmaster or his deputy; or

(3) Apply in person to any exemption tribunal on November 8, 9, or 10, 1917, and make application for exemption to such tribunal.

Any person who is ill, or who cannot attend at the post office for the purpose of filling in a form, may have a form filled in by a near relative, or such person's employer.

After November 10, 1917, no report for service will be accepted, and the person thus tardy will be liable to be considered as a deserter, for which the penalty is five years' imprisonment, without escaping service in the army.

After November 10, 1917, no application for exemption will be received, and the person thus tardy will forfeit whatever cause, however excellent, he may have for being exempted from service in the army.

It is strongly advised that all exemption claims be sent through the post office, and not by personal application. Again, it is emphasized that November 10, 1917, is the last day.

COURSE FOR B AND C MEN IS A SIMPLE ONE

All That Men in These Categories Have to Do is to Claim Exemption on Physical Grounds, as Present Call Will Only Be For Grade A Men

POINT IS CLEARED UP

One question of marked interest to B and C men under the Military Service Act has been cleared up, and the announcement that there are to be future sittings of the tribunals for their sake, if their classes are ever called out, should induce them to respond at the post-offices a little more promptly. In view of the procedure of exemption hearings, announced by the Chief Registrar, the wisest step for all men to take is to get their medical exemption over before they send in their application for service or claim for exemption. If a man goes up before the medical board, and finds that he is in either B or C grade, all he needs to do is to present himself at the post-office, ask for an exemption form, attach his medical history sheet to the exemption application, put a cross opposite the line to show that he is appealing for exemption on physical grounds, and also opposite any other grounds upon which he might wish to claim exemption later, and leave the forms with the postmaster to be forwarded to the Registrar. If he does this, he will not be required to appear before the present sittings of the tribunals, as the search now is for Grade A men only. He is also assured that if either B or C grade is called out at some later date, there will be resumed sittings of the tribunals before which he may appear then to claim exemption on business or personal grounds. From this ruling it becomes apparent that B and C men can not only save themselves the trouble of appearing before a tribunal at the present time, but can also ease off the work of the tribunals.

All men wishing to claim exemption, no matter what their physical condition, who do not get their medical examination over before November 8, will be obliged to appear before the tribunal, even though they might come in "B" or "C" grade. Men coming in this class will have their personal grounds for exemption heard first, and if these fall down, they will then be sent by the tribunal to a medical board to determine their physical status. Another point of considerable interest to the youths of the land has been ruled upon, and it is to the effect that only those who were twenty years or age or older on October 13, the date of the proclamation, will come in Class One. Boys whose twentieth birthday falls after the 13th may consider themselves free from compulsory service until some change is made by the military authorities.

NEWSBOYS' CONTEST AT THE EXAMINER

All the Boys Are Working Hard Only Ten Days More.

The boys who are working in the Examiner Newsboys' contest all seem to be making the best of their opportunities. The boy who won the last week's weekly prize, was Jimmy Corkery, again with six new customers to his credit. The boy who wants to win the first prize of $25.00 will have to hustle for the next ten days.

It will be all over a week from Saturday. Get all the new customers you can between now and then, and you will be well paid for your trouble.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

Laugh and the world laughs with you." It's an old adage and true, but it is hard I know for a fat man to laugh at his troubles in getting his clothes to fit.

"Come to me" for your clothes, shirts, collars, etc., as I make it a point to carry something different in these lines for you. Again I say: "Come to me."

SEA POWER.

Sea power will be the winning factor in this was, as it was in the time of the Napoleonic wars, and in the Civil War of the last mid-century. Sea pawer is cornering Germany in the matter of food supply, and her plan to starve out England may recoil on herself, for her submarine frightfulness has raised up new enemies to herself, and new allies for the Allies, and inspired universal naval activity. The entrance of the United States into the war has greatly strengthened the sea power of the allies, and there are indications of close and effective coordination between Britain and the United States in this regard. More than that, Japan is likely to be an important naval factor in, and help to, shipping. It is stated that the United States will meet the request of Japan for shipbuilding steel, on condition that the latter will put twelve or more of her largest ships into the trans-Atlantic trade. Of course this arrangement is subject to an adequate supply of steel to the allies of the United States now in the thick of the fight.

A naval mutiny has been added to the products bearing the "made in Germany" label.

PREMATURE OPTIMISM.

Hon. Mr. Doherty, Minister of Justice in the Union Government, speaking at Huntingdon, Quebec, struck a high note of optimism. He was "glad to feel," he said, 'that the day of parties was gone." This seems to be somewhat rhapsodic optimism from a judical mind like that of the Minister of Justice. It is probable that he is mistaken. Democratic government and the party system very largely go together. People that govern themselves do not always see eye to eye. A national crisis, a national necessity may bring an apparent subordination of party manifestation, but it does not entirely destroy the party feeling. A non-party political "love-feast" is an utopian thing. Even with the present union government, large as its following may be, there is in the country a big representation of both the old time political parties, each attached to certain formulae of principles, of which they can not divest themselves, and though subdued for the moment and the occasion, the members of the union government themselves have still at heart their party convictions. Even if it were desirable, the millenial condition of patriotism without party, is not yet at hand. The union government will need careful steering to avoid the rocks of party feeling that crop up in the current of its administrative activities.

In Britain the government permits no hoarding of food supplies. Cold storage methods get the cold shoulder.

MORE COLD STORAGE.

In spite of the attention called to the cold storage situation by W. F. O'Connor, "commissioner on the cost of living," there has been a large increase of the food products locked away from reach of the consumer. As compared with October 1st, 1916, the report for the present October shows a ery notable increase in the quantities held in cold storage throughout the country. For instance there are 7 million more eggs, 4 million more pounds of butter, 4 million pounds more of beef, nearly 5 million pounds more of pork, 600,000 more pounds of bacon and ham, 300,000 pounds more of mutton and lamb, and more than three million pounds more fish in cold storage on Oct. 1st, 1917, than on Oct 1st, 1916. The figures of cold storage for this October come from 140 cold storage plants, 99 per cent of the total in Canada.

The excuse for witholding immense quantities of food from consumption was that it was necessary in order to be able to meet export demands. There was nearly a million pounds fewer of butter exported in September, 1917, than in the September of the previous year, and an increase in the exports of bacon and ham of three millions, showing in the one case that there was an immense amount of butter held in storage beyond the demands for export and ample storage of ham and bacon to meet export demands and leave a large surplus.

It may be crude and superficial reasoning, but it would seem that the figures presented show that there is an inordinate amount of food locked up from the public, and that this condition creates a scarcity that largely accounts for the high price of food articles. If this is so there is probability of higher prices, for the cold storage stock is increasing; about 15 million pounds more stored away at this moment than there was a year ago. Besides, the agents of these cold storage plants are scouring the country and picking up all the butter, eggs, and even milk, they can get within their grasp. With decreasing export demands, with rising food prices, there are still bigger stocks accumulating in cold storage where the people cannot get their hands on them.

That naturally explains the high prices he people have to pay for the quantities that escape the drag net of the cold storage agents.

The laymen, the ordinary citizen, who has to pay through the nose for what he and his family eat, feels discontented and disappointed with the apparent failure of the Food Controller to control. If cold storage, as it is operated, is an evil, it is growing worse in spite of him.

The finance committee of the Guelph City Council will recommend a grant of $3,000 to the Red Cross fund.

MORE ECONOMY AND MORE ACTION DEMANDED.

Now we are told that there is need for economy of fuel. It won't be very hard for some of us to economize any more than we are compelled to, by having little or no fuel of any kind. Apart from industrial uses, economy of fuel is one of the most dangerous forms of economy. In homes there has to be a certain degree of heat to be consistent with health. It is better to pay coal bills than doctor's bills, which we shall have to do if our homes are inadequately heated. We can, at a pinch, get along on "short commons" in the matter of food, but we cannot get along without a reasonable degree of heat. If things don't improve, many of us will have to confine our occupancy of our homes to one room, for whose heating enough fuel may be got; or it may be that householders will have to club and two or three families occupy one house.

As to the general supply, the increased use of coal due to war conditions, in both Canaad and the United States, creates a coal scarcity. Officials of the United States, the chief source of coal supply, assure Canada of an adequate supply of coal for both domestic and industrial purposes, an earnest of which is found in the removal of the embargo on the shipment of United States coal to Canada. Still there is scarcity of coal. Our local dealers are scurrying to the United States to procure coal for their customers and with not the greatest success. The supply of wood fuel is greatly limited, and with this the price is almost prohibitory. Why is it that wool fuel is so scarce. There is still a somewhat "wooden" country and there should be some means of bridging the gap between the woods and the households in Peterborough.

The authorities that counsel economy in fuel should not stop at that. It is something we cannot greatly economize in consistently, with health and comfort. Economy of the use of air in breathing might almost as well be enjoined. What the authorities should do, should be something that will help out the poor and those of limited means. At a social service meeting in Toronto it was pointed out that though an unusually large amount of coal was received in the city this year it had been largely monopolized by persons who had the means and space for storing it; and the poor were at further disadantage—if by chance they could get coal in small quantities at $9.50 or $105 per ton its delivery brought up the price to $15 or $16 per ton—it cost nearly as much to deliver a hundred pounds as a thousand pounds. Our own city coal bins may help.

Would it not be possible for the authorities to do something more than talk. Food Controller Hanna says he canot fix the price of potatoes, but the "spread" between the prices, between the price paid the producer and the price paid by the consumer will be fixed. A decree has been issued to limit the profits of coal dealers to 50 cents per ton, but what is most wanted is coal that can be got at any price, and a chance for the citizen of moderate means. It is hoped that the assurance of Mr. Magrath, brought by yesterday's despatch, that there will be an adequate supply of coal by November 15th, is not too good to be true. We must, then, also have some assurance that the railways are prepared to move coal. There is an opportunity for the authorities to do something more than urge economy of fuel.

It won't be hard to save food and save money for the Victory loan, when food is so high that we can't afford to buy it.

49 Lonesome Kentucky Girls Seek Husbands

OMAHA, Neb.—(Special.) — Those forty-nine Kentucky girls who asked the Rev. Charles W. Savidge of Omaha to secure husbands for them somewhere in the west can get mates in almost every town west of the Mississippi river if the letters rolling in on the preacher give the real status of the matrimonial market in the transmississippi country.

Three days after the Rev. Dr. Savidge sent out his calls for husbands 271 men, willing and anxious to become beendicts, had replied—and each one wanted one of the forty-nine. Now he is snowed under with letters. His desk is piled high with them; the table in his study won't take another one; his waste paper basket is full, and there's a pile two feet high over in the corner. And still they come.

Three months ago Dr. Savidge received a letter from a school teacher in Dry Ridge, Ky., asking him to find her a husband. The same day an interne in a hospital in Yankton, S.D., wrote him and asked for a wife. The preacher sent each the other's letter. A month ago they came through Omaha, married— and they handed the preacher a handsome wedding fee, although he had not performed the ceremony.

Letters, Swamp Pastor.

The story got into the newspapers. It got into the Kentucky papers. And Kentucky girls to the number of just forty-nine immediately fired letters at Dr. Savidge asking him to find husbands for them.

Then the deluge started. Letters came from all parts of the country, but especially from Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, South Dakota, Montana, Colorado, and some of the other western states.

"You'd think every fellow west of the Mississipi had just been waiting for a chance to get a Kentucky girl for a wife," Dr. Savidge said. "Of course, I don't blame them. I just tell them to go on and get one of them. But I don't believe there are enough women in Kentucky to go round. I know there are not enough in this rush of mail continues a few days longer."

Twenty-two Want This Widow.

Among the letters from Kentucky girls was one from a widow living in Ashland. She said she owned her own home, could cook like a dining car chef, and was called rather good looking.

Twenty-two of those 271 would-be benedicts asked the Rev. Dr. Savidge for her name and address. The charms of the widow who could cook like a dining car chef, had a home of her own, and was called good looking—and was looking for a husband—simply could not be resisted. Men from ten different states entered the lists for her.

Then there was a nice girl from Paducah, Ky. She told of her qualifications and ended a modest letter, "I have a comfortable income, but I am lonely."

Nineteen men wanted to help drive away that lonely feeling. Not a single one of the nineteen mentioned that comfortable income, however.

A noncommissioned officer at the Fort Leavenworth, Kas., military school, wants to bring the whole forty-nine to army life. "Kindly send me full particulars concerning the forty-nine Kentucky girls of matrimonial nature. There are forty-eight other men in our company who are desirous of becoming benedicts," he wrote.

Must Have Long Red Hair.

Here's a letter from a Bartlesville, Okla., travelling man:

"I want one of those good looking girls from Kentucky I read about. I am a bachelor—but not one of those with a grouch. I'm jolly and good natured. I have two hobbies, and I want a girl that will fill the bill. First, she must be neat and a musician. Second—don't laugh—she must have lots of long red hair."

A HINT TO CITY BUYERS

It would be a great convenience to merchants and to the customers themselves, if the residents of the city would think ahead a little and avoid doing any ordering of goods for Saturday delivery, except in case of absolute necessity.

Saturdays the city is filled with country customers, and city people should, as far as possible, leave the field to them. If city people give or 'phone orders for Saturday delivery they will find merchants busy with country customers, and delivery of town orders becomes difficult, especially when scarcity of help reduces delivery staffs. Nearly all city customers, by a little thought can foresee their needs and order what they want before Saturday. By so doing they will get better service and delivery of orders, and do a great favour to the merchants. It seems to be only thoughtlessness that makes many people postpone orders till Saturday. This is war time and we should all work together for each other's good.

CAPT. BURNHAM HAS BROUGHT FAME TO PETERBORO'

Maintains His Reputation For Originality Says the Ottawa Citizen

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—The "Citizen" (Independent) says editorially this morning:

Peterborough Independents and supporters of the Union Government are considering the possibility of electing a fusion candidate. Mr. J. H. Burnham's years of faithful service as member of parliament for Peterborough should win generous support for him, from both parties. Some members come to Ottawa, and go again, without the rest of the country ever being any the wiser of their coming and going. It is not so, however, with Mr. Burnham. A session is rarely allowed to pass without Burnham of Peterborough taking an independent stand or interposing in a debate from a new angle of advance, and thus Mr. Burnham's reputation for originality is maintained and new fame is brought to Peterborough.

Christmas Shower Was A Success

Soldiers Overseas Will Be Gainers By Gathering at St. Luke's Rectory

The objective of the Christmas shower held yesterday afternoon and evening at St. Luke's Rectory, was the filling up of 10 stocking for Canadian wounded soldiers. The attendance, however, of an unusually large number of people and their generosity, resulted in the objective being passed, and will enable the filling of a considerably larger number. The proceeds and donations in money will pay for the postage overseas both of the stockings and contents. The stockings will be sent to England to the War Club, and whatever money remains over will be remitted to the Canadian Woman's Club to make further purchases of socks and comforts.

The Rectory was prettily decorated for the occasion in autumn leaves, Michaelmas daisies and a Red Cross banner.

During the evening a pleasant musical programme contributed to the general success, those taking part being Mr. Frank Whitehouse, Miss Kate Calcutt, Miss J. Calder and Miss E. Reid. Those who assisted in the tea room were Mrs. Zack Budnham, who poured tea, Miss Peck, coffee, and the Misses Calcutt, F. Burnham, Mrs. Mikels, Miss Leah Rogers, and Miss Ethel White.

PATRIOTIC FUND CAMPAIGN WILL BE DECIDED NEXT WEEK

The regular quarterly meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Patriotic Fund was, last night, adjourned, and will be held on an evening next week.

Those present discussed the general business to come before the meeting, and presented needs for carrying on the work for another year.

The outlook is that at least something over $100,000 will be required for the needs of the Fund from this city and district, and of which from $60,000 to $70,000 will have to be raised in the city. Next week's meeting will decide as to the campaign, which if agreed, will have to be put on in time to get it through before the elections.

Of course the old organization of teams, etc., will be available in a campiagn for funds and collections. It is expected that as the city from a financial point of view, has been prosperous, and work at excellent wages plenty, that a call to the wage earners will meet with a hearty response. The objects of the Patriotic Fund, now in its fourth year, are so well known, in its aid to the families of the men on service, that the Fund will take precedence of almost all other objects, unless it would be the Red Cross, or some other equally patriotic and essentially necessary work. Fuller details of the proposed campaign will be given to the public on the decision of the Committee.

RESTRICTION ON SALE OF SUGAR

Effort to Conserve the Available Supply

The restriction on the sale of canned goods has been raised and the grocers are again at liberty to sell canned products. A restriction has been placed on the sale of sugar, with the result that some of the Peterborough grocers are finding it difficult to secure more than two bag lots from the wholesale houses. This situation has been created for the purpose of preventing the hoarding of sugar until the supply becomes easier, which will not be until the first of the new year.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

White Sox "Bit" Is $4,000 Each

Giants Get $2,500 Each—"Jimmy" Smith and "Red" Murray Beneficiaries

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Although the 1917 World's Series players' melon is not the juciest that has ever been cut, nevertheless it will yield to each of the twenty-three eligible members of the Chicago White Sox the tidy sum of $3,988.55. The defeated Giants, twenty-four in all, will get $2,548.24 apiece.

The White Sox who divide the winners' spoils are Leibold, J. Collins, E. T. Collins, Jackson, Felsch, Gandil, Weaver, Risberg, Schalk, Lynn, Cicotte, Faber, Williams, Russell, Danforth, Benz, Wolfgang, Scott, Jenkins, Jordan, Hashbrook and Murphy.

The Giants who share the losers' end are Burns, Herzog, Kauff, Zimmerman, Fletcher, Robertson, Thorpe, Holke, McCarty, Rariden, Schupp, Sallee, Perritt, Benton, Tesreau, Anderson, Demaree, Gibson, Onslow, Smith, Lobert, Baird, Wilhoit and Murray.

The players' share of the gate receipts of the first four games of the series was $152,894.48, of which the White Sox divided 60 per cent., or $91,736.69, while the Giants split 40 per cent., or $61,157.79. The total receipts of the series amounted to $425,878.

Under the rules of the National Commission the Commission receives 10 per cent. of the gross receipts. This amounted to $42,587.80. Of the receipts of the first four games, aside from the National Commission 10 per cent., the players got 60 per cent., to be divided on a 60-40 split, and the rival clubs 40 per cent., to be divided evenly. Of the last two games the clubs received 90 per cent. of the total receipts, so that the net share of each management is $115,210.81.

The waist line has not quite settled what its correct position will be for the coming season, whether high or with an elongated effect.

Ontario Curlers Are Prepared For Winter

Mr. R. M. Waddell represented the Peterboro Curling Club at the annual meeting of the Ontario Curling Association yesterday.

The Tankard games in this district will be played at Lindsay, with Mr. J. D. Flavelle as umpire. The group includes the Bobcaygeon, Cannington, Fenelon Falls, Lindsay, Norwood and Peterboro clubs.

The District Cup will be played for in Peterboro by the following group: Bobcaygeon, Cannington, Fenelon Falls, Keene, Lakefield, Lindsay, Norwood and Peterboro with Mr. Waddell as umpire.

SOME NEW REGULATIONS.

In response to an application from the ladies' branch an amendment was made to the bylaws so that ladies' clubs whose male members are not affiliated with the Ontario Curling Association, may nevertheless be taken into membership. The condition indicated in the application prevails in some parts of the eastern jurisdiction of the O.C.A.

On motion of Mr. T. M. Asselstine, seconded by Mr. W. A. Boys, it was provided in the Tankard regulations, that when only three clubs attend for play in the primary competition of a group, the draw shall not be drawn on the Bagnall-Wyld system but each shall be required to play each of the others, the order of play being determined by a draw.

The auditors' report showed a credit balance of $276.62, and a donation of $100 was made to the Red Cross fund.

EKO CLUB DEFEATED THE WEST ENDS

Last night, in a five-pin League match, at the Water Street Alleys, the Eko Club took three straights from the West Ends. The Eko's best spasm was in the second game, when they rolled a total of 791. Jackson, for the Eko Club, had high three games, with a 526 total, and also a 260 count in the second game. Thompson was high man for the West Ends, with 436 for three games.

The scores were as follows:

West Ends—

FABER'S PITCHING SELDOM EQUALLED

Only Five Others Have Won Three Games in one World's Series.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Urban Faber, pitching hero of the 1917 series, well deserves the tributes that go with winning three games in one series, and takes his place among a select few who have done this same thing. Bill Dineen of Boston, formerly of Toronto, won three against Pittsburg in 1903; Phillippi of Pittsburg won three from Boston in the same series; Mathewson took three from the Athletics, and all shutouts, in 1905; Adams of Pittsburg took three from Detroit in 1909; Coombs won three games against the Cubs in 1910, and Joe Wood was victor in three over the Giants in 1912.

However, no other World's Series pitcher bore quite as heavy a pitching burden as did Phillippi of the Pirates back in 1903. Of the eight games played Phillippi started and finished five—the first, third, fourth, seventh and eighth. He won his first three, but was defeated in his last two efforts, the Pirates failing to score a run for him in the final game which decided the championship. Phillippi pitched forty-four innings in that series, a high mark for work by any pitcher in any World's Series.

MAGISTRATE DUMBLE'S WARNING TO SPEEDERS

Magistrate Dumble made the following statement to the press at the opening of police court this afternoon:

"I have observed many automobiles driven on the city's streets at 25 and 30 miles an hour, and my mind is made up that the first person convicted of driving at excessive speed will get a fine he will remember."

Mr. J. A. O'Brien—Does that include the Crown Attorney?

Mr. Hatton—And the City Solicitor?

Magistrate Dumble—They will get it worse than the man who doesn't know what twenty miles an hour is.

The limit allowed by by-law is 15 miles an hour.

ISN'T IT A GREAT COMFORT TO FEEL THAT YOUR CORSET TROUBLES HAVE BEEN SOLVED

NEARLY EVERY WOMAN HAS, AT SOME TIME OR Another, worn a dozen different kinds of Corsets. None seemed to do all that should be expected of a Corset. In our business we have experienced the same thing, but we honestly believe that our ——Corset problem has been solved. The ideal Corset is——

"KABO"

"The Live Model Corset"

Up to $5.00

BACK LACE. FRONT LACE.

An easy, graceful carriage is an expression of style. Contrary to general opinion, style doesn't start with outer-dress; it is based on the Corset and Brassiere. A good style foundation is—

"KABO"

THE "LIVE MODEL"

BRASSIERE

50c to $7.50

Never be fitted for a gown or suit without having a new Corset and good fitting Brassiere.

Kabo Brassieres start where the Corset leaves off, they support the back, give neat, well turned lines to the bust, smooth out the ridge at the top of the Corset.

We know you will find our new fall line of Kabo Brassieres attractive.

The big thing about KABO is the satisfaction it gives. Whenever you see the KABO trade mark on a Corset, Brassiere or Waist, you can stop looking there, you have found the best your money can buy. The very name is a guarantee; if you don't like the KABO you select at this store we shall be glad to exchange it for another, or your money will be given back to you if you want it.

KABO Corsets are front lace or back-lace; either is as good as the other—just as good as they can be made. There is no guesswork about the fitting and comfort qualities of KABO Corsets. The "live model" system takes care of that, Corsets that are made over the human figure are sure to fit the human figure. There is a different corset for every different figure, that explains the popularity of the Kabo Corset.

Our experienced Corsetiere will fit you to the model best suited to your particular figure.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, October 17.—Naval aircraft dropped bombs on Pernau, a Russian Port on the Gulf of Riga, where large fires were observed. On the main fighting front in the east there was a revival of activity. The Russians attempted to advance the statement says, but were driven back.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 17.—The Chamber of Deputies after a secret session of three hours last night resumed its public session closing the secret debate on the statement concerning Alsace-Lorraine made in the Chamber last Friday by Foreign Minister Ribot, by voting to pass to the next business. The motion was carried by 313 to nothing, the Socialists refusing to vote.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), October 17. — Comparative quiet is reported by General Haig to-day on the western front of France and Belgium.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 17.—Tons of bombs were dropped on the docks at Bruges and other important German works in Belgium, says an Admiralty statement. All the British machines returned without loss.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, October 17. — Anglo-French successes in Flanders broadening the great wedge which the Allies are relentlessly driving into the German line are described as the outstanding feature of the week in the review of military operations for the week nding October 13, issued to-day by the War Department.

"The Allied offensive in Flanders continues methodically," says the review. "Assigned objectives attained with increasing regularity indicate the efficient co-ordination of artillery preparation and infantry attacks.

"The zone of operations in the Ypres salient, formerly too narrow for proper disposition of large masses of troops, has now by French co-operation and their recent successful advance so extended the line that fighting in what was the Ypres salient has changed in character. It is no longer to be considered a salient, but an ever-extending wedge progressively driven into the German lines."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, October 17.—The Russian War Office has completely lost touch with the Russian forces on the Island of Oesel, it was announced to-day. Naval skirmishing is continuing in the waters around Oesel Island, around the Gulf of Riga, Russian patrol ships having had encounters with torpedo craft. A fleet of Zeppelins is reported over Moon sound northeast of Oesel Island. One German Dreadnought which ran into the Russian mine field defending Oesel Island on October 12th, struck a mine the statement adds. After the explosion the warship made for the coast and its ultimate fate is not known.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, October 17.—Secretary Lansing to-day announced definitely that there would shortly be a conference, probably in Paris, of all nations engaged in the war against Germany, and the United States would likely be represented.

Nancy Again Bombarded By Enemy Planes

Ten Peoply Were Killed and Forty Injured by Bombs — Twenty-five German Machines Were Brought Down

Canadian Press Despatch:

PARIS, Oct. 17.—(Bulletin).— Ten persons were killed and forty injured in the bombardment of Nancy last night by German aviators, the War Office announces. On Monday and Tuesday 25 German airplanes were destroyed by the French or compelled to land in a damaged condition.

"FAIR AND WARMER"

A Guaranteed Treat For Local Theatregoers

The "cocktail scene" is what the major part of its admirers describe as the most excruciatingly funny of all the funny parts of Avery Hopwood's "Fair and Warmer," the widely heralded farce, which Selwyn & Company will present at the Grand Opera House on Tuesday next, Oct. 23rd, following its year long run at the Eltinge Theatre in New York, as well as an eight months' run in Chicago, to packed houses, and half hysterical audiences.

This scene put the critics to their wits' ends for suitable similies when it was first presented. One of them said "It would make the lions laugh on the steps of the Public Library," and another said, "It would make even Horace Greeley's statue laugh."

"Fair and warmer" is indisputably the brilliant Avery Hopwood at his best. His "Seven Days" and "Nobody's Widow" had run the standard of American farces to the very top—in fact, it was th first of these which first displaced the foreign farce from its post of honor. In "Fair and Warmer" he settled once and for all any question of his supremacy.

Two upright and respectable persons, the one a husband far too good for human nature's daily entertainment, and the other a little wife whose experience with life had been largely got from the end of mother's apron strings, to their astonishment, find that their respective spouses have been deceiving them and having more joy out of life than can be found at the family hearthstone.

The put-upon pair decide to retaliate by being utterly wicked. But not knowing how, they mess things up for themselves and everybody else and end by promising inhumanly good behaviour for the rest of their lives in order to keep out of jail and divorce courts.

There is not a flagging moment from Mr. Hopwood's first curtain to the last, and the sparkle of wit enlivens every rapid fire situation.

Major Bishop Married To-day

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—Surrounded with all the romance of war and showered with as many gifts as the princess in the Fairy tale, Margaret Eaton Burden, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Burden of this city, was to-day wedded to Canada's war aviator hero, Major William A. Bishop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, of Owen Sound, home from the battle fields of France with the Victoria Cross, Distinguished Service Order and other honours given him by the King for gallant service. The ceremony took place at 3 p.m. in the Methodist Church, erected here as a memorial to the bride's grandfather, Timothy Eaton, and Rev. Dr. Henderson tied the nuptial knot. There were regular rainbows of attendants for the bride, and the church was crowded with prominent people. A guard of honour composed of officers of the Mississauga Horse and Royal Flying Corps, as well as a contingent of V. A.D. nurses furnished the military aspect of the beautiful affair.. The bride was dressed in an exquisitive creation of white kitten's ear crepe skirt made full and short with apron flounce of genuine Carrickmacross lace. The bodice was in crossover effect with a tiny vest of lace and sleeves of net with frill of lace at the top. After the ceremony and reception Major and Mrs. Bishop left for Washington in the private car of her uncle, Sir John Eaton. Major Bishop has been loaned to the British Mission for a month.

COAL STRIKE IN ILLINOIS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 17. — Announcement was made here to-day that practically all coal miners in Illinois are on strike. Considerable coal for Ontario comes from Illinois.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Federal Fuel Administrator Garfield to-day warned the coal operators and miners, where the strikes have occurred or are impending that the Government will take charge of the coal production if it continues to be threatened by strikes. After the conference Mr. Garfield sent an appeal by telegraph to the miners and operators to consider the national emergency and resume production.

Union Members Are Selecting Fighting Ground

Are Picking Out the Constituencies Where They Are Likely to Stand For Election

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 17. —Most of the new additions to the Union Cabinet will be away from Ottawa by the end of the week. Hon. N. W. Rowell is in Toronto to-day, Hon. Messrs. Crerar and Calder leave for the west to-night with Hon. Arthur Meighen. On Saturday night the Winnipeg public will witness the first fruits of union, when Mr. Meighen and Mr. Calder, ancient political opponents, will speak on the same platform and in the same cause. Hon. F. D. Carvell is not yet back from New Brunswick. He may not come back until after a decision has been reached as to the Noval Scotia Liberal representation. If Premier Murray decides to come in he will likely bring his answer along with him to Ottawa. If he decides to stay out he will likely notify the Premier by wire. From this end nobody knows at present what he will decide. Every effort is being made by the government to pull the election off before Christmas. Its ability to do so depends upon the physical possibility of preparing the lists in the space of time left between now and then.

It is rumoured here that Hon. N. W. Rowell will find a constituency in North Oxford. It is considered probable that E. W. Nesbitt, the sitting Liberal member, and Col. Sutherland, the Conservative candidate, will withdraw in his favour. Major General Mewburn will run in Hamilton and will be opposed by a Labour candidate. Hon. T. A. Crerar will probably run in Hon. Dr. Roche's seat in Marquette. Hon. J. A. Calder will likely run in Regina. It is recognized that Hon. A. L. Sifton will have a hard fight. Where he will run has not been decided. The stiffest fight of all will be that of Hon. F. S. Carvell in Carlton, to which has now been added Victoria, where there is a heavy Acadian vote. Mr. Carvell, from present conditions, may be opposed either by a straight Conservative or by a Laurier Liberal or by both. Politics are politics in the Maritimes and only the consummation of union through an election will mitigate them. The interview given by Sir Sam Hughes in Lindsay, has created a little diversion. General Hughes is no friend of union.

"Sam Hughes' barrage fire comes too late," is the Citizen's summing up of the situation this morning. In this connection the rumour has been circulated that a union candidate may be nominated against him in Victoria and Haliburton. Other counsels however, may prevail. Hon. Robert Rogers, late Minister of Public Works, has not been heard from for a long time. It is stated, however, that Mr. Rogers is also filibustering against the new combination in Winnipeg.

United States Adopts War Postage Now

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Following the example of Canada the United States has now made arrangements commencing November 1st, to make three-cent instead of two-cent stamps necessary for domestic and for foreign mail, the extra cent to be applied to war taxes.

Evidence Of The Two Women He Married Sends Fred Oakes To Trial On Charge Of Bigamy

Fred Oakes was committed for trial by Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of bigamy. Two women swore they had married him, and apparently both regretted it. Mrs. Ethel May Oakes married him in Lindsay, and after a separation of nine years from his wife, he signed an affidavit that he was a bachelor, when Ida McClennan of Peterborough surrendered to his two years' courtship. For six months she bore the name of Mrs. Frederick Oakes until one day his mother shattered her little romance with the information that he had a wife and two children in Fraserville.

On the ground that he had sworn falsely in signing the affidavit, Oakes faces a charge of perjury, which was set down for hearing this afternoon.

His First Wife.

Mrs. Ethel May Oakes, first called this morning, said she now lived with Mr. Albert Atchison at Fraserville.

"Its about nine years since I left him, and I had lived with him six years. I was married in the Methodist church in Lindsay."

She hadn't the license and didn't know where it was. George and Maude Hudson, brother and sister, "stood up" with Mr. and Mrs. Oakes. There were two children, born of the marriage, one twelve years old and the other nearly eight.

"He first went away for about a year and after a brief reunion left again, and had not returned since."

Witness said that her husband had never seen their boy, the youngest child, born shortly after he went away.

He wrote about six years ago telling his wife to come and get her clothes.

Magistrate Dumble then educed the fact that Mrs. Oakes had left her husband, and not, as she had implied, that he had left her.

She Simply Left Him.

"I went home on a visit to my father at Mt. Pleasant. After two weeks my husband came out to a picnic and wanted me to go home to clean the lamps in the church at Bethany, of which he was caretaker. Instead of going home we both drove to his sister's home at Ida.

"That was on Saturday, and on Sunday morning I left that house. We had a few words. I went back to my father. I have never returned to the Oakes."

"Did you ever ask him to take you back since? No.

Mr. Hatton— Where has he been living?

Peterborough, Toronto or some place. I really don't know. I heard he was in Peterborough.

Although Oakes had written his wife to come and take away her clothes; she had enlisted the aid of Magistrate Rose.

"I wouldn't have got them otherwise. He wouldn't give me other articles I had helped to earn after my marriage."

"It would be a question of law whether you were entitled to them," Magistrate Dumble said.

Cross-examined by Mr. O'Brien, witness said she had left her husband, and not that he had left her. She had never written to him, and while she had seen him once since the separation, she did not know whether he had seen her.

Magistrate Dumble questioned Mr. O'Brien as to the resemblance of this testimony, and the latter replied that he wished to show that Oakes might not have known that his wife was still living.

The Second Wife.

Ida McClennan, the plaintiff, grinned broadly at or in the general direction of the prisoner in the box as she identified him in response to Mr. Hatton's question. She first met Fred Oakes about four years ago at Mrs. Fowler's.

"All winter and summer we visited my sister-in-law's house and went to Bethany Tabernacle and Gospel Hall.

Mr. Hatton—"Did he ever make love to you?"

"Yes, for two winters."

"What about the summers?"

Plaintiff—"Summers, too."

Oakes and Miss McClennan went to Toronto Exhibition in 1916 and made a honeymoon of it by getting married on September 4th. Her mother, her sister, Mrs. Kendall, and Mr. Thos. Castle were witnesses of the event. Rev. F. G. Plummer of St. Augustine's church, tied the knot.

Mr. Hatton—Did you ask him if he had a wife?

Yes, I asked him, so did my mother, sisters and all of us; but he denied it.

Magistrate Dumble—Did he always deny it.

Yes, even after I was married I asked him, but he said it was all lies.

Did you hear anything about it?

Yes, his mother told me after I was married. She said he had a wife and two children.

Mr. Hatton—Did she tell you where his wife lived?

Yes; she said his wife lived in Mt. Pleasant.

What did you do then?

I picked up and went to my sister-in-law's.

Mr. Hatton—Did you compalin to anybody.

I told Chief Thompson.

Magistrate Dumble—Dic you ever live with him again?

No.

Mr. Hatton—Did he support you; give you any money?

No.

How did you live?

He bought the groceries.

The plaintiff said they had lived with Oakes' mother

Mr. O'Brien—Where did he ask you to marry him?

Before we went to Toronto.

You are sure you didn't ask him first?

Yes.

WILLYS-KNIGHT MOTORS WIN BIG CONTRACT OVER STRONGEST COMPETITION

Our local Overland man, C. R. Banks, of the Banks' Garage, 212-216 Charlotte street, is quite elated over news that the Willys-Knight taxicabs have won new laurels after many tests. Their latest achievement resulted in an order for 50 more of them by the Wescott Express company, which has obtained all terminal taxicab concessions in New York city. There was very keen competition for this taxicab order for New York city and most grueling tests were made before the company finally placed this order for Willys-Knight taxicabs. The Willys-Knight company was especially elated over the order.

One of the interesting features in connection with the new Willys-Knight cars is the elimination of the taximeter. The latter will not be required, inasmuch as a flat rate will be charged for the use of the Willys-Knights. They are thereby given the appearance of exclusive and costly private vehicles.

The Wescott order calls for special taxi chassis, equipped with the Willys-Knight motors. The bodies are custom made, with a special shade of green for colouring.

It is in the interior furnishings as well as the motor that the car is unusually appealing. The upholstering is of genuine Spanish handbuffed leather, with silk shades and carpets in harmony. There are ventilators, speaking tubes, quarter lights, pamphlet cases and extra passenger seats. There is also plenty of room in the front of the car for the baggage of the passengers.

Winsome New Dresses In The Most Fashionable Modes Have Recently Arrived for Miladys Selection

Dresses in which silk, satin and georgette have been artistically employed. Not highly tinted but resplendent with the warm tints of Autumn and skillfully relieved by touches of color or the manipulation of the material itself. Truly, these new arrivals would be welcome in the most exclusive wardrobes.

SOME declare that georgette is incomparable as a material for gowns whether they be elaborate or simple. This chic model in beetroot georgette substantiates the claim in no slight degree. The shade itself is captivating let alone the straight line effect with tunic falling from a band of shirring at waist line; the skirt is decked with three tucks that measure three and one-half inches. There are no less than three layers of collars falling loose at the back—the first is beetroot georgette veiled with maize georgette which in turn is veiled with beetroot. Price..... $30.00

FASHION'S latest vagary is combinations of georgette and satin and its results are alluring. Picture a deep band of navy satin forming about three parts of the skirt and from there upward navy georgette garnished with the most elaborate braidings in maize soutache; then at the waist a wide band hanging loosely over each shoulder and a third circling the waist. The effect is most pleasing and we are sure you will agree if you inspect. Price..... $39.00

TO some navy blue taffeta may not sound inviting, but after all it depends greatly how it is employed. This model is entirely novel with its crossed front that forms the bodice completely and ties in a bow at the back, hinting slightly at a bustle effect; the sleeves are on the princess order; the yoke is adorned with a long pointed satin collar. The price is moderate at..... $27.50

THIS is something designed primarily for the matron. A sedate appearing model developed in Russian green Duchess satin; the cross-over at the waist is relieved with a yoke of cream georgette; a draped tunic or overskirt falls from the waist line, which by the way is scarcely discernible. Bishop sleeves are desirable features of this altogether charming model. Price..... $35.00

LONDON IS PREPARING FOR AIR RAIDS

Bomb-proof Shelters Are Being Card-Indexed Ready For Next Attack

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 17. — London's bomb-proof shelters are being card-indexed in preparation for further German raids. Sufficient tunnels, arches, basements and substantial buildings have been inventoried to accommodate one million persons. The decision of the educational authorities to close all London schools during the last week of October is perhaps the most interesting of many steps being taken in anticipation of the recurrence of German raids as soon as the moon is up again. Air raid shelter placards are being distributed throughout the metropolitan area. Many substantial forms of relief for air raid victims and their relatives are announced as a result of a conference of the mayors of the various London boroughs.

Skeptical About This Sub. Story

United States Naval Authorities However Point Out Huns Might Extend Their Sphere of Operations

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17. — Germany's reported intention to establish a submarine zone about the United States, Canada and Cuba, was taken here to-day with a touch of scepticism. Despite this, however, naval authorities said it was entirely possible that the Teutons would endeavour to extend their sphere of operations now that they are building large U-boats. Such a zone, however, would avail the Germans little it is felt here. By maintaining their vessels on the European side they are near home bases and have a better opportunity to carry on their ruthlessness than at such a distance as this coast experts point out. Moreover torpedoing off the American shores would be undoubtedly one of the best stimulants to the war spirit thus far developed, and there have been evidences that Germany, realizing this would avoid undertaking it.

DUTCH FLOWERING BULBS

Dutch bulbs, such as Hyacintha, Daffodils, Tulips, etc., which are usually received in Canada and United States about the first of October each year are this season very much delayed, and so far not a single Dutch bulb is on sale. Two Holland steamers, the Waaldyk and the Schieldyk have arrived at American ports with capacity loads of these bulbs, but on account of the British authorities having to examine the mails, which include the shipping papers, quite a delay is occasioned; however, it is hoped that the cargoes will be released to consignees in the near future when they will be available to the public.

Our local florists expect to have their usual supplies of these bulbs just as soon as the dealers in Toronto and elsewhere. Our citizens should, therefore, reserve their orders and do their buying at home, where they can have the advantage of personally selecting and have the advice of our own reliable florists.

Drowning Accident At Bobcaygeon

BOBCAYGEON, Oct. 16. — Eric Boyd, son of Mr. W. T. C. Boyd of Bobcaygeon, has been drowned in Pigeon Lake. He left the village on Friday on a duck-hunting expedition intending to return Saturday, but failed to do so. Paries left for his camp at Long Point where they found his clothing, watch, guns and a partly finished meal. His canoe was found right side up on the lake. It is believed it drifted from shore, and in swimming for it he was drowned.

A search is being instituted for the body.

LIFE IN GERMANY TO-DAY.

Girl of 22 Offers Inducements to Soldier Marrying Her.

The Breslau "Volkswacht" publishes the following announcement in its advertising columns:

"I am twenty-two years of age, not bad-looking. I have fourteen fowls at my farm, one pony, six pigs, four cows in the pasture, two hams, and some sausages now in process of curing, a blind mother who knows how to weave and spin, a small vineyard, twenty-five cherry trees, fourteen apple trees, ten plum trees, a quantity of home-spun house linen, and three casks of good wine in my cellar. I have, besides, a piano and a flute.

"Injured soldiers who are able to work in the field or attend to the cattle and poultry are invited to send in their applications if they feel inclined to marry.

"No objection to separation if, after six months of married life, incompatibility of character should manifest itself on either side."

FARMERS WANT HELP

Ask General Hemming For Aid of Men From Special Service Company

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner)

KINGSTON, Oct. 17.—As a result of the scarcity of labour, the Board of Trade will appeal to General T. D. R. Hemming for men from the Special Service Corps to help out the farmers of Frontenac County in the harvesting of the root crop. It is stated that not ten per cent. of the crop has been harvested, and that practically all the women in Frontenac County are at work in the fields. One woman on Wolf Island with two small boys took off the entire crop of a farm of one hundred acres.

SAYS THE TIDE HAS TURNED

Hand-writing on the Wall For Germans Says United States Representative

(By W. S. Forrest.)

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

PARIS, Oct. 17. — "The tide has turned—there will be more atrocities, there will be terrible battles—but despite events in Russia, the Austro-Germans everywhere are being driven back and from the Carso to the Channel they are no longer able to attack." This was the estimate of the war today as Representative Medill McCormack, of Illinois, presented it to the guests at a luncheon at the Palais Dorsay. After six weeks' journeying in Europe to every front except that of Russia, McCormack emphasized the impression he had obtained throughout his travels in France, England and Italy, of the democratic solidarity of the Allies. He assured France of the determination of the entire American nation to fight with all its power to a victory.

"The morale of the German officer prisoners is now lower than it was two months ago. More boys of sixteen are now found among the prisoners.

"Events in the Reichstag and in the German fleet, despite the closed eyes of the German autocratic leaders, appear in burning letters as the handwriting on the wall to such governors of the Empire."

THE DISTRICT CONVENTION OF THE W. M. S.

The District Convention of the Women's Missionary Society will be held in George Street Methodist Church on Thursday morning and afternoon. An excellent programme has been prepared. Mr. H. D. Robertson will give an address on our work in China. Rev. A. J. Thomas will give a talk on "War and Missions." The music will be of a high order.

Music & Drama

HENPECKED HENRY.

A large audience greeted "Henpecked Henry" at the Grand Opera House, last night, and most of them seemed to enjoy the production. There is nothing startlingly novel or original about "Henpecked Henry" and by far the best thing in the offering was the dancing. Several clever specialties along this line, winning much applause. Clyde Long was funny in the title role and his soft shoe dance was a feature, while Harry O'Lynn, as a coloured man of all work, was responsible for a number of laughs. Several of the cast have only recently joined the Company, and the production lacked smoothness on that account.

Mary Miles Minter At The Empire

"Melissa of the Hills to Be Seen To-night and To-morrow

There is a fine acting scene in "Melissa of the Hills," Mary Miles Minter's new Mutual-American production, that seems likely to be handed down as one of the classics of the screen.

This is the scene in which Melissa weaves her spell of child witchery about the crabbed old miser of the mountain, Cyrus Kimball, portrayed by that splendid director, George Periolat.

Miss Minter rises to a height of artistry in this scene which is seldom attained in picture drama. She is the embodiment of sweet innocence, cozening the hard-featured and leather-hearted Kimball into acceptance of her straight from the Bible philosophies, despite his determination to resist her blandishments. It is impossible to recall a scene in which Miss Minter has appeared to more complete advantage or one in which Mr. Periolat's genius for characterization has been better displayed.

Spottiswoode Aitken, as Jethro Stark, the old preacher of the hills, also affords Miss Minter many splendid opportunities, giving a convincing characterization of the soul-saving circuit rider who went to the mountain top to "get closer to God" and never returned to the valley

RESULTS WITH ROOT SEED GROWING IN CANADA

Among the problems that the great war has created for Canada, the problem of growing root seed, i.e., seeds of swede and fall turnips, mangels, and field carrots, may seem rather insignificant to the average Canadian citizen. Yet, that problem is to day one of the most vital to the Canadian farmer, notably the dairy farmer, inasmuch as it is directly connected with the providing of that indispensable stock food that is generally referred to as "roots."

In 1915, Canada imported a total of 1,927,313 pounds of turnip seed, and 1,056,060 pounds of mangel and beet seed. In 1916, the import of turnip seed dwindled to 150,855 punds and the import of mangel and beet seed to 636,707 pounds; and for 1917, the figures stand at 291,379 pounds for turnip seed and 891,677 pounds for mangle and beet seed. This means that Canada imported a total of these most important farms seeds, in the years of 1916 and 1917, which falls short of the import of 1915 alone of, roughly, one million pounds. It should be added that practically every pound of field root seed used in this country is of European origin.

That Canada was running a great risk of having her supply of root seed from Europe shut off, partly or wholly, as a result of the war, was regretfully predicted in an Experimental Farm bulletin entitled "Growing Field Root, Vegetable and Flower Seeds in Canada," issued early in 1915. In the said bulletin, an appeal was made—as has been repeatedly done later in many issues of "Seasonable Hints" distributed by the Dominion Experimental Farm systems—to Canadian farmers and other interested in the seed supply being kept up, urging that Canada could not afford to take the risk of relying on import from Europe either under prevailing war conditions, or immediately after the conclusion of peace. It was emphatically stated that "Canada should make herself independent of foreign markets and produce at home what now has to be brought from abroad. Canadian farmers should not only try to meet the emergency demand for field root seed in the immediate future, but also try to establish a permanent seed-growing industry which would make them independent of any other country." The bulletin went further and predicted "that many districts of Canada where root seed growing is unknown at present, will prove themselves not only able to produce seed of good quality, but also to be especially well adapted to seed raising."

To what extent this prediction was justified, will be shown by the data following, showing what results in root seed raising were obtained in the year of 1915. In that year the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa raised, from a field about 1 1-2 acres a first class mangel seed crop at the rate of about 1,150 pounds of seed to the acre. Mangel seed was produced at the Experimental Farm at Agassiz, B.C., at the rate of 2,100 pounds per acre, at the Experimental Station at Lennoxville, Que., at the rate of 1,150 pounds per acre, and at the Experimental Station at Kentville N.S., at the rate of 2,100 pounds per acre. The same year the Experimental Station at Lennoxille, Que., raised swede turnip seed at the rate of close to 1,250 pounds to the acre.

But what about the profit? Does it pay the grower to raise that kind of crop? As an answer, it may be stated that there was, according to records kept, a net profit of about $80 per acre from the mangel seed crop at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, in 1915. And this in spite of the fact that the men handling the crop were quite unfamiliar with the same.

The above figures indicate, most decidedly, that there are, in Canada, great opportunities for developing a new field in agricultural activity promising substantial rewards, from a profit standpoint, to those who take up root seed growing conscientiously and in a business-like manner.

May it also be added that the raising, in Canada, of the seed needed in the country will directly help to increase the average yield of the root crops of the Dominion. This will, however be discussed in a special article.

Special Council Meeting To-night

Red Cross Fund and Coal Situation May Be Discussed

A special meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. One of the matters that will likely be taken up is the forthcoming campaign to raise eighteen thousand dollars for the Red Cross Society. The city will be expected to make a liberal contribution to the fund and in the discussion that will result some of the aldermen are likely to talk the clock around. When a matter of this kind comes up some of the aldermen obscure the realities of the situation in a cloud of verbosity. Should a deputation be present it will be an ideal time for a grand stand speech.

Another time-worn matter that may come up for deliberation is the coal question. One of the men broke a handle off his shovel and the council will be asked to sanction repairs or authorize the purchase of a new shovel.

INDIANS, HEARING OF DRAFT, "BEAT IT" TO REGISTER

TROOP D, Caval maom gob gkokg

TROOP D, CAVALRY, IS LARGELY RECRUITED FROM INDIANS. MOST OF WHOM ARE WELL TO DO AND INTELLIGENT.

PAWHUSKA, Okla., Saturday.—When Oklahoma goes into war with its volunteers and drafted men there will be added to the ranks of American soldiery large numbers of what the Eastern papers will call "millionaire oil men," and of this wealthy element the Osage country will probably furnish the largest and wealthiest portion. There are some rich Osage boys in the Oklahoma infantry regiment, in the draft list, and particularly in Troop D, cavalry. The majority did not wait to be drafted and comparatively few of the drafted attempted to obtain exemptions.

How many millions of dollars will pile up in Oklahoma banks for Osage fighting in France or elsewhere nobody knows, but everybody knows there will be millions. The average Osage income is well up in four figures, and in many cases their income outside government offices is great. No Osage family will be left in need by reason of enlistment or draft, and few of the soldiers will suffer diminution of income.

The first Osage accepted under the wraft was a young married man, William McKinley, of Grayhorse. He has lands, cattle and automobiles and a young wife. He has arranged his affairs for a long stay and is eager to go. He is a son of Roan Horse, an Osage leader of Grayhorse. Like many other young Osages, he was given all school a name which has become fixed and legal. His Indian names were awkward when carried to school. His brothers and sisters bear the name of McKinley.

The DeNaya brothers, from the Ponca side of the Osage nation, came under the draft call, but one was eighty pounds too heavy and he went sadly home. The other one, Louis, managed to pass and he waived exemption, although he is a real farmer and has large business affairs. Okey Papan, when he heard of the draft, decided to beat it, and he promptly "beat it" for Fort Sill, where he enlisted.

The tireless "general" in drilling the "rookies" of Troop D, cavalry, encamped at the Osage school grounds here is Augustus Chotean, one of the best known, richest and most intelligent of young Indians. He commenced manoeuvring in April to get into the army and finally overcame the objection of his young white wife.

He is a sergeant in the troop and a valuablesol dier. He was graduated at Bacome College and the Northeastern Normal and was a leading athlete of both schools.

It is predicted for Troop D that it will be a sensation in Europe, for never were better riders marshalled in any country, nor boys more eager to do things. The troop is practically an Osage county affair and the best homes of the entire region are represented.

Another element of the Osage nation is strongly represented in the army—the intermarried citizen. Several of these young whites waived exemptions, but some are making fights. Osage county so far is without a draft resister.

Preliminary Hearing Of Perjury Charge

The official license with which Fred Oakes married Ida McClennan, in Toronto, was presented at the preliminary hearing in the police court this afternoon on a charge of perjury. According to the document the bridegroom declared on oath that he was a bachelor, whereas he had a wife and two children at Fraserville, according to the testimony in this morning's bigamy case.

Mr. J. A. O'Brien, who appeared in his behalf, pointed out that the information alleged that the prisoner had taken an affidavit of his bachelorhood, and the word was accordingly changed to declaration.

Mr. J. Guise-Bagley testified that he had obtained the license from the Registrar-General's office in Toronto yesterday.

The case is proceeding. Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution.

WEDDING BELLS

SAGER—JACKSON.

The wedding took place in Hamilton on Monday of Mr. Gordon Sager of Hamilton to Miss Georgina E. Jackson, daughter of Mr. Jas. Jackson, 232 Perry street, Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Wilson, formerly of Knox Church, Peterborough. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Sager left for Peterborough and other eastern points on a wedding trip.

BARRATT—DUNDAS.

A quiet wedding was solemnized this morning at Trinity Church Methodist parsonage, Rev. J. P. Wilson officiating, when Frank Benj. Barratt was united in marriage to Annie Margaret, Daughter of the late Henry Dundas, both of this city. The young couple left on the noon train for a short honeymoon and on their return will reside in Peterboro.

McCARTHY—CORKERY.

A very quiet wedding took place in St. Joseph's church, Douro, on Tuesday. Rev. M. F. McGuire celebrated mass and performed the ceremony, which united in wedlock Mr. John Corkery, of Otonabee, and Miss Mary Elizabeth McCarthy, daughter of Mr. Denis McCarthy, of Douro. The bride who was beautifully gowned, was attended by her cousin, Miss Ada Sullivan, of Lindsay, while Mr. Daniel Corkery supported the groom.

The wedding was witnessed by a number of friends of the contracting parties, who will have the warm well wishes and congratulations of all.

CLANCY—EVOY.

A very pretty wedding took place in St. Anne's Church, Toronto, when Mary, daughter of Mr. James Evoy, of Riverdale, became the bride of Mr. T. Hector Clancy, late of Boston, Mass., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Clancy of Peterborough. The bride was attired in her travelling suit of navy gabardine, with little French hat of blue velvet, trimmed with paradise ospreys, and wore black lamb and ermine furs, and corsage bouquet of lily-of-the-valley. She was attended by Miss Imelda, who was wearing a pretty little frock of French blue, red fox furs, and carried sweetheart roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Jack Evoy. During the nuptial mass, which was celebrated by Rev. Father Pennylegion, solos were sung by the Misses Lucille Newman and Katie McAtamney and Miss Rigney was at the organ. After the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Clancy left for a short western trip. They will reside in North Sherbourne street.

Simple Home Treatment To Remove Hairy Growths

(Beauty Culture.)

Two or three minutes use of a delatone paste will banish every bit of hair from your face, neck or arms. This paste is made by mixing some water with powdered delatone. After the paste is removed, the skin should be washed to free it from the remaining delatone and it will be clear and spotless. You will not be disappointed with this treatment if you are sure to obtain real delatone from your druggist.

Here is a case of misplaced generosity. The guilty party meant well, but her manner of showing it wasn't what you might call tactful. It was at a bridge party—one of the porch kind—and ice cream and wafers were served.

"Miss Ghoans," urged the hostess, "do have some more ice cream."

"No, really I—"

"Oh, don't refuse, or I'll think you don't like it."

"Well, if you'll just give me a mouthful—"

"Ah, that's right. Katie, fill Miss Ghoans's plate for her."

Miss Ghoans is sensitive about her generous mouth, and she was so angry that she telephoned to us about it with the request that we put it in the paper.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Heavy fines are being inflicted by magistrates in England on persons convicted of food wastage. At Highgate a man was fined $250 for feeding pigs with bread, another at Holloway had to pay $50 for a similar offence. A woman manager of a bakery at Finchley was fined $100 for permitting twelve loaves to be wasted.

Regular Meeting Of The Norwood Township Council

Prizes Won by the Norwood Boy Scouts—Presentation to Former Resident—Reception to Returned Soldiers

NORWOOD, Oct. 17.—The Village Council met on the above date, all members being present. Minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. The following accounts were passed:

A PRESENTATION.

Before leaving Centre Dummer to reside in Norwood, Mrs. Thos. Hubble was the recipient of a Casserole, presented by the Ladies' Aid Society. The following address accompanied the presentation:

Mrs. Thos. Hubble—

Dear Sister—We the members of the Ladies' Aid in connection with Centre Dummer Baptist church desire to express to you our very sad regret at having to accept your resignation as president of our society, which office you have held and so long filled, for so long a time. Only your having to remove from the district is the reason for our accepting the same, and as a body we desire to express to you our warm appreciation for the unselfish service you render for the good of others.

Our prayers go with you to your new home and place of service, and trust that in days to come you and others along with us will be able to say that our loss is their gain. We ask you to accept this little token of love and esteem from the members of said Ladies' Aid.

Signed in their behalf—

Mrs. J. B. McCormack,
Mrs. S. Clark.
Mrs. C. Davey.

A DAILY PAPER FOR THE CANADIANS IN FRANCE AND ENGLAND

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.— Although the large majority of Canadians are probably unaware of the fact, soldiers of the Dominion Overseas, even those in the trenches in France and Belgium, receive a daily paper filled with news from Canada. This little publication, which is of such immense value to the boys at the front because it contains news of home, is published in London and goes by the name of "The Canadian Daily Record." It is the latest development of the Canadian Military authorities in Canada and overseas to meet the demand of the Dominion's soldiers for news of their own country.

News for the Boys.

Ever since December, 1915, the military authorities here have been trying to furnish the boys at the front with news. At first news cable despatches were sent from Canada to London, where they were printed in intelligence summaries which formed part of the divisional orders. This method proved unsatisfactory because these intelligence summaries did not reach the rank and file, and moreover, at times pressure of purely military work some times crowded out the news. On October, 1916, the plan of printing news bulletins upon small slips of paper which were sent forward to the front through the Canadian postal corps, was adopted. This also proved a poor way of handling the news, because the slips were small, easily lost and because of their unattractive form, not always read.

Finally, at the beginning of this year, it was decided to publish an interesting daily newspaper under the auspices of the Canadian War Records Office, London, a Government department headed by Lord Beaverbrook. The newspaper started with a modest circulation among units in France and Belgium and camps and hospitals in Great Britain, and was received with enthusiasm and a demand for more copies.

News Bureau Established.

Owing to the appreciation expressed by officers and men, and at the suggestion of Sir Georg. Perley, Sir Edward Kemp, in September, decided to extend the news service from Canada, and for this purpose to establish a news bureau in Ottawa to supply the material for the Canadian Daily Record. Captain William Wallace, M.C., formerly of The Toronto Star, who has been wounded and invalided to Canada, was placed in charge.

The Canadian Daily Record now consists of four pages, magazine size, and each issue contains the happenings of the preceding twenty-four hours in Canada. The news is furnished from Ottawa by cable nightly, and through the medium of press clippings and special articles forwarded by mail. The Canadian Press Limited, gives access to its news service free of charge. Thanks to the co-operation of the Canadian Army Postal Service, the paper reaches the majority of the units in France on the day of publication, containing news despatched on the previous day. It is hoped to so extend the circulation that every individual member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force can count on seeing the newspaper daily.

In a recent letter, Lord Beaverbrook, the head of the War Records Office, informed Sir Edward Kemp that The Canadian Daily Record had now attracted the attention of the Imperial authorities to such an extent that they might undertake the publication of a small journal along similar lines.

SMITH TOWNSHIP COUNCIL MAKES A GRANT OF $1,684

A Levy of One Mill For the British Red Cross Society

The members of the council of the Municipality of Smith met in the County treasurer's office on Tuesday, Oct. 16th at nine o'clock, summoned by the call of the reeve. All the members were present with the exception of Councillor Middleton. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

An appeal was received from the Executive of the British Red Cross, asking the township to make as liberal a grant as possible. By motion it was decided to levy one mill on the dollar on all the rateable property of the township and that the amount of $1684 be forwarded.

Bylaw No. 753 prohibiting dogs from running at large on the highways of the township, was repealed.

The treasurer was ordered to pay the following accounts: Dr. J. A. Morgan, medical services, $27; A. G. Sherin's, acct., $1.55; John Kennedy, work on road, $5.25; Walter Young, work on road, $4.50; ditto, services as sheep valuator, $1.50; Thos. Davis, work on road, $4.00.

Bylaw No. 758 was passed to levy 5 per cent. on all taxes not paid on or before Dec. 15.

The council then adjourned to meet again on Dec. 15th.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

A STEADY MARKET MARKED THE WEEK

Butter, eggs and cheese are steady in price and turnover. Trade continues on a firm basis and the general feeling is that the tendency is towards a higher level, especially in butter and eggs. Potatoes continue around $1.25 a bag.

STRONG DEMAND FOR CASH OATS

Prices Are Soaring Upward—The Cattle Market

The strong demand for cash oats has sent prices up 3-4 at Fort William. Ontario oats, cash, are also advanced a cent. There is a strong export movement of Manitoba wheat in the grades for which prices have been fixed. Government agents are taking all offerings at Winnipeg. The corn markets were again stronger on reports of stormy weather coming.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.23 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2, store; No. 3 $2.17½, including 2½-cent tax, in store, Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 66 3-8c.; No. 3, 63 3-8c.; extra No. 1 feed, 63 5-8c.; No. 1 feed, 62 7-8c., in store, Fort William.

American corn—Nominal, not quoted.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 63c. to 64c., nominal; No. 3 white, 62c. to 63c., nominal.

Barley—New, $1.16 to $1.18.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, new, $2.22, basis in store, Montreal.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.72.

Manitoba flour —First patents, in jute bags, $11.50; second patents, $11; strong bakers, $10.60.

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, in bags, prompt shipment, $9.80, Montreal, $9.60 Toronto.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal, shorts, $42, bran, $35, feed flour, per bag, $3.25, middlings, $45 to $46.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $12 to $13; No. 2, $11 to $11.50; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, car lots, per ton, $7 to $7.50.

Cattle Market.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 106 cars, with 1,310 cattle, 106 calves, 2,499 hogs, and 1,867 sheep and lambs.

Trade was a little more brisk yesterday. The demand was better for the light medium class of butcher than for the heavy steers. The latter, in fact, are just now not at all in request, and are difficult to cash in even at good concessions. Good medium butcher and the cheaper mixed grades, cows, canners and cutters are in good demand. There is a fair demand for good short-keep feeders.

Sheep and lambs are steady.

Hogs were weaker and 25c. lower.

"THE PAINTED WOMAN"

By FREDERIC ARNOLD KUMMER

She caught sight of the maid with her jug.

"Well, girl," she asked, "why do you stand chattering here?"

"I have brought the fresh water, mistress."

"Take it within." She turned to the hunchback. "To-day, Pedro, the young man will leave his bed. Attend him. He may require your help."

The boy nodded, and taking the jug of water from Lucia, passed silently into the bedroom.

"He is nearly well again?" asked the mulatto.

"Yes." Ramona set the candle upon the table, and sank wearily into a chair. "So much better. The fever is gone—the wound healed. I am so glad—so happy."

"Then you had best lie down yourself, mistress, and get a little sleep." The girl went to the couch and adjusted its pillows invitingly.

"No—no. Not now. I am too happy to sleep."

"But you have had no rest these three weeks. Was it not enough to give the young man your room, your bed? Must you give him all your strength as well"

"Is there anything I would not give—him?" Ramona replied, glancing toward the bedroom door. "Has he not needed all my care" She turned to the mulatto girl with a happy smile. "Come girl. We wast time. Fetch the milk and the fruit."

"Yes, mistress."

"And the chocolate, Lucia. See that it is very hot."

"Yes, mistress."

"Away with you now. Hurry. I would not have him wait."

The girl went out into the garden, a look of wonder on her face. Under the spell of love, her mistress seemed transfigured. The new light in her eyes made the girl feel confused, afraid.

Pedro came in from the bedroom, his face as expressionless, as dull as ever.

"Has he everything he wants?" Ramona asked.

"Yes, mistress. He will soon be ready."

"Put out the light. The day has come." She indicated the candle upon the table.

The hunchback did as she directed, then made his way back into the bedroom. His mistress was singing joyously. A spear of sunlight, striking through the open doorway, set about her eager face a halo of gold. The twisted grillwork of the windows made queer patterns upon the opposite wall. A medley of sounds from the garden told of the awakening of the world of outdoors to a new day. Innumerable brilliantly plumed birds flashed among the palms filling the room with shrill staccato notes. Life seemed very gay, very joyous, on that August morning.

Soon the grasscloth curtain before the entrance to the bedroom was thrust aside, and Barton came in. He was obliged to support himself by the frame of the door, for he was very weak, and the effort to walk, after so many days in bed, proved trying.

Ramona ran to him, and assisted him to a chair.

"I am so glad—so very glad," she cried. "But you are not as strong as you thought. Did I not tell you it would be so? To-day you may sit up but a little while. To-morrow you will have more strength."

He patted her hand gratefully as he sank into the chair.

"'Twas but a moment's faintness," he said. "See—it is quite gone. I am as strong as ever."

She hung happily over him, searching his face with longing eyes.

"That is good—oh, so good. I have done my best to make you whole again."

"I must have been a great trouble to you."

"No—not trouble. Only happiness." She bustled briskly about, adjusting upon the table a cloth she had taken from one of its drawers. A huge bunch of crimson flowers hung outside one of the windows. She broke it.

"You are hungry—yes?" she laughed.

He followed her movements with his eyes, glad of her cheering presence.

"Why, yes, I am," he said. "A good omen, is it not?"

Ramona clapped her hands joyously.

"Lucia! Lucia!" she called. "Where are you? Fetch the chocolate. It is time the young man had his breakfast."

The mulatto came in a moment later, bearing a wooden tray. Upon it were a basket of fruit, oranges, bananas, mangoes, a jar of milk, flat cakes made of maize, and two earthen cups.

Ramona set one of them before him.

"Come, drink this chocolate," she said. "It is very fine for sick people." She began to peel one of the mangoes.

Barton ate heartily; they chattered like two children. The meal seemed to bring him renewed strength. He did not at first see that Ramona scarcely touched the food before her.

"Why do you not eat, girl?" he asked, touching her bare arm. The momentary contact sent a thrill of joy through her.

"I—oh, I am too happy to eat," she told him. "Now that you are well again. If only you do not go and—and leave me. I had hard work, I can tell you, to keep you here. Always, through your illness, you called for your friends, and wanted to go back to them."

An anxious look came into Barton's eyes. As he became stronger, the tug of duty grew, and with it, the desire to go back to his people. How strange they must have thought it, he mused, for him to disappear, leaving no word.

"I am so sorry you did not tell them the truth, when they came to seek me," he said. "Captain Willoughby had planned to sail for The Havana, from here. They may come back."

"You think so?" Her voice was very tremulous, full of apprehension.

"I feel sure of it."

"And then you will leave me Ah, I am selfish—very selfish, I fear. I did not want you to go at all, unless"—she became suddenly very shy, with fleeting blushes—"unless you would take me with you."

He regarded her with astonishment, his eyes sweeping the luxurious appointments of the room.

"You would leave all this?" he asked.

"Yes. I would leave all this. Ah—John, take me away with you." A pleading note gave a tender pathos to her words. "Take me away, to your country." With a quick movement she knelt beside his chair, her arms about his. Love, passionate, unmistakable, shone in her eyes. Barton could no longer remain insensible to its message. He circled her shoulders in a sudden and tender embrace.

"To my country?" he asked. "Surely you cannot mean that. How could I take you with me" His eyes sought questioningly the depths of hers.

"And why not?" with a brave smile she faced him through her tears. "I would be very good, very quiet, and I would wait on you, and serve you, and—oh, I should be so happy, just to be near you."

Her words made him tremble. All through his illness he had realized that love for this strange woman of the tropics, this vivid child of the flowers, the sunlight, was taking root in his heart, but he had put the thought aside, telling himself that because she had been good to him, had nursed him in his sickness, he must not assume a stronger reason for her care. It seemed beyond belief that she, daughter of a noble of Spain, should come to love him, a plain rough sailor. He rather pictured her surrounded by gallants in silks and satins, gold point and laces. Yet it appeared from her words, her manner, the look in her eyes, the cadences of her voice, that a reason stronger than mere charity toward one in sore need had prompted her actions. He gazed at her eager face, and felt almost afraid to speak.

"You will take me with you?" he heard her ask again.

His Puritan training rendered him, even at this crisis, blunt and unromantic. He still feared that he might have misunderstood.

"In but one way could we go together," he said gravely.

"In but one way?" She failed to grasp his meaning.

"Yes." He drew her closer to him, bending his head until their faces almost touched. "Ramona, dear child, I'm rough and plain—not such, perhaps, as should look to you, but if you care for me enough to go with me—"

"You are everything in the world I want," she burst out, then rose and turned from him. "Oh—the good God forgive me for saying such things to you."

Barton drew himself to his feet. His face was flushed, his eyes bright with a new happiness.

"I did n-t dare to speak—before. I had not thought—Ramona, dear—is what you say true?"

"Oh—yes—yes—yes!" The words seemed to leap from her eager lips. She held out her arms, hungry for his love. "You will take me?"

SURGERY FOR AUTO TIRES.

Be Sure There Are No "Broken Bones" Before Mending the Surface.

Surgery for a tire, in so far as it affects only the tread or skin, is simple, but after a rupture of the surface you should make certain that no "bones" have been broken" before proceeding with the treatment. It must be remembered that the layers of canvas cemented together—in a fabric tire—or the individual layers of cord—in a cord tire—form the main supporting skeleton, or framework. The rubber tread merely protects this framework from wear, as the tough skin on the ends of the fingers protects the bones and delicate nerves.

It often happens that a cut from a sharp stone or piece of glass is sufficiently severe to penetrate the entire thickness of rubber covering on the tire and to extend through to one or two layers of canvas. If under these conditions only the surface is vulcanized, or "healed," but little will be accomplished, for the supporting fabric will be weakened at this point through the separation of the one or two layers, and a blowout will eventually result, even though the tire, so far as external appearances are concerned, is perfect at this point.

A cure of this nature requires the services of an experienced tire surgeon, for a new section of fabric must be applied and vulcanized into place, or the broken ends of the cord must be fastened together in a manner requiring more or less expert work.

The same result as a broken bone may be obtained by what is known in tirology as a stone bruise. This is caused by a sudden impact against a blunt object, such as a curved or round corner of a stone, which in itself is not sufficient actually to cut the thread of the tire, but which imparts so severe a strain to the fabric, or carcass, that several of the layers of canvas may be broken or bruised. This is a frequent cause of mysterious blowouts, which seem to come from within a tire having its surface in perfect condition. —H. W. Struson, M. E., in Leslie's.

English Prison Pits.

Prison pits were vaults in which criminals in England were kept at night, chained together. There was one at Bristol which was in use as late as 1815. Down eighteen steps, it was only seventeen feet in diameter by nine feet high, and seventeen men were consigned to it every night. Even more typical was Warwick jail pit, which was occupied at least until 1797. It was an octagonal dungeon twenty-one feet in diameter, and almost nineteen feet underground. In the middle was a cesspool, and beside it ran a stream of water which served the prisoners for drinking purposes. To this awful cell forty-two men were consigned every afternoon at 3:45, to remain there until after daylight the following morning.

Reindeer of Alaska.

The Alaska reindeer, which, curiously enough, are wards of the United States department of education, have increased from the small herd brought from Siberia in 1892 until they now number well over 70,000, that, too, in spite of the fact that about 9,000 were killed last year for meat and skins. Two-thirds of the reindeer belong to the natives, for whom they are solving the problems of food, clothing and transportation. The rest belong to the missionaries, the Lapp immigrants and the government.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Santa Maria Derelict

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

Of all the devilish, cold blooded things done by men you will have read of few to equal what took place aboard one of the Spanish merchantmen, the Santa Maria, in the year 1862. It was published in the papers at the time, but only a partial account, and as we had war and excitement at home the incident was soon forgotten.

One of the oldest business houses in Mexico up to the date above named was that of the Spanish house of Galern & Co., founded seventy-five years previously. The business of the house was banking, mining, merchandising and cattle raising. It had a dozen branches in Mexico, and it had dealings with half a dozen countries. In a financial sense it was stronger than the government, and its yearly profits footed up an enormous sum. A son of the founder had succeeded to the management, and when old age came he turned over the active work to a cousin named Alvarez. The new manager was a young man of twenty-five, born in Spain of a fine family and had been educated for the priesthood. He was a man without a vice. Such was his probity that he was called "Holy Alvarez" even in his youth. At an enormous salary and with autocratic powers young Alvarez took over the management of affairs in Mexico, and almost as soon as he stepped foot on North American soil a change took place in his character. He began to drink, gamble and play fast and loose.

Of course there was gossip about the new manager, and there were those who predicted that his extravagances would ultimately bring ruin to the old house, but there were no official complaints. He knew little or nothing of business, but he did know how to spend money royally, and in a year he had people guessing how much longer it would take him to bankrupt the house. It was after the balance sheets had proved to him that he was spending more than the profits of the house and was a debtor to an enormous amount that he set about preparing a grand coup. The Spanish merchantman was loaded with a consignment of gold, silver, copper, furs and dyestuffs for Spain and the cargo insured to the last cent. Alvarez took into his confidence a young man named Prado, and when the Santa Maria sailed his confederate went with her as supercargo.

The ship was manned by a crew of fourteen men, all Spaniards. Thirty days after her sailing to the southward the American bark Homeward left the port of Valparaiso homeward bound. We had been out three days when we ran into a dead calm, with the weather so terribly hot that the deck planks smoked in the sun. As we lay heaving on the ground swell a small boat drifted into view. It seemed to be empty, and it had been in sight for two hours and was not over half a mile away when the captain decided to pick it up. A boat was sent off, and when she returned with the stranger we had a sad spectacle under our eyes. There was a dead man lying at full length under the thwarts.

About two days later we came up with a derelict from which the man in the boat had no doubt escaped. On board a horrible sight met us—the bodies of fourteen dead men.

The derelict was a great find to us. Her manifest showed a cargo valued at over $2,000,000, and the ship was all right above deck.

As the man got away alone and had provisioned the boat it must have been after the others were dead. He it was, then, who had brought about the wholesale death of the crew, and he must have had a strong motive. That motive was discovered when some of the boxes of treasure were hoisted out of the lazaret and broken open. Aside from one or two boxes, the whole treasure business was a fake. Lead had been substituted for silver and gold. The furs were a cheat and a fraud, and the value of the dyestuffs was not one-quarter of the sum they were insured for. A second and closer search of the stateroom evidently occupied by the supercargo gave us the key to unlock the whole mystery. He had left behind a letter of instruction signed by Alvarez at the City of Mexico, and in that we learned that the name of the dead man was Prado.

With the auger hole plugged and a part of our crew on board the Santa Maria, we laid our course for the port of Valdivia, and in due time both craft arrived there in good shape. The dead had been given burial, of course, but there was no lack of other proofs. As soon as the plot was unraveled steps were taken for the arrest of Alvarez in Mexico, and our claim for salvage was filed. Governments move slowly in international matters. It was months before they got ready to arrest the man who had plotted this sea tragedy. He had meanwhile continued his career of dissipation and extravagance, depending upon his insurance money to make everything good. News got to him somehow from Valdivia of the derelict being towed in, and he left Mexico and hid away in Bolivia. There he was at last found, but he cheated the hangman by committing suicide.

As a plot hatched against an equal and as a tragedy of the sea one must believe that Prado was little short of a devil incarnate to sweep aside coolly the fourteen human beings who stood in his path.

TRAINING THE CHILD.

The Most Essential Factor Is In Having a Normal Home.

A student of sociology recently said in a public address that the most essential thing in the training of a child was a normal home. This sort of home ought to be common. Yet investigations show that a large number of homes must be considered abnormal. Such are poverty stricken, overcrowded homes, and such are the servant filled homes of the wealthy. It is the large well to do middle class who should and who do supply most of the so called normal homes.

It has been found that many homes which might be normal are not so and that the parents usually are to blame. Parents are quarrelsome, a favored child is allowed to bully the household, the mother is indifferent to the home, the father is ugly, discipline is too lax, the children are ignored, parents reverse each other's decisions—these are some of the defects in the abnormal home. They are defects which are singled out because they betray no gross weakness in the parents and could be eliminated by a little patience and thoughtful effort.

The environment of a child in its early years undoubtedly has a good deal to do with forming its character. It seems as if parents ought to heed this fact and to exercise such self denial and self control as may be necessary to make the home a place where the child can be sure of finding peace and just treatment. There are many homes that for familiar reasons are entirely without the scope of these considerations.

But the observations noted apply with reasonable pertinence to the numerous American homes in which the parents are well behaved and self respecting, but who are too selfish or too thoughtless to give due attention to the very important matter of providing a tranquil and helpful home for the little ones.

Oxidization of Brass.

Brass when immersed in a hot solution consisting of one-half ounce of golden sulphuret of antimony and four ounces of caustic soda in each gallon of water becomes oxidized with a pleasing brown shade. The shade becomes darker if the metal is immersed in a dilute solution of sulphate of copper, used cold, about four to eight ounces to the gallon. Several immersions in the same manner give deeper brown tones.

Not Curious.

The advertiser who is deceived as to newspaper circulation is not entitled to much sympathy."

A Reformed Pirate.

The flat sand shore of Tripoli, kissed by a sparkling sea, is the scene every Tuesday of one of the largest and most interesting open-air markets to be found on the African coast. Thronging thousands of men, miles of tents, camels on the sand, and an astonishing wealth of produce fills the view.

A little tent among the others was occupied by me, where I offered for the merest trifle the book of God. My success aroused the spirit of Moslem Barbary, which expressed itself by a stone a few pounds in weight, which crashed into the tent, within an inch of my head.

For the crowd to storm my tent, tear the books into bits, and smother me with sand and stones was the work of a few minutes. It seemed the end had come, when a wonderful thing happened.

A lad of about fourteen years of age leaped between me and the howling mob and defied them to cast another stone. From defiance he fell to entreaty, and gradually the knives slipped back to their sashes, the stones ceased, and there was a great calm. He then upbraided them in his clear boyish voice and told them I was a servant of God, and the best man in the city.

The little tent with the book of God was there next market day, showered with smiles and salaams. We began to respect one another; they to pay tribute to my sincerity, I to marvel at the spirit of self-sacrifice and contempt of death, shown by a lad to succor me in my need. That lad became a Christian and a devoted friend of missionaries. I got to respect the children of the Barbary pirates, for they were worthy.—World Outlook.

Tommies Spend Money.

Seldom has Great Britain's share in the war been given just recognition. As new acts of service are made public, appreciation is, in numerous instances, expressed, but there remain many contributions to the cause of the Allies which pass unnoticed. Few people, for instance, have given a thought to the immense amount of money which the United Kingdom pours into France, into Belgium, into Greece, to mention only a few lands, through her soldiers. Nevertheless, these countries benefit through the troops that are stationed on their soil.

Foe Intrigue Fails.

Tons of seditious literature, printed in many languages and intended for circulation in neutral countries, have been seized in London and condemned by a prize court as part of a gigantic scheme on the part of the Germans to spread their propaganda to the four corners of the earth. The seizures were found in the mails of the steamships Oranje, Rembrandt and Goentoer. More than 1,500 bags containing thousands of pamphlets, were removed from the vessels by the British authorities.

Sir Frederick Smith, the Attorney-General, in asking the court to condemn the seizures, asserted that the scheme was on the largest possible scale and had been carried out with ingenuity and thoroughness. In a neat red and yellow cover, he said, was a pamphlet entitled "The Neutrality of Indian and England," and information available to the British authorities showed that in virtually every neutral country, almost in every neutral town of importance, the Germans had appointed agents whose special mission it was to distribute the literature.

There were Dutch and French editions of this pamphlet, the French edition being edited, it was said, by the Indian National Party. An Arabic pamphlet had a flaming red star and crescent on the cover. Another dealt with alleged British atrocities.

A pamphlet in French and Spanish, entitled "England's Rule in India," was intended for circulation as far afield as Bolivia, it was said.

Comes In Handy.

The life insurance policy looks like an expensive and worthless bit of paper until somebody dies, and then it is cash in bank. As Kipling wrote of Tommy Atkins:

"For it's Tommy this and Tommy that
And "chuck him out, the brute!"
But it's "savior of his country"
When the guns begin to shoot.

AUSTRIANS ARE CRUEL

ROUMANIAN SOLDIER TELLS OF VERY BRUTAL TREATMENT.

A Terrible Tale Told Simply and Dramatically—Men Were Forced to Eat Horrible Food, Including Soup Made From Human Bones, and Many of Them Died of Starvation.

A ROUMANIAN soldier, Toma Haralam, taken prisoner by the Austrians last September in the Roumanian invasion of Transylvania, has just succeeded in escaping to the Italian lines on the Carso. The following is his story in all its simplicity and horror: "As soon as I was taken prisoner in a wood near Basso I was brought before a German officer, who examined me. I refused to answer his questions and betray my country, so he handed me over to an Austrian sergeant, who kicked me without mercy. I was left absolutely without any food, not a piece of bread or a drink of water, for three days, and then taken with many other prisoners to a concentration camp in Hungary on the River Leytha, where 20,000 prisoners-of-war, Russians, Italians, and Roumanians, were confined. We were literally starved. Our rations consisted of five ounces of bad bread and a handful of boiled beans daily, with a small piece of meat every week.

"We all had to work, generally in the fields, and as we ate the seed given us to sow or the raw turnips and potatoes we had to plant often we were punished by being tied to a pole with our arms raised for hours or else chained to the ground. The Italian prisoners were treated worst of all, and systematically beaten by the Austrians. Orders reached our camp in January that 1,000 Roumanian prisoners were to be sent to work on the Italian front. I was among the thousand picked men. We were all young and strong, comparatively speaking of course, as the starvation diet had weakened us. We were divided into four sections of 250 men each and sent to different localities. My section was sent to Komen under the command of an Austrian sub-lieutenant and 30 territorials. We worked at building a railway together with 2,000 Russian prisoners. Our food was worse and less than that we had in camp, as we got four cents a day pay and were supposed to spend it on food, although bread cost a dollar a loaf. As we were ravenously hungry because we had to work hard we were compelled to rummage among the garbage for food and even ate rats and mice. We also got bones, human bones they were sometimes, which we boiled to make soup. In 25 days sixty men out of the 250 in my section died from hunger, exhaustion, and exposure. Five men committed suicide, three attempted to escape and were shot.

On January 23 my comrade, Niku Crstia, and I decided to escape. Our flight was favored by an Austrian soldier, a native of Bukowina, who gave us a knife and a box of matches. We hoped to catch some animal, kill it and cook it. We walked for three days in the direction of the Italian lines with nothing to eat, but we finally reached the ruins of a village where we found a pigsty. We took shelter here and found some potato peelings and turnips, which we ate. On the following day I went out in search of food and nearly caught a stray chicken, but I heard voices and ran back to the pigsty. My comrade was exhausted, but when night came on I made him get up and we both went out in the snow. He could hardly walk and wept like a child, begging me to give him a piece of bread. The cold was intense. We reached another village completely in ruins and we could hear the Italian guns very near. We could not find anything to eat and my comrade was more dead than alive. We slept during the day and when night came on I tried to arouse my comrade, but he was dead.

"Just then I distinctly heard the characteristic sound of machine gun fire and I knew I was near the first line trenches. I decided to go on, and after two hours I crossed, or rather crawled, through the Austrian lines, where the men were having hot coffee served out to them. The smell of the coffee drove me crazy. I could no longer resist and I shouted out in the hope of being discovered. I knew I would be shot, but then I hoped that I would taste the coffee. I tried hard to shout but failed. I had completely lost my voice. I must have lost consciousness because I lost count of time and must have slept for many hours before my mind cleared and I decided to go on. It was still dark, possibly another day had gone by, and as I crawled on, being too weak to walk upright, I tumbled into a dugout, where an officer was asleep.

"Probably he was dreaming of food and mistook me for the spectre of hunger. I stood still and waited. When I knew that the officer was sound asleep again from his regular breathing I crawled out and carefully climbed over the parapet of a trench, letting myself fall on the opposite side. The snow was high and soft and I fell without noise. Besides, the Austrians, like their officer, were all asleep. I already felt free, but I had to get over the wire entanglements and crawl over such a long stretch of ground that I thought I had made a mistake and that the Austrian trench I left behind me was merely a support position. As I hesitated what to do, a voice came out of the darkness: "Alt! Chi va la?" (Halt! who goes there?) I understood what the words meant so I stood up and shouted: 'Roman! Roman!' and when the Italians saw me I could see the astonishment in their faces. I did not look human. They pulled me up and carried me inside their trench. They gave me coffee, wine, and bread."

Put the garbage can on wooden casters and it will be found a saving of energy.

Retrenchment the Watchword

(By Bernard K. Sandwell.)

Canada's Imports from U. S. A.	$664,219,653
Canada's Exports to U. S. A. -	$280,616,230

EVERY dollar unnecessarily spent by a Canadian (individual, corporation, or government) to-day is a dollar diverted from the urgent task of maintaining the economic activity and national prosperity of the country.

Only the most rigid retrenchment—economy is too mild a word—will suffice to keep this country in a sound and safe position during the remaining period of the war and the opening months of the peace readjustment.

The need for economy has been preached by far-sighted citizens for several years past, but with very little effect on the public at large. Urged to practice thrift for various academic reasons, and in preparation for certain distant and vaguely-understood contingencies, Canadians have curtailed a few specific extravagances and gone cheerfully on with most of their ordinary expenditures, comforting themselves with the thought that the country has managed to do without thrift for the last twenty-five years and should therefore be able to continue.

But Canada is to-day faced by an entirely new situation. This country, for years among the heaviest per capita borrowers in the world, is now not merely precluded from any further borrowing of new capital, but is unable to collect cash for her own present output, and must either contrive to finance her own customers or cease to find a market for a large proportion of her products.

With the entry of the United States into the war, and the mobilization of the financial resources of that country for the service of the Allied cause, the last available market for funds was closed to Canada. In the month of August not a dollar of Canadian municipal financing was done in the United States. The terms exacted for the recent Dominion Government loan in New York made it evident that no further assistance need be looked for from that quarter.

While the United States is making, and will continue to make, large advances to various Allied countries, the condition of these advances is that practically the whole sum supplied shall be spent in the lending country. This condition debars Canada from participating in such advances, for Canada's need is for cash for the carrying on of her own industries of war equipment and food production.

At the same time, the willingness of the United States to finance the orders of the Allied belligerents, when placed with American producers, has naturally led the Allies to refuse to place orders in any country which cannot grant the same terms. The present reduction in activity in Canadian munition plants is due not to any cessation of demand from Europe for munitions, but to the fact that Canada cannot compete with the United States in offering financial accommodation to the purchasers.

Until she was excluded from the American money market, Canada had been able for some time past to extend partial financial accommodation to the Allied countries for the supplies which they obtained here, and this without enforcing upon herself any strict regimen of thrift. But this was due in part to the fact that while lending to her customers she was herself borrowing from her neighbor. The sales of Canadian bonds of all classes in the United States in 1915 were $154,000,000, and in 1916 $267,000,000. This year the Dominion Government has sold $100,000,000 and municipalities about $7,000,000. Under these circumstances it was not difficult for Canada to make advances to the Allies, on the purchase of munitions in this country, which at the end of July totalled $385,000,000. The difficulty consists in continuing this process without any aid from the United States; and not only in continuing it, but in increasing the range of the transactions upon which such credit is granted—for the Finance Minister recently announced that arrangements had been made by the Government to furnish Great Britain with $40,000,000 for the purchase of Canadian cheese and $10,000,000 for hay, oats and flour. There is good reason to expect that a similar accommodation must be extended to Great Britain for a large part of the export of foodstuffs for the present fiscal year; the magnitude of this item is instanced by the fact that the export of wheat alone to Great Britain for the fiscal year ending March 31 last amounted to $104,839,996, and wheat flour to $26,006,000.

The only way in which Canada can possess herself of the funds necessary for this immense and unprecedented task of financing her customers is by rigidly curtailing her own expenditures on all unnecessary objects. Particularly is it necessary that all superfluous imports should be stopped. In the last fiscal year Canada imported from the United States no less than $664,219,653 worth of commodities, while exporting to that country only $280,616,230. These imports included $15,000,000 of automobiles and parts thereof, $10,000,000 of fresh fruits, $2,400,000 of musical instruments, over $3,000,000 of furs and manufactures thereof, $2,000,000 of "fancy articles," $3,500,000 of vegetables, $4,850,000 of tobacco and its products, and many millions of dollars of smaller items for articles which can be dispensed with wholly or in large part without any grave difficulty. In addition to these articles, which reach Canada in the form of finished luxuries, there is an undistinguishable amount, which must be very large, of various raw materials which are employed in the manufacture of luxuries in Canada itself; to say nothing of the commodities which, while not luxuries in themselves, are made use of by extravagant consumption or by being used where cheaper or domestic products would do just as well. Canada, while compelled to extend credit upon almost everything which she herself sells abroad, is obliged to pay cash for all of these imports, which are consequently draining the resources of the country without conferring any real benefit upon any part of it.

Few if any luxuries that are consumed in Canada do not contain a considerable proportion of imported goods among their raw materials, even if they are not wholly of foreign origin. But even in the case of luxuries entirely produced in Canada, if any such there be, the case against their consumption is equally strong. Their production diverts Canadian labor from the production of commodities saleable abroad, and thereby increases the balance of trade against this country; and the funds employed in their production are needed for the financing of export trade.

Under the heading of "luxuries" and "unnecessaries" come, at the present time, all capital expenditures which will not be immediately productive of an increasing export of commodities. This includes all municipal and government works which affect merely the convenience or comfort of the citizens. Broadly speaking, no public works are justifiable at the present juncture except those which remove an immediate menace to health or an immediate obstruction to the processes of production or trade. This is a time for the patching up of old plant rather than the substitution of new, however much outworn the old may be.

To repeat: Every dollar unnecessarily spent by Canadian (individual, corporation, or government) to-day, is a dollar diverted from the urgent task of maintaining the economic activity and national prosperity of the country.

Melon Pickle.

Prepare the melon rind, cut into small pieces and soak in strong alum (10 cents' worth) and cold water for one day and one night. Then rinse and boil until tender. Skim out and drain. Put into a kettle 1 quart of vinegar, 3 1-2 pounds of sugar, 2 tablespoons of whole cloves, 2 tablespoons of whole cinnamon and boil to a syrup. Cook the rind in this vinegar until well seasoned. Heat the vinegar the second and third days and pour hot over the pickle.

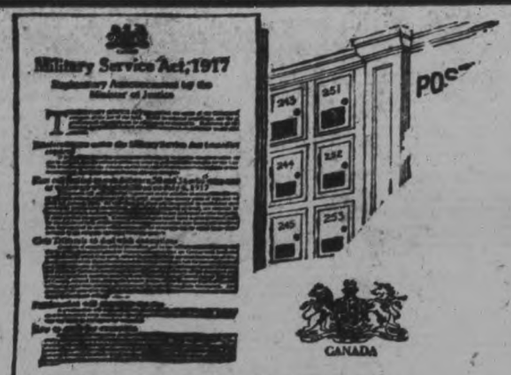
REPRESENTING 26,000 READERS



Should You Be Exempt?

Every facility is afforded those who have reasonable ground for applying for exemption under the Military Service Act. Each man's case will be considered by a local, civil board, sitting in the locality where he lives, and will be decided as is desirable in the national interest.

The idea behind the Military Service Act is to call up first only those whose absence from civilian occupations will cause least disturbance to the country's economic and social life. One hundred thousand reinforcements—no more—are to be raised under the Act.

Cases of Exemption

Over 1,250 civic tribunals have been organized throughout Canada, known as Exemption Tribunals. These Boards are comprised of 2 members, one appointed by the county judge and one by a joint committee of Parliament. It will be seen that these tribunals are non-military and independent. The members are men closely acquainted with conditions in the places where they sit and will be able to give each case sympathetic attention.

National Interest Will Govern Exemptions

Consideration will be given to applications for exemption received from men engaged in the production or manufacture of commodities necessary to the conduct of the war and the support of those at home, and cases in which real hardship would be caused by the withdrawal. Not all men who register these claims will be exempted, but such claims will receive careful attention. National interest must govern.

Promptness is Essential

Prompt application for exemption is strongly urged upon all who, being included in the first class, believe they deserve exemption. But first visit a Medical Board and find out if any further action is required. Unless the Medical examination places you in Category A, you will have no immediate obligation for service.

A SERBIAN TRICK.

How Deserters Were Used to Get More Deserters.

"We will want more bread in the first line to-morrow," said a captain in my hearing. "We expect many deserters."

Every army receives deserters, but I had never heard before of an army making preparations to receive them. The story that was told me illustrates the extremely personal nature of the fighting in Macedonia. The Serbians had directed a number of Bulgarian prisoners to wash their faces and brush their clothes and slick back their hair. Then the captors distributed much soup and stew and lamb broiled in strips over the coals of a wood fire.

"Now sit down," was the order, "and look pleasant."

The stuffed and shining men dropped on the grass and lolled about in garden-party attitudes. The picture which an army photographer took of them is the most ridiculous thing in the Balkans. The grinning Bulgarians entered into the spirit of the affair, and put their arms about each other's necks, and draped themselves in elaborate postures and featured the large hunks of bread and the strips of beautifully greasy meat and the steaming cans of coffee. Except for certain details of clothing and the guards in the background it might have been a basket-picnic. The Serbs tied copies of this picture to stones and threw them into the Bulgarian trenches.

"See how well we treat your brothers?" ran the legend. "Come on over."

They came for a time. Then the bait ceased to attract more deserters, though the Serbs dangled it never so wisely before enemy eyes. After a time the Serbian officer who had been responsible for the plan to get deserters by advertising made inquiries along the best follow-up methods in use commercially. He wrote letters to his prospective customers and threw them into the Bulgarian trenches. He wanted to know what was the trouble? Were not the samples of his goods convincing? The Bulgarians said they were not.

"Our brothers smile in the picture," was the reply, "but how do we know what they are thinking?"

The Serbian officer considered for a time. Then he visited the prison camp, armed with much writing-paper and many pencils.

"Write to your friends at the front," said he, "and tell them truthfully how well you have been treated.

So that for days that squad of enemy soldiers, sat in the sun and sternly sucked the tips of their lead-pencils and gazed into gray distance for inspiration and painfully wrote down their testimony. The essence of the Serbian plan was that each letter should be addressed by a captured Bulgarian to his nearest friend in the trenches opposite. Perhaps the letters did not always reach the men to whom they were written, but the success of the plan was ample. It forced the Bulgarian officers to abandon their comfortable dugouts in the rear of the line and stay in the unpleasant front trenches to keep their men from leaking away. The correspondence school of prisoners was the winter's joke on Wetternich.

"It was our Yankee trick," the Serbs said, laughing.—Herbert Corey in Harper's Magazine.

Camels Despise Bullets.

The Camel Transport Corps, although not exactly a fighting force, has been in action and received its baptism of fire, says a correspondent of The Manchester Guardian." No shell or bullet can excite the stolid, contemplative animal; but it might have been expected that the camel drivers, unarmed and untrained for war, would have run for it at the first sign of attack. Yet, in fact most of them responded admirably to the call of their British officers and stuck to their animals while bullets whizzed around. With characteristic simplicity, or it may be obstinacy, when told to bring in their camels to shelter they insisted on taking with them the blankets which are issued to every man, lest they should be stolen in their absence. Some wanted to mount a hill under fire to get their money from their tents.

The contempt which a Soudanese stalwart feels for the modern long-range fighting was expressed by one head-man—the more warlike Soudanese regularly act as head-men over the Egyptian fellaheen—who remarked, as the shells burst, that in his country they "fought it out with knives."

Chaplin May Fight.

The inimitable motion-picture performer who is known to all the habitable world immune to German censorship as Charlie Chaplin, has taken the great war and his relationship to it very seriously. Like Harry Lauder, he has put a large part of his professional earnings into British bonds. On June 5 he was among the first to register, at Los Angeles, Cal., and, under the call of his native England, he will cross the ocean and report for military duty at an early date. Meanwhile, he will enter into no new film contracts. Whether it shall be screened or not, however, he has never appeared in a more creditable role than that of an obedient son to his mother country.

Torpedoes From a Submarine.

The torpedo from a submarine can be fired either while the submarine is on the surface or completely submerged. Usually a submarine comes within ten feet of the surface, with only the periscope showing, and discharges its torpedo. If there is danger of the submarine being fired upon by the ship the submarine gets the proper position of the ship, submerges itself completely and then fires.

LIFE ON A WARSHIP

Home, Workshop, School, Club and Theater All In One.

RULE OF RIGID DISCIPLINE.

Laxness Is Not Tolerated, Because Responsibility Rests Upon the Shoulders of Every Man on Board—The Duties From Captain to Seaman.

The modern battleship is probably the most complete and complex machine man has ever produced, and, though the picturesque features which surrounded the wooden man-of-war of years ago have gone, their place has been taken by features a thousand times more interesting and inspiring.

The modern battleship is the last word in a cold, brutal fighting machine that is also a home for a thousand men—a machine that fairly radiates personality and proves itself both a workshop and a self supporting community, able not only to clothe and feed, teach, employ and amuse those who live in it, but also to supply virtually everything that the average man's comfort or interest demands. Truly the modern battleship offers community life developed to the highest degree.

Probably, too, there is no more complete and startling proof of the value of rigid discipline, drill and co-operation for maintaining not only efficiency, but also safety, than that given on a battleship.

Responsibility rests on the shoulders of every man on board, and vital responsibility rests on the shoulders of many hundreds among the thousand.

That is why practical, not theoretical, training is necessary, why the maneuvers at Guantanamo are the most valuable side of naval life, why laxness is not tolerated. Too many million dollars' worth of property and too many hundreds of lives are at stake to permit of inefficiency or carelessness.

With such a complexity of duties in mind as fall to every man from common seaman to captain, one may readily understand why the government wants only its best and most intelligent among the young men of the country in its navy.

At the top, with full command and responsibility, stands the captain, the administrator. He is perhaps as near an absolute monarch when at sea as the civilized world offers.

After the captain comes the executive officer, on whose shoulders his chief places responsibility for maintaining the general and military efficiency of the ship. He is the captain's representative, and to him every question is referred. The heads of departments and all officers and men are under his direct orders.

Under the executive officer, who may have one of several ranks, but on the larger ships is likely to be a lieutenant commander, comes the first lieutenant. To him are delegated the care and order of the vessel. In short, he is "the housekeeper."

Then, day and night, some officer must be in temporary and full charge of the deck. His headquarters are on the bridge. He is known as the officer of the deck. On these officers rests the main executive control.

At the heads of the various departments are the medical and pay officers, the officer in command of the marines, or "sea soldiers;" the chief engineer, who has charge of the motive machinery and lighting and heating plants; the navigator, the gunnery or ordnance officer, who is responsible for the real work for which the ship is built—that of destruction—and the chaplain. These men, with their direct subordinates, down to the younger ensigns, form what is called the ward-room mess.

The captain, however, dines alone. Other messes, or "families," dining together are those formed by the junior, the warrant and the petty officers.

Divided up among the various departments of the ship are the warrant officers and the petty officers of many classes and grades. The boatswain and his mates, acting under the executive officer and lieutenant, have charge of the decks, anchors and cables. They summon the crew to its duties by whistle and pass on all orders to the men. They are the experts in seamanship.

The gunners and their mates have charge of the ship's ordnance and electrical equipment, under the ordnance officer or his division officers.

The carpenters and their mates have as their duty the maintenance, in good condition, of the ship. The quartermaster and his assistants come under the navigator and see to the carrying out of all orders which have to do with navigation. The masters at arms act as ship police. The yeomen form the clerical force in the different departments. Coxswains act as boat crew commanders.—Richard Smith in An Arizona City of Distances.

Mesa (Ariz.) streets are eighty feet wide, and every block comprises ten acres. A residence building site there averages about an acre. When you ask an address in Mesa and the obliging inhabitant directs you to walk six blocks it doesn't sound far, but you realize the distance before you arrive. WORK OF THE CHICKADEE.

This Little Bird Is a Formidable Foe of the Cankerworm.

In May the chickadees build their nests in the cavity of a decayed tree trunk or limb and line them with moss, plant down and feathers. From five to eight white eggs spotted with reddish brown are laid in each soft cradle. The chickadees eat in the summer many insects and their eggs. Farmers dread the cankerworm, which, unchecked, completely destroys apple orchards. At one meal this tiny bird will eat 250 eggs of the cankerworm and will have several meals a day.

During its migration in October the chickadee is more numerous in the New England states than in the summer. Throughout the greater part of its range, from Labrador to Maryland and in the Alleghenies southward to North Carolina, these merry midgets are found at all seasons. But it is with the fall and winter that they are generally associated. No one need feel lonely when these little black and white birds are around. They are so friendly and tame and some of their notes sound so much like words that they seem to be talking. Besides the familiar "chick-a-dee" call they have a high, sweet whistle of two or three notes.

In the autumn the partridge berries are ripe, and upon them these birds have many a feast. And later the berries of the wintergreen, Solomon's seal, dogwood and Indian cucumber may be used as food.

OLD NEW ENGLAND CUSTOMS.

In the Days When Brides Were Stolen and Had to Be Ransomed.

A half savage custom prevailed in many early New England towns. A group of those young men who had not been invited to the wedding would invade the house when the marriage ceremony had been performed and drag away the bride to an inn or some other house, when the groom and his party would follow and rescue her by paying a forfeit of a dinner to the bride stealers. In western Massachusetts this custom lingered until Revolutionary times. In Judd's "History of Hadley" the names of stolen brides are given. Mrs. Job Marsh, married in 1783, is said to have been the last bride thus stolen. A very rough variation of this custom is reported to be still in vogue in some localities in Rhode Island. Mme. Sarah Knights in her journal of a horseback ride from Boston to New York in 1704 tells of a ridiculous alteration of this marriage custom, which she saw in Connecticut—to steal the bridegroom.

Many other curious fashions prevailed in different localities. In some towns the young men rode or ran to the bride's house for a bottle of rum. In others the bees were told of the wedding and given bride cake. In still others the unmarried girls scrambled for the bride's garter to see who would be married next.—Alice Morse Earle in Magazine of American History.

High Cost of High Living.

According to James Churchill, one of the famous New York restaurateurs, it costs the men who cater to the great throng of cabaret diners some $700,317,000 a year to keep things going in the proper Gotham style. In itemized form he reckons rent at 40 millions, license tax and stamps 30¾ millions, payroll 175¾ millions, supplies 327 millions.

This neat little sum is merely what it costs the proprietors, be it understood. The amount paid in by regular and occasional habitues of the "lobster palaces" may safely be put at 50 per cent more, or $1,063,975,500. Yes, high living comes high, and it is time to think of having less of it.

How Coal Was Named.

The name of coal was first applied only to fuel made of charred wood or what we call charcoal, says an exchange. When the use of mineral coal began it was called sea coal, because it was at first only found along the seashore along with seaweed and other wreckage cast up by the waves and thus supposed to be of marine origin. From its resemblance in color and burning qualities to charcoal, it finally received the simple name of coal.

Humor.

Humor is the true sixth sense. Lacking it, one misseth the joy of living. It lurks under the serious affairs of life as a violet lurketh under the trees of the forest and when so found is more to be prized than that which shouteth itself from the housetops.

Potatoes.

The stem end of a potato is the end that was attached to the vine; the opposite end is the seed end. The seed end might be called the top of the potato and the stem end the bottom. The buds at the seed end swell and grow first.

She Is Brave Now.

In the Woman's Home Companion a writer says:

"Most people stand somewhat in awe of waiters, I find. They tip more than they can afford because they do not want to seem like a 'piker' in the waiter's eyes. Well, I am done worrying about what waiters are thinking about me. I make it a point now to let them worry about what I think about them. In the first joy of finding that I could get my rights by standing up for them I kicked to the captain of a dining car about the conduct of a waiter and later sent back some unripe fruit with perfect composure. The captain corrected the waiter. The unripe fruit was removed from my bill. It wasn't a bit of trouble. I didn't even raise my voice. But there was no mistake about what I meant.

"Since then waiters have had no terrors for me. When I don't get the treatment I ought to have I call the captain, or the head waiter, and ask what is the matter. He does the rest. And I tip regularly, but not lavishly."

President Fillmore.

Present day passion for setting unappreciated historical characters in a new light has now reached President Millard Fillmore. A symposium by sixteen American publishers says of him: He abolished debt imprisonment and religious test oaths for witnesses in court. He fostered new postage rates and induced congress to make an appropriation for testing the electric telegraph. He sent Perry on his famous expedition to Japan, with instructions for action that won the "open door" and laid the foundation for American-Japanese friendship. In his retirement as a citizen of Buffalo Fillmore laid the foundations of most of its present cultural institutions. Always he was an opponent of war and a constructive statesman. But he lacked those qualities as a man and those ambitions as a politician which might have made him popular while he lived and read about today.

Don't Neglect the Teeth.

The teeth are an important factor in maintaining health. Poor, irregular, decayed teeth cause foul breath and do not permit the thorough mastication of food. This creates intestinal disorders, caused by lumps of partly masticated food lying and fermenting in the stomach.

All food must be in a liquid state before it can pass into the intestinal tract, so if this task be continually imposed on the stomach it produces distress.

The mouth is indicative of character and as expressive as the eye. Refined and particular people do not neglect the appearance of the teeth.

A reasonable amount of care, a good dentifrice and a fairly stiff brush—all these give pearly teeth, a clean, sweet breath, ruby lips and a feeling of perfect cleanliness.

Floating Islands.

Many floating islands have at various periods been found voyaging on the Atlantic. These islands were originally part of the low lying river banks, which broke away under stress of storm or flood and floated out to sea. The Orinoco, the Amazon, the La Plata and other tropical rivers often send forth such pieces of their shores. Some of the bits of land are of large size and carry animals, insects and vegetation, even at times including trees, the roots of which serve to hold the land intact, while their branches and leaves serve as sails for the wind. Generally the waves break up these islands shortly after they put to sea, but sometimes, under favorable conditions, they travel long distances.

How Friends Are Made.

Two women with babies in their arms sat beside each other in a trolley car.

First one baby mumbled something, then the other until they became real friendly. Then one mother told the other how cute the babies got along together.

Before the car had reached the destination of the first woman each had invited the other to call.

OPEN NOSTRILS! END A COLD OR CATARRH

How To Get Relief When Head and Nose are Stuffed Up.

Count fifty! Your cold in head or catarrh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more snuffling, hawking, mucous discharge, dryness or headache; no struggling for breath at night.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothing and healing the swollen or inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable. Relief is sure.

Growth of the English Language.

A study of the relative growth of the leading languages in the last hundred years shows that English has risen from fifth to first place. In 1900 it was spoken by about one-eighth of the inhabitants of the civilized world; today it is the language of about one-third.

Besides this, English has taken the place that French occupied much less than 100 years ago as the international language. Its speech is ever becoming wider, for the inhabitants of all India are finding it necessary; it is now a required study in the high schools of Japan, and those of China are teaching it to millions of students.

Would it be too rash to predict that by the year 2000 English will be the language of all the world and other tongues will have become merely local in their use?

"Magic" Cloths.

Many housewives gladly pay 25 cents for so called "magic" cloths, as they are very useful for silver and other metals. Being dry, they do not soil the hands or clothing and do their work until the cloth itself wears out. To make such a cloth take one quart of gasoline, one-half pound of whiting and one-eighth ounce of oleic acid, mixing all together and shaking well. Soak pieces of woolen cloth in the mixture and hang them in the open air in a shady place to dry. When the cloths are dry the "magic" qualities have been given to them, and these they will never lose. The material must be wool.

BRITISH DRIVE IN FLANDERS WILL END IN THE FOE'S ROUT

Only a Sudden Collapse of Hostilities Can Prevent This Result---Hindenburg Has Been on the Defensive Ever Since the Somme Battle and Field Marshal Haig Has Defeated His Different Defence Methods One By One.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FLANDERS, October 18.—The war on the western front to-day has entered a new phase and probably its last. The fighting is as different now from what it was in 1914 and 1915, as it could possibly be. First there was open warfare—when the Germans swept over Belgium and France. Second there came trench fighting, which slowly developed until the taking of a single trench was an operation as big as Waterloo. Now one sees practically open country battles with the enemy engaging in a sort of rear-guard action which when fully expanded will mean a Prussian rout.

Only the sudden collapse of hostilities can precent this curtain on the Kaiser's three-act drama. Not since the Crown Prince broke his eaglet feathers against Verdun more than a year ago, have the German armies dared a real offensive on the western front. Since the Somme Hindenburg has been openly on the defensive, and the present methods of fighting are a direct outcome of thit General's groping to find a means to hold out. The Somme battles were a series of storming operations, the taking of trench systems that stretched for miles in veritable mazes of supporting cuts and channels. So long as Hindenburg believed he might still break through the Allies' lines he continued this trench warfare. He kept his front lines full of men. Tens of thousands of his troops were killed before he awoke to the realization that he was losing his punch. Hindenburg dug the trenches and dugouts deeper—often twenty or even thirty feet below ground. But his men still died like rats in traps when the British Tommies threw bombs down the dugout openings or rolled charges of high explosives down the almost perpendicular stairs. In the fire trenches where Hindenburg kept his troops standing shoulder to shoulder to repel attacks, the Allied shells tore whole companies to shreds. While the great German tactician blundered on, British and French guns thundered, and the superb German labyrinths of trench became an appalling shambles. At last Hindenburg saw a sight.

A DEFENSIVE WAR FOR FOE.

The offensive was no longer his. He must fight henceforth a defensive war. The Teutons' retreat on the Somme last winter was step number one. He abandoned his once precious trenches, now become a shell hole littered with the putrifying corpses of German youths.

Hindenburg's next step was observed during the battle of Arras. His trenches were still there but now thinly manned. The bulk of the troops were kept in support trenches hundreds of yards behind. But his plan was still faulty, and later at Messines in June German troops were more widely scattered. Machine guns were no longer fired from trenches, but from special isolated posts. Also trench mortars and specially trained counter-attacking troops were held in readiness to charge the tired British as soon as the objectives had been won. But the British got on just the same. And Hindenburg began to lose faith in trenches.

July 31, the beginning of the battle of Flanders found the Germans still differently disposed. They were occupying their trenches not so much as concrete shell holes, two or three linked together with short tunnels, "pill boxes"—steel and concrete shell turrets whose made covered tops were just above the ground—made their debut and from their narrow slits machine guns spat death over the Flemish quagmires. These shell-hole positions and "pill boxes" with scraps of trenches a few yards long, plus patches of barbed wire entanblements here and there, covered an area a mile or so in depth, and such a thing as a fire trench had ceased to exist. The idea, of course, as British officers explained it to-day, was to make it necessary for the British to fire a million rounds of shells to kill a dozen men. The shell holes and pill box tops were well nigh invisible from the air, and only a direct hit suffices to put them entirely out of commission. Then when the Tommies advanced they would come across an unsuspected bit of barbed wire enfiladed by machine guns fire, and finally after crossing such a zone as this, they would meet fresh troops in a terrific counter-attack. The plan worked only partially. Then came the battle of Menin Road, when the unheard of creeping barrage used by the British took the fight out of even the pill boxes. The rain of shells flattened everything. Likewise the same terrible curtain of fire often swept away German counter-attacking groups before they got started. Such is the fighting to-day. It is now Hindenburg's move.

LONDON, October 18. — To-day's official says: The hostile artillery was active during the night south of the Ypres-Comines Canal, and in the neighbourhoods of Zonnebeke and Broodseinde. London troops made a successful raid last night in the neighbourhood of Gavrelle. Several of the enemy were killed or made prisoners. Our casualties were light. Otherwise there is nothing to report from the battle front.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, October 18.—Eleven German airplanes were shot down by the French yesterday, or driven to earth in the German lines in damaged condition. Nancy was again attacked, this time by a squadron of thirty German machines. There were many civilian casualties. French aviators dropped many projectiles on the railroad stations at Courcelles, Thieville, Mezieres and Waimille, factories at Pagordange and on numerous munitions depots and bivouacs.

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE EMPLOYER IS VERY HEAVY

Must Ascertain and Report Which If Any of the Men in His Employ Have Failed to Comply With Call Under Military Service Act

PENALTIES PRESCRIBED

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.— The duties of employers under the military service act are laid down in regulations which will be issued shortly. After the issue of any proclamation, the regulations lay down, it is the duty of every employer to make inquiries as to which, if any, of his employees are among the men called out by the proclamation. After the time limit for reporting for service or claiming exemption has expired (in the present case, November 10) every employer must ascertain if any of his men have failed to report or to claim exemption. The employee is required to answer any questions put to him by his employer for this purpose. The employer must then report which, if any, of his men have failed to comply with the call. An employer who refuses or neglects to comply with the regulation is liable to a fine of not more than $100 and not less than $50 for each employee, or to imprisonment to a term not exceeding three months or to both fine and imprisonment.

An employer who knowingly retains in his service a deserter or a man absent without leave is liable to imprisonment for not more than six months or a fine of not less than $100 and not more than $500.

Decisions Unanimous, Else Appeal.

In regard to Local Tribunals the regulations lay down that each question shall be decided by a unanimous vote. If the two members of the tribunal cannot agree they have to state a case in writing for submission to an Appeal Tribunal. If they cannot agree in stating a case each member of the tribunal will state a case from his own point of view and forward it to the Provincial Registrar.

Must Perform Non-combatant Work.

A Local Tribunal is not to allow an application for exemption on conscientious grounds unless the applicant signifies in writing his willingness to perform, when required, non-combatant work or service, including service in the Army Medical Corps, the Army Service Corps and the Mechanical Transport.

Provision for Appeal.

A person aggrieved by a decision of the Local Tribunal or the military representative may take the case to an Appeal Tribunal. Notice of this must be given not later than three clear days after the date on which notice of the decision of the tribunal was received by the applicant or by the military representative.

Choosing A Leader

Choice at Liberal Conference in Toronto Seems to Lie Between Wm. Proudfoot, M.P.P., and Hartley Dewart, M.P.P.

FOUR ARE MENTIONED

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Oct. 18.— Ontario Liberals are choosing a leader to-day. Answering the call of Charles Hurdman, M.P.P., the assistant whip, the Liberal M.P.P.'s and candidates flocked into Toronto to attend the conference, for such it is called. It is not a convention.

Four men, all members of the legislature, are mentioned as possible leaders of the Provincial Party. They are Wm. Proudfoot, M.P.P., H. H. Dewart, M.P.P., Charles M. Bowman, M. P.P., and Samuel Carter, M.P.P.

The indications are that the choice rests between Messrs Proudfoot and Dewart. It is said that Mr. Bowman is not after it and would not take it if he had the offer. Mr. Carter treats the matter in a light and merry manner and seems not to take his chances seriously.

Mr. Dewart said that he had not figured on being in any fight for the leadership.

"Yes, I will probably attend the conference," he said smilingly.

"And you'll have something to say?"

"I never speak out of my turn."

"Will you accept the leadership?"

"I cannot say whether I will accept what has not been offered me."

"What do you think of the new Union Government?'

"It is not consummated yet. I cannot pronounce judgment on it so early"

Mr. Dewart declared that in his view the conference to-day would merely choose a parliamentary leader for the next session of the house.

SHOULD BE CONVENTION.

"I think that after the next session there should be a convention called to have all the Liberals of the province represented there and it should formulate a new policy and choose a leader for the Ontario party. It seems to me that the leader to be chosen today should be only the parliamentary leader for the present, and he will have to follow the lines of policy that have been laid down in the last years.

Mr. Dewart stated that when he entered the field in Southwest Toronto he had absolutely no thought of taking the leadership in Ontario. "Now it seems, that some people have associated my name with it," he remarked. "That is all I can say."

Mr. Bowman, when seen by your correspondent, was Sphinx-like in his silence.

"What—me a leader?" Mr. Carter exclaimed in mock surprise. Why I am an Independent. Allan Studholme and I have been a party by ourselves. I don't know which is the leader. I think we split only once last session and that was about the killing of calves.

"What are your chances for Ontario leadership?" was asked William Proudfoot, K.C., M.P.P. for Huron Centre while he was on a legal brief. "I have not looked for it," he said with a smile, "and I am not looking for it. In fact I have not spoken to any persons about it."

MR. ROWELL'S MESSAGE.

Hon. N. W. Rowell, the M.P.P.'s and candidates met at the National Club at one o'clock. It is understood that at the conference, Mr. Rowell delivered his retiring message and explained to his followers why he had considered it his duty to leave the Provincial House and take a post in the new Cabinet. When Mr. Rowell announced his retirement as Liberal leader in the legislature, Mr. J. A. Pinard, East Ottawa, replied by the following letter, a copy of which he handed over to-day: "I can neither approve nor reprove your motives, but must say that I have no sympathy with leaders who abandon their party to join a coalition which gives no guarantee of better administration on the eve of an election which I for myself have no doubt will result in Canada giving itself an honest administration, energetic, effective and imbued with motives unmixedly patriotic."

Ready To Instal The New Lights

The Utilities Commission is ready to proceed with the installation of incandescent lights in place of the arc lights now in use. For each arc light that is removed about five incandescents will be substituted.

The Fire, Water and Light committee of the City Council will be consulted as to the distribution of the new lights. The passing of the antequated flaming arc lights will occasion no regret as the new service will be much more satisfactory and economical in operation.

FEW REGISTRATIONS HERE SO FAR UNDER THE MILITARY SERVICE ACT

LAWLESSNESS REIGNS IN STRICKEN RUSSIA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, October 18.—The Times to-day devotes one column to the Russian despatches describing the startling growth of anarchy and lawlessness in Russia. In Petrograd alone, the correspondent says, eighteen thousand criminals are being sought by the police. Questionable resorts and clubs are multiplying. Gambling is enormously on the increase at the resorts, the minimum stake being twenty thousand rubles. There are many accidents in the streets from motor cars colliding, and tram cars being derailed, and robberies are increasing. In fact no one seems to care about anything. The Government, he says, is combatting the malady through the assistance of district committees.

$5,000 VOTED TO BRITISH RED CROSS SOCIETY BY COUNCIL

Matter Was Disposed of at a Special Meeting Held Last Evening —Money May Be Raised on Debenture Plan

THE DISCUSSION

Vote the money first and leave the problem of raising it for future deliberation, was the spirit in which the Council passed a five-thousand-dollar grant to the British Red Cross Society, at a special meeting held last evening. There is not sufficient funds in the treasury to meet the grant and the Council have a choice of creating a deficit or raise the money by the issue of debentures. "It may mean a debit balance to the city, but it will be a credit balance to the country" was Mr. F. D. Kerr's apt remark when the question of raising the money came up for discussion.

A large and representative deputation faced the Council when the meeting was called to order. Mr. P. Campbell, who occupied one of the front line trenches, asked for the sum of five thousand dollars, or a larger amount if possible. He said that the demand for funds came from the headquarters in Toronto.

From Overseas.

"The demand did not come from the headquarters in Toronto, it came from overseas," observed Mr. Kerr. He urged the Council to look upon the grant as a fixed charge to continue in force for the duration of the war. "Do not leave the matter for next year's Council to deal with" counselled Mr. Kerr with a vision that extended into the past.

Mr. J. J. Turner recalled Ald. Dobbin's definition of a delegation and a deputation. A deputation came to ask for something, and a delegation usully took something away. "We are a delegation," remarked Mr. Turner.

Mr. R. J. Soden urged speedy and liberal action.

Mr. J. Wearing referred to the obligation as a small part of the huge debt which Canada owes to the motherland. This is our opportunity to repay a portion of that debt," said Mr. Wearing.

Col. J. W. Miller emphasized the need for funds and the splendid work that is being accomplished by the British Red Cross Society.

Was Unanimous.

Mayor Duffus said that he felt he was voicing the sentiments of the Council when he said that the Council, as a body, was unanimous in its approval of the grant, but were doubtful as to where the money was coming from. "There is no more worthy cause," said Mayor Duffus.

Ald. Stratton recalled his attempts early in the year to have a fraction of a mill added to the rate for the purpose of meeting such contingencies. He objected to an overdraft.

Ald. Langford said he was careful about spending money, but he had no hesitation in moving that a grant of five thousand dollars be made to the British Red Cross Society, and that the matter of providing the money be left to he Finance Committee. This motion was seconded by Ald. Worth and carried unanimously.

Ald. Smith favoured the debenture plan of raising the money.

TOTAL RESULTS SO FAR.

Number examined	692
Fit for trenches	397
Fit for non-combatant overseas	40
Fit for duty in Canada	56
Unfit for any duty	199

Up to noon to-day almost 700 men had been examined by the local Medical Board at the Armouries, of which approximately 400 had been found fit for the trenches. The exact figures were 397 Category A men out of 692 men examined. At yesterday's sessions and again this morning practically all the men examined were from the rural districts, and with one or two exceptions they gave their occupation as farmers. The percentage of men from outside the town being examined does not mean that all local men coming in Class One under the Act have been examined. Just now those coming from outside are being given the preference by the Board, and residents of the city are asked to come back again.

The total number of examinations made yesterday was 52, exactly the same total as was reached on Tuesday. Yesterday, however, there were more Class A men and fewer total rejections, the Category E men numbering only sixteen for the day.

At yesterday afternoon's session the results were:

Category A	13
Category B	1
Category C	1
Category E	3

Last night the results were as follows:

Category A	12
Category B	1
Category E	5

FRANK JENNE Says

Boys will be men—the little chap you knew a few years ago is now a strapping young men. That's one reason why I keep High school suits for boys, for it's never too early for a boy to learn that "something better" in clothes increases his self-confidence and enforces his self-respect. Not so much money as you would think when you first see the suit. "Come to me."

TECHNICAL NIGHT SCHOOL NOTICE

It has been found advisable to open a third class in Dressmaking. It is to be held on Thursday night, starting to-night.

Not One Category A Man Has Reported For Service and Fifty-Four Out of Fifty-Five Men Who Registered Have Claimed Exemption.

WILL HAVE TO HURRY

Although the local Post Office has been ready since noon on Saturday last to issue report forms and exemption blanks to the men of Class One of the Military Service Act, up to 10.30 o'clock this morning there had only been fifty-five registrations. Of this number only one has expressed himself as ready to serve when called upon and he is a Category C III. man, whose services are not likely to be needed at all.

The other fifty-four wanted exemptions.

With nearly seven hundred men examined here so far and the Medical Board handling over fifty men a day there should be about one hundred applications daily at the local post office. Instead of that there has been only a daily average of about a dozen. Last night there were only six or seven Class One eligibles at the post office to register, and every one of the squad asked for exemption blanks. They were all handled within half an hour and no more applicants appeared.

Postmaster's Ultimatum.

The failure of the men affected to respond has caused Postmaster Edgar to issue an ultimatum:

"I will tell the public," he remarked to the Examiner this morning, "that if there are not more men on hand to-night this will be the last chance to register at night. I have had the office open in the evenings for the benefit of Class One men. If they do not want to take advantage of this accommodation they will have to take their chances during the regular hours."

So there is the situation. All Class One men must claim exemption or report for service before November 10th. So far only fifty-five have done so. There are only twenty-one days excluding Sundays, left. Every man who has not complied with the law on or before that date will be treated as a deserter under military law and even if he has good grounds for exemption forfeits his claim, if he has not applied before the date mentioned in the proclamation. It is up to the men affected to realize the seriousness of the situation.

Most of the men who have asked for exemption so far are Category A men. B, C and E men have not put in their appearance in any considerable numbers, although all they have to do is to ask for exemption on physical grounds and that will dispose of their cases under the present call. If they are ever called out for service there will be sittings of the tribunals to hear any other claims for exemption they may have. But for the present the exemption boards will only have to deal with Category A men.

Kingston Conference.

Peterborough men who have been appointed to act as military representatives of the tribunals are in Kingston to-day to attend a conference at which they will be instructed as to their duties. Among the representatives from here are Mayor Duffus, and Fred Long of the Great War Veterans, the latter having been appointed to serve in connection with the tribunals at Centreville.

WHY BUTTER IS STRONG—IN PRICE.

The Chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Montreal Chamber of Commerce (Board of Trade) declares that the customs duty on butter (4 cents per pound) is a factor in increasing the price of butter in Canada. The butter dealers, he says, base the butter prices ruling in the productive season in Canada on the prices ruling during the unproductive period in the United States, when the prices there are higher than here, and add to the price duty freight and war tax, that would be imposed on butter imported from the United States, though as a matter of fact there is so little butter imported that there is really no competition between Canadian and United States butter. He advocates the removal of the duty on both butter and eggs, and claims that the Canadian farmers do not profit from the high prices.

The Chamber of Commerce expert, who is a butter dealer, himself, declares that the Canadian consumers pay nearly a million and a half more for butter than they would do with the duty removed.

When we add to the other causes of high butter prices the artificial scarcity caused by hoarding millions of pounds in cold storage we see the high price of butter partly explained, and no remedy provided. Even margarine, which would enable the poor to buy some low-priced butter substitute, is barred from the country. Mr. Hanna, our food controller, is talking of admitting margarine into Canada, but it seems he can't do it without the consent of the cold storage monopolists, for it is said that he is consulting them before taking action.

"What is the matter with Hanna?"

CIVIL SERVICE CLEANSING.

The Ottawa Journal-Press canvasses at length the question of Civil Service reform, arguing, rightly enough, perhaps, that government patronage is the rock upon which the Union Government will split—if the filling of necessary offices is left subject to the old spirit of partizanship, from which, the new ministers being human, can hardly, at a moment's notice, divest themselves. If we are to have a real union government—a complete subordination of partizanship to the work of winning the war, it must be union all through, not in spots—all wool, not a mixture of the coat of the sheep and the goats.

The Government organ looks for much from the reorganization of the Civil Service Commission by the appointment of Hon. Dr. Roche to the chairmanship, a man who has "shown himself a capable administrator of one of the largest departments." Personally, there is little objection to Dr. Roche, but the circumstances of his appointment do not promise so much for the complete elimination of partizanship. He is not an appointee of the Union Government; his appointment was the last act of the head of a partizan government, who made sure that an office with important emolument attached went to a faithful partizan. It does not seem promising that the best head for a commission "whose duty it is to see that merit, not party, controls government appointments," should owe his place to an exhibition of undiluted partizanship. If the new union government divests itself of the partizan spirit of patronage one elemen of it must leave a good deal of partizan spirit behind it.

The Journal claims, as an aid to civil service reform, that Sir Robert Borden has been a "life-long advocate of the merit system in making Civil Service appointments." If this is true he has carefully concealed his sentiments as far as action is concerned. He has had six years of opportunity and has made it lost opportunity. He has been urged and urged to apply to the outside civil service the merit system with which Sir Wilfrid Laurier endowed the inside civil service in his time. Sir Robert failed to move, and as a result the partizan spirit has been rampant through all the trying years of the war, and has been responsible for the shameful scandals, inefficiency, and waste of money and effort that have mrked many phases of war administration.

The Journal says truthfully:

"The extension of the operations of the Commission to the outside Civil Service would be of inestimable benefit to the country."

If this would be of "inestimable benefit" why has it not been done before, and why has it not been better provided for by making the Civil Service Commission non-partizan or at least with the added element of the union government fairly represented upon the commission?

The Journal also truthfully says:

"The vacancies in the public service from this time on should be thrown open to competition, and the selection of the persons best fited to fill the vacancies should be made by machinery that knows no political party and that is animated by but one thing, namely, efficiency."

"Efficiency" is what we are after. That is why a union government was formed in order that the curse of partizanship in the public service that has done so much to promote inefficiency might be eliminated. Liberas, have united with Conservatives to form a union government, but it should not be a mere union of personnel, but a union of war-winning spirit to which all partizan considerations must yield. Popular suporpt and confidence will be encouraged if it is known that this spirit applies to the emoluments of service and that all have equal access to them.

The Hydro-Electric is proof of what citizens working without the handicap of partizanship, can do.

A LITTLE PREMATURE.

Thee Globe joins the Minister of Justice in his premature rejoicing over the destruction of party by the formation of a union government, by gloating over the woes of the office seeker, whose "occupation is gone" under union government. There is more justice for its specific, than its general, claim of death to the party seeker. It says:

"As if Union Government was not a hard enough blow at the office-seekers, Hon. Frank Carvell has been appointed Minister of Public Works. One can almost hear the aggregated moaning of another class of the community filling the air. "How can these things be?" is their plaint. "What have we done to deserve this?" they cry. For them the day of the rake-off and the frame-up is ended. They must live up to specifications in their dealings with a great spending department, like the honest men with whom they compete. Can anyone imagine a contractor, whose principles are not as clear as crystal, whispering to the Hon. Frank the suggestion of an understanding that might help pay election expenses? If so, then his fancy could carry the scene a little farther, and he would have little trouble in picturing the new Minister of Public Works nailing another hide to the wall, and, with a grim smile on his lips and the light of battle in his eyes, humming the words of the refrain:

"He skins 'em alive."

If Union Government has not yet done anything else, it has sounded the death-knell of the professional office-seekers and grafters."

While there may be, waiting developments, some doubt of the closing generality, it is probable that the "death-knell" will be sounded in the purlieus of the De partment of Public Works. When Mr. Carvell was sniping from the "cold shades," he brought down a rather tidy bag. He made bullseyes on the drug profiteers, the "horse thieves" (figuratively speaking), and the munition profiteers; and if office has not cooled his zest—if the echoes of his departmental quarters do not suggest dreams of the way to "win elections"—Mr. Carvell will be a terror to office seekers. As to the rest of the cabinet we must wait a wee and see. We mustn't expect the political millenium to burst upon us, all at once, like a tropical sunrise.

PREACHING AND PRACTICE.

Sir Joseph Flavelle probably realizes now that it is poor policy to make speeches, especially when they are printed and placed away on record, to be trotted out at some very inconvenient date in the future. For instance, since the pig probe has made it quite certain that the Baron has made quite well out of the war time trade, papers have been fond of repeating the following extract from a speech by Flavelle:

"What have we to do with profits in this war? I would like to send profits to hell, where they belong."

Now, that's fine. Having got the hell stuff out of his system, Sir Joe made a contract with the British government by which cost price was guaranteed and market prices paid. That was too good a chance to be shoved over to his Satanic Majesty, so the Baron kept the profits.

Again, he was quite het up when speaking before the Canadian Club in Ottawa, on December 16, 1916. The Baron said:

"I bring it to you to whatever extent you will permit, as serious a note as I am capable of inditing, that this great struggle, all the sacrifices that are being made by your sons and your brothers and your fathers, all that these people at home are suffering, call upon us to burn up the dross, and to pray God that we may be wise and patriotic, and truthful and heart-searching in our relations to ourselves, and that we seek above all to be right."

Well, now, a man who can rattle off literary gems like that ought to be recognized. There's whole buckets-full of emotion, and quite a decent sized heap of pathos and heart-throbs in the thing, too. And after having thus spoken, he went out and proceeded to "clean up" on the bacon business. No doubt Mr. Flavelle means that people should do as he says, rather than to do as he does.—Guelph Mercury.

THE UN-BRITISH CHARACTER OF THE DISGRACEFUL FRANCHISE ACT

In the first session of the new Parliament the War-Time Franchise Act ought to be repealed, not as a law whose usefulness is gone, but as a disgrace to the statute book. It is an Act which would never have been proposed by a Union Government. Whatever partizanship or racial prejudice may say, it is un-British and unjust, and it involves the grossest kind of breach of good faith with Canadian citizens and British subjects whom we had invited to come to Canada and share our work and our opportunities. It discriminates unfairly not only against citizens of foreign birth, but against many women of the British race.

The Union Government cannot, at the coming election, restore the rights and liberties that were taken away by the dead Parliament in its dying hours. But it can, by its administration of the law, reduce its power for mischief in the commission of fraud. The law is so framed as to give the widest powers for preventing the expression of the popular will, for multiplying votes on one side and killing them on the other.

A war-time election ought to be a fair election. It ought to be carried out in the spirit of the cause for which we are contending. The allies are fighting for liberty, for democracy, and for justice. The law violates all these principles. It embodies the spirit of those who treated the guarantee of Belgian neutrality as a scrap of paper. It was Prussian in its contempt for rights of franchise. The excuse that was urged for it was the Prussian excuse, the tyrant plea of necessity. It was intended to serve, not a cause, but a party. At the very first opportunity it should be repealed.

No crime that Parliament can commit is worse or more dangerous than tampering with the franchise. Parliament is the servant, not the master, of the people, and it should be willing to accept the judgment of the people. If Parliament is allowed to hack and chop the franchise, to disfranchise this or that class of the community to serve its own purposes or those of a Government, it becomes an unjust franchise that the Prussian Junkers maintain their ascendancy in Prussia and in Germany. We must not follow that black example. We must be particularly careful to keep our own honour unstained, the liberties of our own people inviolate, the basis of our democracy firm and broad. —Toronto Star.

THE DEVIL RESIGNS

The following from the St. Paul Despatch, will prove interesting reading:

Louis Syberkrop, of Creston, has acquired much fame in recent weeks as author of a satire on Kaiser Wilhelm. Requests have come to him from Tumulty, Secretary Daniels and Roosevelt, and people in every state of the Union and in Canada have asked for copies of Mr. Syberkrop's article. It is:

'The Infernal Region.
"June 28, 1917.

"To Wilhelm von Hohenzollern, King of Prussia, Emperor of all Germany and Envoy Extraordinary of Almighty God:

"My Dear Wilhelm:

"I can call you by that familiar name for I have always been very close to you, much closer than you could ever know.

"From the time that you were yet an undeveloped being in your mother's womb I have shaped your destiny for my own purpose.

"In the days of Rome I created a roughneck known in history as Nero; he was a vulgar character and suited my purpose at that particular time. In these modern days a classic demon and efficient super-criminal was needed and as I know the Hohenzollern blood I picked you as my special instrument to place on earth an annex of hell. I gave you abnormal ambition, likewise an over supply of egotism that you might not discover your own failings; I twisted your mind to that of a mad man with certain normal tendencies to carry you by, a most dangerous character placed in power; I gave you the power of a hypnotist and a certain magnetic force that you might sway your people. I am responsible for the deformed arm that hangs helpless on your left, for your crippled condition embitters your life and destroys all noble impulses that might otherwise cause me anxiety, but your strong sword arm is driven by your ambition that squelches all sentiment and pity; I placed in your soul a deep hatred for all things English, for of all nations on earth I hate England most; wherever England plants her flag she brings order out of chaos and the hated Cross follows the Union Jack; under her rule wild tribes become tillers of the soil and in due time practical citizens; she is the great civilizer of the globe and I HATE HER. I planted in your soul a cruel hatred for your mother because SHE was English and left my good friend Bismarck to fan the flame I kindled. Recent history proves how well our work was done. It broke your royal mother's heart, but I gained my purpose.

"The inherited disease of the Hohenzollerns killed yuor father, just as it will kill you, and you became the ruler of Germany and a toot of mine sooner than I expected.

"To assist you and further hasten my work I sent you three evil spirits, Nietzsche, Treitschke and later Bernhardi, whose teachings inflamed the youths of Germany, who in good time would be willing and loyal subjects and eager to spill their blood and pull your chestnuts, yours and mine; the spell has been perfect—you cast your ambitious eyes toward the Mediterranean, Egypt, India and the Dardanelles and you began your great railway to Bagdad, but the ambitious arenduke and his more ambitions wife stood in your way. It was then that I sowed the seed in your heart that blossomed into the assassination of the Duke and his wife, and all hell smiled when it saw how cleverly you saddled the crime on to Serbia. I saw you set sails for the fjords of Norway and I knew you would prove an alibi. How cleverly done, so much like your noble grandfather, who also secured an assassin to remove old King Frederick of Denmark, and later robbed that country of two provinces that gave Germany an opportunity to become a naval power. Murder is dirty work, but it takes a Hohenzollern to make away and get by.

"Your opportunity was at hand; you set the world on fire and bells of hell were ringing; your rape on Belgium caused much joy, it was the beginning, the foundation of a perfect hell on earth, the destruction of noble cathedrals and other infinite works of art was hailed with joy in the infernal regions. You made war on friends and foe alike and the murder of civilians showed my teachings had borne fruit. Your treachery toward neutral nations hastened a universal upheaval, the thing I most desired. Your under-sea warfare is a master stroke, from the smallest mackerel pot to the great Lusitania you show no favourites; as a war Lord you stand supreme, for you have no mercy; you have no consideration for the baby clinging to its mother's breasts as they both go down into the deep together, only to be torn apart and leisurely devoured by sharks down among the corals.

"I have strolled over the battlefields of Belgium and France. I have seen your hand of destruction everywhere; it's all your work, super-fiend that I made you. I have seen the fields of Poland; now a wilderness fit for prowling beasts only; no merry children in Poland now; they all succumbed to frost and starvation—I drifted down into Galicia where formerly Jews and Gentiles lived happily together; I found but ruins and ashes; I felt a curious pride in my pupil for it was all above my expectation. I was in Belgium when you drove the peaceful population before you like cattle into slavery; you separated man and wife and forced them to labour in the trenches. I have seen the most fiendish rape committed on young women and those who were forced into maternity were cursing the father of their offspring and I began to doubt if my own inferno was really up to date.

"You have taken millions of dollars from innocent victims and called it indemnity; you have lived fat on the land you usurped and sent the real owners away to starvation. You have strayed away from all legalized war methods and introduced a code of your own. You have killed and robbed the people of friendly nations and destroyed their property. You are a liar, a hypocrite and a bluffer of the highest magnitude. You are a part of mine and yet you pose as a personal friend of God. Ah, Wilhelm, you are a wonder. You wantonly destroy all things in your path and leave nothing for coming generations.

"I was amazed when I saw you form a partnership with the impossible Turk, the chronic killer of Christians, and you a devout worshipper in the Lutheran church. I confess, Wilhelm, you are a puzzle at times. A Mohammedan army, commanded by German officers, assisting one another in massacreing Christians is a new line of warfare. When a Prussian officer can witness a nude woman being disemboweled by a swarthy Turk, committing a double murder with one cut of his saber and calmly stand by and see a house full of innocent Armenians locked up, the house saturated with oil and fired, then my teachings did not stop with you, but have been extended to the whole German nation. I confess my Satanic soul grew sick and there and then I knew the pupil had become the master. I am a back number, and my dear Wilhelm, I abdicate in your favour. The great key of hell will be turned over to you. The gavel that has struck the doom of damned souls since time began is yours. I am satisfied with what I have done; that my abdication in your favour is for the very best interests of hell—in the future I am at your majesty's service. Affectionately and sincerely,

"LUCIFER H. SATAN."

Refers to Peterboro Boy

"In a recent letter received by J. D. Kenneally, of Cochrane, from Lieutenant Harold McKay, of the 31st Battery in France, and forwarded to the former's sister, Miss Margaret Kenneally in Sudbury, tells of her brother, Sergt. John Laughlin Kenneally, a popular and well known Sudbury soldier, being wounded while in action. A portion of the letter reads: "Just a line to let you know that your brother, Jack, stopped one to-day, but outside of a bad finger is quite O.K., and is on his way to flirt with the nurses in Blighty. Jack was right there with the goods all the time and I am mighty glad he got off so well. His commission will most probably catch up with him before he returns to France, and for which we will all be glad, as he certainly deserves it. He has been the best Sergeant in the Battery and always managed to bring home the bacon in anything he took on." —Sudbury Star.

Laughlin Kenneally is a Peterborough boy. His mother, Mrs. Emma Kennedy, resides at 269 Thomas street.

If you are Suffering from Backache, Kidney Trouble or Rheumatism take

DR. BANTA'S KIDNEY AND RHEUMATIC PILLS

They have Helped Hundreds of Citizens of Peterborough the past year and they will help you. It is a wonderful Remedy for Diseases of the Kidney and Bladder, it puts them in proper running order and rids the system of the acids that cause these terrible bodily ills.

BACKACHE Nothing takes the life and activity out of a man so quickly as the dreadful Backache or Lumbago that is a direct result of a deranged condition of the kidneys and bladder. You don't need telling, if you have a backache, and that is a sure sign of overworked kidneys that have too much poisonous acid to expel from the blood, and they are unable to handle it. It will bring joy to hundreds of such sufferers to know that Dr. Banta's Kidney Pills are guaranteed to cure these ailments, or you get your money back from a responsible dealer right in your home town.

A Guarantee

This Medicine is sold on the understanding that if the purchaser has not been benefitted after one or two boxes the amount paid will be refunded.

RHEUMATISM Comes in many disguises all due to the condition of the blood, which is overburdened with acid poison and shows that the kidneys are out of order. With the kidneys and bladder in a diseased condition, literally clogged with matter they are unable to expel, there can be no relief from the terrible pains of Rheumatism. Rheumatic pains are classed as acute, chronic or muscular, largely in the joints and sometimes accompanied by swelling that refuses to be reduced. In its early stages Rheumatism can be quickly relieved by using Dr. Banta's Kidney Pills to help the kidneys to do their work and get them in condition again. Long established cases may be stubborn but are bound to yield to continued treatment. Your money back if they fail—

So Positive are we that you will find this Medicine of Great Value to You that we make the above offer. ¶ Sold in Peterborough at LYNCH'S DRUG STORE, 168 Hunter Street, and every purchaser has their Guarantee Behind It.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

A BOY CORNETIST.

The following from the London Advertizer refers to a grandson of Mr. Chas. Seymour, Sr., Smith St., and will be read with interest by the many friends of the family here:

Master Charles Wesley McCarthy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCarthy, who has the distinction of being the first juvenile in London to learn the bagpipes, is also a cornetist of marked ability. To-morrow night, in fact, he is playing a solo at the sacred concert in the Majestic Theatre, and his cornet work was a feature which aroused much enthusiasm at the festival of music and dancing arranged by Mrs. Alice Henderson last spring. Charlie, moreover, played on this occasion with the Juvenile Pipe Band, of which he is a leading member.

Charlie probably is distinguished as being London's original juvenile piper owing to a combination of circumstances. In the first place he belongs to a musical family, for some generations back. He has marked musical talent himself, and was a skillful performer on the cornet when one day Mrs. Alice Henderson, who is a friend of his mother, mentioned that she was thinking or organizing a Juvenile Pipe Band to furnish the music for the Scotch dancing of her pupils (famous dancing, at that). Now, it so happened that once upon a time a Scotch gentleman had presented a "chanter" to the McCarthy family. Learning to play on any instrument, as everybody knows, isn't particularly enjoyable for the listeners. Has it entered into the head of the average individual to conceive what it must be to listen to the operation of learning to play tunes on an instrument of the lung power and other well-known qualities of the bagpipes?

In any case, a merciful dispensation has ordained that learning tunes on the bagpipes shall be in the nature of absent treatment, with the chanter as a substitute. When the chanter has been mastered the aspirant for pibroch honours learn to blow up, tune, and otherwise manipulate the awesome pipes, then proceeds to play, without further ado, the tunes that just need to be transferred from the chanter.

"I believe I will make use of that chanter of ours," said Mrs. McCarthy, when she heard about the juvenile pipe band. Charlie was just as interested as his mother, and forthwith set out to learn the chanter and the pipes under Pipe Major MacDonald. This was a year ago last July. In the meantime several other London juniors have taken up the pipes, and these, with the drummers, form the juvenile pipe band which provided music at the Western Fair, and is already becoming quite famous.

Charlie was only seven years old when his parents attended a concert one evening, and were very much pleased with a cornet solo. They made up their minds they would like to have a cornet and probably have one of the children learn it. Charlie took to it at once, and was fortunate in having an older sister, Lillian, learning the piano, who could play his accompaniments.

Five younger children than Charlie in the McCarthy family also show marked musical talent. There is a wee tot of a girl, just five years old, who is perfect in rhythm. As the big brother plays she seizes the drum sticks and beats on anything which is convenient in absolute time. Then there are two little boys between her and Charlie who are also making good progress with the piano. The drummer girl has wanted a violin ever since she was three, and hearing that Isolde Menges, the famous English violinist, who was here last week, had started the violin when she was just three, the McCarthy parents are considering the advisability of letting their little daughter make a beginning in her musical career as early as possible.

INTELLIGIBLE SINGING WANTED

Do Vocal Teachers Neglect Enunciation?

When a choirmaster declared at a church meeting that it was his desire that his choirsters should sing intelligently, the Pastor made an admirable and pertinent interpolation. "And intelligibly" he said. Why do so many singers fail to get the words int the ear of the man in the back seat?

One reason lies in the careless manner in which most Canadians use the English language in their ordinary conversation. "Onever heardasuchathink" is a common way of saying "I never heard of such a thing" and "Whaddyesay" for a question of four words is not unknown even in our best society. The first duty of a singer is to learn the English language and to speak it with propriety. Then he or she must remember a cardinal principle of vocal art: that in singing one must pronounce the words twice as distinctly as in measured and cultured speech.

In one particular vocal teachers are at fault. They spend so much time upon the vowels that the poor consonants become a family of Cinderellas sitting neglected in dark places. Vowel sounds the important, indeed vital. All tone is produced on vowels. But if vowel tone is to be useful in song it must begin and end properly. Hundreds of singers do not know that the pronunciation of a consonant is as instantaneous as a rifle-shot. It cannot be delayed or drawled. Therefore special care must be taken to compel the organs of speech to perform their function accurately. Final consonants, especially those following a broad vowel are slovened over. Take the line "Deep as the sea." Not one singer out of twenty will pronounce the "p" in "deep" so that it can be heard three feet away. He or she will go through the motion of pronouncing it, but no sound will come. Then also our lip muscles are stiff from lack of use. Singers who desire to be intelligible will be wise to fix for themselves a series of lip exercises based on the explosive pronounciation of consonants. The result of such exercise would amaze them.

HOW IMMIGRATION HELPED THE CAUSE OF MUSIC.

As far as Canada is concerned, music has been helped by immigration. There is much conjecturing just now as to an after the war immigration policy, but looking back it is readily seen to what an extent the cause of music in our country has been advanced by the coming to our midst of those from across the ocean who desired to make new homes for themselves in this fertile Dominion.

Like other branches of art, music has prospered in the old world. In the new countries, people are taken up with clearing the land, expending energy on the making of a living, and are necessarily deprived of those advantages that are only possible to an appreciable extent in thickly populted communities. During the years when immigration flowed to our shores there came those who had been reared in an atmosphere of music and to them and their children we owe a deep debt of gratitude.

From among this class came a goodly proportion of our church organists, orchestra players, bandsmen and music teachers. Be it said to their credit, many of them were firm believers in having music in their homes. Apart altogether from our brethren from the British Isles, who have done a very great deal for the advancement of music in Canada, those who came from the foreign countries of Europe brought the love of singing and playing in their hearts.

It astonishes one, who has not had occasion to know, to learn to what extent our foreign population are purchasers of talking records. Many of them delight in the opera records. Their children soak up the musical training the public schools give like a large sponge in a dribble of water. If the greatness of Canada's future lies to a very substantial extent in the new citizenship moulded from a fusion of temperaments, then to the rank and file of our foreigners will much credit be due for the introduction of more music among the masses.

To the advanced musicians from Britain and Europe who came to us and have since become staunch and loyal Canadians goes a good measure of credit for musical leadership. With the foundation that is laid, may everyone do his part in making Canada a really musical country.

MUSIC CHASES THE BLUES

In thinking of the helpfulness of music there is frequent neglect in not dwelling upon the power of music to counteract what is commonly called the blues. Yet it is doubtful if any other phase of music has been a greater boon to humanity. The power to counteract also becomes the power to prevent. If any member of the family gets down in the mouth over his or her work, or the cares of life, or the particular situations that confront one periodically tend to depress, then the prescription is music—and lots of it.

If one desires to guard against such feelings the sure way is to encourage the opposite feeling of joyousness, confidence and good will. Then too the prescription is more music. Take the discouraged college students, pictured by one of our modern story writers. He was as some say "in the depths," when just above his head somebody began playing Mendelssohn's Spring Song. He listened enchanted in spite of his wretchedness. He could almost hear the birds singing in the budding branches of white-blooming trees, seeing the butterflies as they flickered from flower to flower, smelling the riotous perfumes of a germinating and nascent world.

The pianist played as if he too were happy. The instrument seemed to be singing joyously in answer to his loving touch, and the student was carried with the pianist up, up to a higher plane above the dust and smoke of self-pity and self-deprecation and sullenness, to where it is man's right to live.

For this reason we must have music in our homes and have it in unstinted measure.

MUSIC NOTES.

Many a man who would not intrust his wife with the choice of his ties permits her to assume full charge of the musical education of his children.

Even the most democratic society is not compromised by joining the aristocracy of music lovers.

Children cannot very well choose their parents nor parents their children, but both can exercise considerable control ocer their musical environment.

It is certainly strang, that some of the most sanitary homes have indecent rags called music littered all over their parlors.

If there were as many chamber music circles in our homes as there are bridge parties what a generation of music lovers we should become!

Music is a higher revelation than the whole of wisdom and the whole of philosophy. He who penetrates the meaning of my music shall be freed from all the misery which afflicts others.—Beethoven.

If I had to live my life again, I somo poetry and listen to some good would have made it a rule to read music at least once every week.—Darwin.

STEALING FROM KRUPPS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 18. — Krupp firm is prosecuting sixty-two persons, many of them its own employees, for large thefts of steel, according to the Frankfurter Zeitung.

PATENT IS OBTAINED BY MR. WESTBYE

Local Man Has Perfected a Barking Drum

Mr. P. P. Westbye of the William Hamilton Co. received from Ottawa to-day patent papers covering the invention of a piece of machinery that will be used by pulp makers for the purpose of taking bark from pulp logs so they can be ground into pulp. Hitherto a machine has been used in skinning the logs that would take off with the bark a considerable percentage of fibre. Mr. Westbye's invention will save this loss, which is estimated at about ten per cent. of the logs treated. With the price of pulpwood at $10 per cord it is easily seen where the machine will effect a great saving in the amount of pulpwood treated. The machine, when built, will weigh about forty-five tons and will cost in the neighbourhood of $10,000 or $12,000 dollars and will be a source of help in the conservation of our fast depleting pulp wood resources.

A New Face Without Surgical Skin Peeling

The surgical operation of face peeling is too radical, too severe. There's a better way of removing offensive complexions and one that is entirely safe and rational. Ordinary mercolized wax causes the devitalized scarf skin to come off, but gradually and gently. Unlike the surgical process, the skin is not forcibly taken off in big pieces all at once, but almost invisible flaky particles are absorbed by the wax, and about two weeks are required to complete the transformation. There is no pain, no discomfort.

Nature renews complexions the same way, shedding tiny cutaneous scales day by day. But deficient circulation or other abnormal condition may interfere with the shedding—a "bad complexion" results. Then mercolized wax assists Nature by hastening the removal of the aged, faded or discolored top skin. Thus only the lively, young, healthy-fluid skin is in evidence, as in robust girlhood. This is why mercolized wax produces the indescribable beauty of ever-renewing youth. The wax is put on at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning. You can procure it at any druggist's; an ounce is sufficient.

COUNCIL WILL APPEAL TO THE PROVINCIAL BOARD FOR NEW WATER MAIN

Main When Extended Will Provide Adequate Water Service to All Parts of the City—Ald. Dobbin Reports on the Public Skating Rink Project--"Consideration Promised"

COUNCIL MEETING

If present plans do not miscarry the Provincial Board of Health will be asked to order the construction of a new water main in East City. At a special meeting of the City Council held last evening it was decided to appeal to the Provincial authorities rather than face the electors with a by-law. Should the Provincial Board of Health order the work done it will mean that East City will have an independent water supply and much greater fire protection will be provided for the centre of the city, also the plant of the Quaker Oats Company.

Skating Rinks.

Ald. Dobbin's report concerning the establishment of skating rinks in the north, west and south wards of the city was approved.

A committee comprising Ald. Dobbin, Stratton, McIntyre, City Solicitor Gordon and City Engineer Parsons will further consider the advisability of closing De Laval street.

County Buildings.

The matter of returning to the County authorities the city's share of the insurance money arising out of the fire at the County buildings, was referred to the Finance committee with instructions to obtain the advice of City Solicitor Gordon. By paying in this money which will go towards the reconstruction of the Court House building, the city will retain its interest in the County buildings. It was pointed out that this might be preferable to having the County authorities levy an assessment for the city's share of the maintenance cost.

Erect a Sign.

Permission was granted to the Leonard Construction Company to erect a sign on the island near the C. P. R. bridge crossing the Otonabee river, advertising the Company's connection with the reconstruction of the Quaker Oats plant. The sign is to be removed when the work is completed.

John Scott, a Chamberlen street grocer, will be permitted to erect a platform to extend a couple of feet on city property at a nominal rental of twenty-five cents a year.

W. Tinker, Aylmer street, wants permission to remove a tree in front of his property. The matter was referred to the Board of Works with power to Act.

Promised Consideration.

In a letter to the City Council Premier Hearst promised consideration to the city's request for authority to levy taxes on property recently acquired by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. The taxes lost to the city by the transfer of such properties amount to nearly eight thousand dollars.

A letter was received from Mr. J. J. Turner, thanking the Council on behalf of the Sunday School Association which meets here, for the Council's contribution of one hundred dollars for convention expenses.

The sidewalk on Clifton street will be repaired, also one on Jackson avenue. Ald. Smith favoured the Council with a resume of the survey entanglements that exist in the East Ward and the consequent difficulty of defining the street lines.

DISTRICT CONVENTION OF THE W. M. S. IS BEING HELD HERE

This morning's session of the District Convention of the Woman's Mission Society, in George Street Methodist Church, was attended by about seventy representatives from the different auxiliaries in the Peterborough district, including Bethany, Bailieboro, Bridgenorth, Lakefield, and the different Methodist churches in the city. A memorial service for those members of the society who had passed away during the year was conducted by Mrs. Lane of Trinity Methodist Church.

District Organizer.

Mrs. J. K. Moore, who has been District Organizer for some years, was re-elected to that office for the coming year.

Reports of Auxiliaries.

Satisfactory and encouraging reports were read from the different Auxiliaries and Circles affiliated.

New Auxiliaries.

New auxiliaries of the W.M.S. will be formed at Roseneath and at Mount Pleasant this year.

Gentlemen Present.

A new feature of the meeting was the attendance of several gentlemen.

Musical Programme.

Mrs. Renwick and Mr. Treneer contributed to the morning programme with solos.

Red Cross To Benefit If Belmont Wins

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 18. — Omar Khay-yam, Wilfrid Viaus' famous horse, at odds of four to five, is favourite in the big matched race with August Belmont's Hourless, at Laurel this afternoon. The race is for ten thousand dollars' stakes which will go to the Red Cross if Belmont wins. It is expected records will be broken. Horse lovers from all over Canada and the United States are here to see the contest.

MIDDLEMEN RESPONSIBLE

(Special to the Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Oct. 18. —The supernumerary, unnecessary and inefficient middleman, whose presence in the community is one of the most serious economic wastes of the day, whose low standards of efficiency set the standards of the whole community, is the chief cause of the high cost of living in Canada," in the opinion of W. J. Hanna, Food Controller. Yet he is beyond but the mildest powers of the Food Controller. Cannot be removed without precipitating disaster upon the whole community. Mr. Hanna cannot "cut down prices," "have food sold for cost" or "do away with the middleman" unless the consumers in the cities of Canada signify their willingness to face a complete disruption of all trades, a total break down of real estate values and the utter demoralization of labour conditions in their cities.

All this Mr. Hanna states in the first issue of the Canadian Food Bulletin, the official organ of the Food Controller, copies of which have just been issued.

Gift Of Socks Appreciated

Mrs. J. J. Lynch has received the following letter:

France, Sept. 28, 1917.

The Ladies of the West End Knitting Club per Mrs. J. J. Lynch, 455 Park Street, Peterborough.

Dear Friends,—I wish to thank you for the present of two pairs of socks, which reached me safely, yesterday. These articles are always most welcome, and are especially so now, as we have had a very wet summer over here, and the rainy Fall will soon be with us. Also the government issue is always inferior to the home-made article. I am much oblized both for your thoughtfulness and for the comfort the parcel will bring to me. I thank you also for your good wishes. We are all looking forward to a safe return home and hope it will be soon. The strange sights and new scenes of these countries would not weigh much against the chance of seeing the old home towns again. We know it must come soon, so we must carry on. Thanking you again for your kindness, I remain.

Yours very truly,

. Sapper F. W. Holmes,

RUSSIANS ENTRAPPED

Berlin Claims 10,000 Prisoners and Says Russian Fleet is Bagged

Canadian Press Despatch:

BERLIN, Oct. 18, (Bulletin), via London.— The Germans have taken 10,000 prisoners and 50 guns on Oesel Island, the War Office reports. Russian naval forces in the Gulf of Riga have been trapped by Germans according to an announcement. It says German naval units are lying in the eastern portion of Kassar Bay, north of Oesel Island, and are barring the passage westward. Portions of the German naval forces pressed forward through the mine field in the Gulf of Riga to the southern exit of Moon Sound. There was a short engagement with about 20 Russian warships, which later retired to Moon Sound.

THE PETERBOROUGH RED CROSS SOCIETY'S FINE WORK FOR PRISONERS

All the Peterborough Soldiers Who Are Prisoners in Germany Are Looked After by Local Society at a Cost For Each Man of $15 Per Month.

COST $5,970 THIS YEAR

It is over two years since the majority of our Peterborough boys were taken prisoners by the Germans. The local Red Cross Society, in addition to its other departments of work, has ever kept the welfare and feeding of these men in their captivity, as one of the most important branches of its many-sided activities. Nothing has ever stood in the way of the sending of sufficient money every month to pay for all our own men. Peterborough is too proud of its good name to let the provisioning of our men be paid for, even in part, by any other city or community. When we first started sending money for this purpose, the parcels cost $7.50 a month. Then the cost went up to $10, then as the price of food went higher they advanced to $12.50, and once again they were raised to $15 a month for each man. For some time they have stayed at $15, but it is quite probable that the cost may become even greater, but whatever it may be, the local society will not fail these men who have fought for us, but will continue to make their exile as bearable as possible.

During the year the society has paid to Mrs. Rivers Bulkely for this purpose alone, the sum of $5,970, in the coming year the cost will be even greater.

Mrs. Rivers Bulkely, in her official report to our Toronto Executive, states matters plainly, and we are quoting her report at length because we regret exceedingly the readiness with which some people send indiscreet letters to our newspapers, letters written by men when sorely disappointed at the non-arrival of a longed for parcel.

Such letters serve no good purpose, only affording excuse for some mean persons to refuse to help the Red Cross. On Tag Day, one prosperous looking farmer's wife refused to contribute because "they never get the parcels." Comment is needless. As we have stated so many times, the Society pledges its honour that 6 parcels (60 lbs. of food) is sent to each man every month. The Society's responsibility ends then, and that of the Germans begin.

If they fail to perform their part honourably, the fault cannot be laid against the Canadian Red Cross. Therefore we ask relatives and friends of prisoners to read carefully the following from Mrs. Rivers Bulkely's official report:

"There has, I regret to say, been a very considerable delay in the receipt of parcels by prisoners of war, and the Canadians seem to have unfortunately been amongst the worst sufferers. The reason for this latter fact is that since the new regulation forbidding the sending of private parcels we have been sending a great deal more than ever before and have been sending by the American Express Company. There is no doubt that these large parcels have been more seriously delayed than the postal ones. We are now dividing the parcels into smaller ones and sending through the post. Even this will not, I fear, obviate the ever increasing danger of sugmarines, the difficulties of transport and the fact that undoubtedly the Germans are taking a considerable proportion of the contents of the parcels. The Canadians who have escaped lately and who came from six different camps all gave more or less the same account. They added, however, that had they been in the same position as the German warders and been as hungry as they were they doubted whether they would have been able to part with any of the parcels.

"We have during this last week had 3,904 acknowledgment cards from prisoners. They are writing now in a very different strain and most of them I think realize that the delay was not the fault of the Canadian Red Cross Society and regret some of the things they wrote both to us and their relatives. It is easy to understand how great the strain must be after two years' imprisonment and one really does not wonder at any bitterness in their remarks when the longed-for parcels do not arrive. I am sorry to say, however, that many of the cards state that things have been removed from the parcels, and from many camps we hear that the tins are all opened on arrival in camp and of course if the men are away on working parties the contents have gone bad before they reach them. In several camps it appears the tins are not forwarded at all to the men away on kommando. Other articles besides soap seem now to be confiscated fairly regularly by the Germans. In spite of these facts, however, the men seem much more contented and there is no doubt that the smaller parcels sent more frequently will insure more getting to them and also getting to them more rapidly.

"The members of the London War Committee visited this department on Tuesday last and inspected all the detail of the various branches of the work. They displayed great interest in the way the files, ledger cards, etc., are kept.

"On Thursday the committee went into all the detail of the packing, checking and despatch of parcels. They went first to the Civil Service Stores premises on Regent Street, where we have our special rooms and and where the provision parcels are packed by employees of the Civil Service Stores, but where Mrs. Johnston of this department inspects the contents, sees that the labels are pasted on each box for every man (two labels per box), checks and labels with the list sent from here, and again checks the receipted list from the Post Office with her list. By this method of double checking it seems practically impossible that any man can be missed or sent more than his authorized number of three parcels a fortnight. The committee then went to Sackville Street, the premises lent us by Messrs. T. Cook & Son. Here the clothing, boots and toilet articles are packed and the committee were able to see the kind of clothing, etc., which is being sent to the prisoners.

"I fear at the present most of the German railways are employed in conveying men and guns from the Eastern to the Western front. This is certainly causing delay in the mail from Germany and will probably cause delay again in parcels. Every prison camp in Germany has been under punishment for some time. During ten days all parcels were held up, and even now in many camps tins are removed and censored before the men get them. This means that frequently the contents are spoiled.

"The reason for this drastic treatment is that unfortunately many of the French parcels contained things which should not have been sent. I have seen the manager of the Central Committee and he advises us to go on sending the tinned things just the same as they have every hope that the embargo may be removed."

Among a large number of cards received last month acknowledging parcels is the following:

"I want to thank you for all your kindness to me, snice I have been so unfortunate enough to become a prisoner of war. The parcels from the Red Cross which you kindly subscribe for, are the only ones I can rely on coming regularly, and they have certainly been of great comfort to me. I would have written you sooner and oftener, only you know the restrictions we have on our mail service. I have addressed several cards of acknowledgment to you for parcels received which I hope you got. I am, as perhaps you know, quite recovered from my wounds and am quite myself again. We have had a fine summer over here, and we made two tennis courts in camp, and had some fine games. However, that is about the limit of our strenuous games. We have two musical entertainments a month given by ourselves, which are really very good. With best of good wishes and warm thanks. Yours very sincerely,

Harry C. Rogers.

SIR ADAM BECK MAY VISIT PETERBOROUGH

Will Be Invited to Discuss Power Situation—Big Increase in Consumption of Power

At last night's meeting of the City Council, Mayor Duffus gave a verbal report of his presence at a meeting of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, held in Toronto on Tuesday. The Mayor said that the power situation in Western Ontario was very critical, and many steam plants were being pressed into service to help make up for the power shortage. At the present time sixty-four million dollars have been invested in the Hydro power scheme. One year ago Peterborough was using fourteen thousand horse-power, and to-day thirty-four thousand horse-power is being used. This is three thousand horse-power less than the amount required. Private power interests are trying to throw a dam across the St. Lawrence River and also secure control of water powers at High Falls and the Long Sault. Mayor Duffus intimated that many of the Government representatives were not giving the Hydro Power Commission the support they should. He pointed out that while coal was going up in price, electricity was coming down in price.

The Council unanimously endorsed a resolution inviting Sir Adam Beck to visit this city on October the sixth and address a meeting in the Opera House.

Surprising Results Obtained Since Dr. Banta's Medicine Was Introduced in This City.

One year ago Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills were first introduced to the people of Central Ontario, and in that short time they have affected many cures and received more testimonials than any similar preparation on the Canadian market.

Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are guaranteed to cure Lumbago, Backache and Kidney Troubles, and if they fail to do what is claimed for them, your dealer is authorized to refund the price paid for them. Firms that advertise in this manner must have confidence in their preparation.

They are sold in Peterborough at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street. 1d-90-1w-42

Interesting Letter From Millbrook Boy

Former Millbrook Boy Returns After An Absence of Twenty-nine Years

MILLBROOK, Oct. 17.—The following extracts are from a letter written by Lance-Corp. F. W. B. Fitzgerald, to his parents:

Somewhere in France,
September 20, 1917.

It is now 11:30 p.m., and while I am waiting to go to bed, I will write a note. Seems that now even notes are very few, does it not, but you will understand that we are really busy, and I write as often as I can. My bed to-night, and for several nights to come, is on the orderly room table. As one end of the table is still in use, I cannot retire. It is a fine place to sleep, good and dry.

In the dugout in which Stony and I last lived, there was just room for us to lie down comfortably but, as perhaps I told you before, we had a stove in it on which we could cook everything fine when we could salvage anything to cook. Quite often, we made custard. Some custard powder, a tin of milk, and some hot water was all that was necessary. We left our stove at a Y.M.C.A. where there was a former 130th man working, and we can get it any time we return. We could have buried it and put a cross up, but that would have to be done at night. It would mean a considerable work, and possibly spoil the stove.

Did I tell you I had lost my kit bag, which held my great coat, cap, socks, razor, in fact everything I owned? It is rather inconvenient as I will have to write you for a new supply. For about ten days I could not get a shave (several others were in the same box), and I had a beautiful beard. One of the boys wanted to know when they started putting the Russians in with the Canadians.

The other day we walked about half a mile and filled our mess tins with the most luscious thimbleberries I ever tasted. The season was rather late, but I really never picked any berries which tasted better. Bob had some sugar which was just what was needed.

What is everything like over there now? I often think of what it would be like to be back wandering around the way I used to. The trees will have all changed colour by this time, and there will be the most wonderful moonlight nights.

Some time ago, just before I came to Brigade Headquarters, the moon was very bright for several nights, but that was the time I wanted it to be dark. I will telel you all about it some day. There were a lot of interesting things happened and I doubt if I will forget them before the war is over, even if it does continue for years.

There is a Canadian mail around, but my letters have not yet reached me. Saw John Armstrong the other evening. He is an artillery signaller.

Home on Visit.

Pte. Robt. Powell is visiting his sister, Mrs. Hamilton Lackey. Pte. Powell has seen service in France, but owing to illness, he has received his discharge. He is a son of the late Robt Powell, of Millbrook. It is twenty-nine years since Pte. Powell left this town, and made his home in British Columbia, where his wife and family reside. Bob's many friends in Millbrook were pleased to see him.

Germany Is Bluffing Once Again

Could Not Effectually Carry On Sub. Warfare on This Side of the Atlantic

(Special to The Toronto Star and The Peterborough Examiner.)

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Germany is bluffing again according to London's interpretation to-day of Amsterdam reports of a German wireless message hinting at the inclusion of American waters in the submarine zone. The belief of authoritive leaders expressed to the United Press was that if Germany did proclaim America within the zone of ruthlessness she would be unable effectually to carry out any submarine warfare. It is admitted she might send a few submarines to the American coast, and at the most might plant a few mines, but Germany is already using her submarines to their fullest capacity trying to starve out England. Moreover, long ago, she started out to disregard her zone limitations. Even if Germany should include America in her zone of U-boat operations, leading authorities were a unit in declaring such a step could not in any way effect the naval transport situation.

DOG QUARANTINE HAS BEEN RAISED

Leash Not Required For Dogs When They Appear on the Streets

No longer will the "bow-wows" of Peterborough be obliged to suffer the retraining influences of a leach. This phase of the dog by-law was removed last evening by the City Council. As the matter stands, dogs are permitted to roam at large, providing they are in charge of a competent person, and are not permitted to run at large.

"That means that should a dog run fifty yards away from its guardian, the owner will become liable?" inquired Ald. Langford.

"It will be up to the owners to see that their dogs do not constitute a nuisance," said Mayor Duffus.

The British Sub. Losses In The Past Week

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The full official statement issued by the British Admiralty last night regarding the shipping losses reads: Arrivals 2,124, sailings 2,094. News of Interest From Hastings

HASTINGS, Oct. 17.—On Wednesday last every road leading to Norwood was well travelled by people wending their way to Norwood Fair, where a record breaking crowd gathered and a good exhibit was on display.

A great many of our young people attended the concert in the evening and report a very large attendance.

The Public schools were closed on Wednesday afternoon to give everyone an opportunity to attend Norwood fair, and also on Thursday and Friday, when the teachers met in convention.

The local chapter of the I.O.D.E., ever on the alert to increase its funds, had a toll gate placed on the Norwood road on Wednesday, and requested a nickle from every vehicle passing through. Some $80 was thus realized, which will be used to provide comforts for the soldier boys at the front. The members met on Tuesday to pack the monthly boxes ready for shipment.

Dr. and Mrs. Huycke left on Monday for Kingston, where the doctor takes up hospital work. During the few years they have been citizens of Hastings, they have made warm friends, who regret very much their decision to leave, and who will follow them with best wishes for a successful future.

Mrs. A. Greenley of Toronto, is on a visit with friends in town.

The pulpit of the Methodist church was occupied on Sunday at both services by Rev. Mr. Swaine of Norham.

Rev. Isaac Snell was in Norham doing similar work there.

Quite a successful public auction sale was held on Saturday, when the household effects of the late A. P. Parson were disposed of. Alex. Wilson, auctioneer.

Miss Melissa Alford, of Lakefield, spent Saturday in town in the interest of the Peterborough Review.

A number of friends gathered at the home of Mrs. C. Fisher on Friday afternoon in honour of Nursing Sister Helen Fowlds. A good time is reported.

Miss McCutcheon of Peterborough, spent Saturday and Sunday in town, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Doxsee.

Mrs. Fred Brown is on a visit to her sister, Mrs. J. Oliver. Her many friends are pleased to see her around again after her recent serious illness.

Miss Flossie Carter has been in Peterborough visiting her aunt, Mrs. W. Atkinson.

Mrs. Smith and Miss Milligan, of Cobourg, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. Warner.

Mrs. V. German took a trip to Peterborough.

Mrs. Secord of Toronto, is holidaying with Dr. and Mrs. Hess.

Nursing Sister Helen Fowlds left on Monday to resume duty at the front. Her friends here will follow her with best wishes and prosperity.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

EXEMPT BUTTER AND CHEESE MAKERS.

QUEBEC, Oct. 17.—At a meeting of the Executive Council of the Dairy Producers' Association of Quebec, held to-day, it was decided to ask for exemption for all makers of butter and cheese. Dairy inspectors will be instructed to appear before the exemption boards and point out that butter and cheese makers are of more use at home than at the front.

Sir Adam Beck Emphasizes The Objections To Export Of Power

At Meeting of Ontario Municipal Representatives in Toronto--Also Shows the Importance to the People of St. Lawrence Development.

MAYOR DUFFUS PRESENT

"If a bituminous coal mine were discovered in Ontario worth $60,000,000, I wonder if the people of Ontario would not more seriously realize the great value and importance of the 'white coal' which is being employed in our service."

In these words, Sr Adam Beck indicated the potential value to this Province of the electric power available by the proposed damming of the St. Lawrence, at his conference on Tuesday afternoon in Toronto with the Mayors of twenty muncipalities of Ontario. Mayor Duffus represented Peterborough.

Resolutions were passed protesting against the exporting of power, requesting the appointment of a Senatorial represenative to safeguard the rights of the municipalities and the people who are engaged in the distribution of electrical energy as a public undertaking. The Municipal Electric Association, also reaffirmed its confidence in Sir Adam Beck, and objected to the influence of certain members of the Senate who have shown themselves antagonistic to Hydro interests and opposed to the principles of public ownership.

To a question from Mayor Duffus, Sir Adam Beck stated that the power rights at High Falls had been recently transferred to Mr. M. J. O'Brien by the Minister of Lands, Forests, and mines---a member of the Government.

The question of the retention of power in Ontario, particularly in the western end of the Province, for industrial requirements, was discussed by Sir Adam, who emphasized its seriousness. Electrical energy was needed at this time, especially by the munitions plants and should not be exported.

Power Exported.

"We hear little of the amount of hydraulic power that is being exported to the United States, but we find on investigation that the total amount of power exported to the United States from Canada -- Hydro power---is 273,787 h.p., of which 115,000 h.p. is being exported from Niagara alone. This is equivalent to 5,821,000 tons of coal. That is the true position of affairs. We ask for an equal division of all the power at Niagara Falls between Canada and the United States. Can there be any objection to the withdrawal of power hitherto exported when the parties interested have been warned?

Enormous Asset.

"Power which is now being used in the United States is, however, being developed in the Dominion of Canada; and when it is all said and done I do not bliève that it is in the real interests of the people on the other side that this should be so. We have in this country an enormous asset, and it should not be exploited or used to the advantage of corporations.

"I urge on this committee and on those who are here this afternoon---the eastern representatives especially ---that electrical energy should be conserved for our own use. I cannot believe that any advantage accruing to one part of the Province of Ontario will not ultimately result in a benefit to every part.

Great Expansion.

"We began by generating 14,000 horse-power, and in a very short time the actual power distributed went up to 34,000 horse power. We are prepared to install another year, and we will ultimately connect the Long Sault with Ottawa, with the Trent and with the great Niagara scheme. This is not imagination or supposition.

Munitions Board Demand.

"In this province we began in 1910 with 800 horse power; in 1911 we had 12,000 horsepower; in 1912, 28,000 horse power, and in the following year 50,000 horse power, and in 1914 82,000 horse power. In the latter year I wrote to the Minister of Inland Revenue, and gave him an outline of the power required for the years, 1915, 1916 and 1917. In my estimate I was only short between 10,000 and 20,000 horse power, notwithstanding the extra demand made by the Munitions Board for 22,000 horse power.

Limit Export.

"I wrote to the Minister, telling him what our power requirements were from year to year, asking him to limit the export of power, and suggesting that there should be no creation of vested rights. A definite and distinct warning was given to these corporations that sooner or later, according to the exigencies existing, the export of electrical power from this country would cease.

"At any rate," declared Sir Adam with emphasis, "distinct and definite warning was given to these corporations that export would stop. The Hon. Mr. Reid, acting Minister of Inland Revenue, was written to and informed of the situation, and it was taken for granted that the corporations interested would be told what the state of affairs really was.

Definite Warning.

"It was distinctly and emphatically stated that sooner or later there must eb a limitation to power export from this country and no one interested could possibly be taken by surprise. To show that this is absolutely correct the matter was investigated by experts and the Ontario Government were placed in possession of all the facts.

"Criticism had been levelled against the commission that they had embarked pell-mell in contracts with municipalities, but the commission was conversant with the requirements for munition plants, while at the same time its object was to serve the public, assist factories and help in war work generally. Those engaged in war contracts always had first consideration, and every effort was made to supply them with power for the turning out of the contracts that they had undertaken.

"As you know, Sir Henry Drayton was appointed to investigate the power situation in the Niagara district by the Dominion government, which has power to regulate the export of power, to limit and fix the price at which it shall be sold in Canada. He has investigated the matter and we have appeared before him, giving all the information we had at our disposal. He has had the case of the companies also before him, and we hope that he will not long delay his report as to the conditions existing in the Niagara district. What about the United States? Well, all I can say is that on that side they have had ample warning. I have stated this alredy, but I cannot too often repeat the statement.

Treaty Provisions.

"They know what the treaty provides; they are aware of the division that was made by the International Waterways Commission, giving the Dominion the right to use a certain proportion. You may say that is not a fair division, not an equal division, but there may have been had in mind what is being used in Chicago through the drainage canal, which was afterwards used for power purposes. At any rate, whether they had that in mind or not, can they expect more than an equal division of water at the border? The proportion is 36,000 second feet as against 20,000 the latter being our quota. At the present time in the neighbourhood of 265,000 horse power is being developed on the American side and 390,000 horse power on the Canadian side. Of the 390,000 horse power, 115,000 horse power is being exported to the American side, the net result being that Canada is using in the neighbourhood of 275,000 horse power, as against 380,000 on the American side while they have only 20,000 second feet. But they have 105,000 horse power more than we have. The coal equivalent of what we supply is two million tons, representing forty million dollars.

Force Government to Act.

Mayor Buchanan of Ingersoll made a vigorous speech. "The Government is ignoring the municipalities," he said. "We will stand it no longer. It is a funny thing if the American government can put an embargo on the export of coal and the Canadian government continue to allow electricity needed at home to be exported to the United States at the behest of the corporations. We must take such action as will make the Government sit up. I would suggest mass meetings in all the municipalities. Sir Adam Beck is the biggest man in Canada to-day. Let us get his advice and then act."

Back to Steam.

George Lippert, Hydro Commissioner, of Kitchener, declared there was the danger that industries in that city would have to go back to steam power.

"The point is that power needed in this province is being exported," said Mayor Church. "The people have stood this thing as long as they are going to. We must be assured of a continuous supply of power."

In Eastern Ontario.

"As far as Eastern Ontario is concerned, we have no shortage," said Mayor Duffus of Peterborough. "Stories of shortage are bad for the success of the Hydro in Eastern Ontario. Vigorous efforts are being made by private interests to get control of power rights in the St. Lawrence river. We must fight that."

F. W. Newman, ex-mayor of Picton, said: "We will need more power than we can get from the Trent Valley Canal. The feeling in Eastern Ontario is that the St. Lawrence River should be conserved for the Hydro.

A PETERBOROUGH NAME ON THE ROLL OF HONOUR

Brass Tablet is Unveiled in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston

A most solemn and impressive ceremony took place at the morning service in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston, Oct. 14th, when a brass tablet on which is inscribed the names of the congregation who volunteered for active service, was unveiled. The tablet, which is placed just inside of the main entrance, was unveiled by Sergt. Victor Minnes, son of T. D. Minnes, Kensington Avenue, who recently returned from the front, and brother of Sergt. Harry Minnes, who paid the supreme sacrifice. After the unveiling the members of the congregation stood with bowed heads, while the Pastor, Rev. J. W. Stevens, offered prayer.

The tablet is the gift of Hugh C. Nickle, and is a beautiful design and forms a most fitting memorial for the purpose it is intended.

The Rev. Dr. E. F. Torrance, formerly of St. Paul's, Peterborough, assisted the Pastor in the service. The Pastor preached a forceful sermon on "What is the secret of God's greatness." We could never hope, with our vision, to fathom the mysterious depth of His greatness. The secret was that of His marvellous love which was manifested in humble service.

In referring particularly to the unveiling of the tablet the speaker said: We do honour to ourselves when we honour those who are greatest of all. Those who have given their lives for our freedom. Among the list of names that appear on the honour roll are Lieut. W. Stewart Laing of Peterborough, who paid the supreme sacrifice. During the four years that Stewart Lang attended Queen's University he was a faithful member of the choir and gave his services to other branches of the Christian work in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston.

G.T.R. GRANTS 8-HOUR DAY

To Engineers and Firemen on All Its Lines

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—The Grand Trunk Railway system has agreed, it is authoritatively stated, to grant the engineers and firemen on all its lines the benefit of the Adamson eight hour day law as it obtains in the U. S. The men have also been granted an increase in wages. The engineers and firemen employed in the company's lines in the U. S. have been working under the Adamson measure since it became law. An official statement from the company in reference to the changes is expected shortly. Officials of the company and the men's union have been in conference here over the working hours and pay for some days.

Peterborough, Oct. 18, 1917.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I read with considerable interest an editorial in the Review in last night's issue dealing with the present Union Government. I agree with it that Conservatism and Liberalism will persist and that the present coalition will not likely outlast the war. To my mind these very facts prove that Canada is in this war to the finish with every ounce of strength and every available man. Such unity and self abnegation proclaim a nation which, to meet a crisis, has the courage to join all forces of action and sink all differences of opinion. We are showing ourselves worthy sons of those worthy sires who fifty years ago set an example for us to follow.

The present situation calls for real patriotic self-sacrifice both as to word and deed. It could not have been easy for men like Carvell to join hands with Borden. To the very last the late Government made itself obnoxious to all true Liberals. The forcing through of the Canadian Northern Bill and the War Franchise Bill, to say nothing of the filling up of all seats of patronage with friends of the Government were practically acts of treason when coupled with a national desire for a coalition government. But these things must for the time being be forgotten. Liberal and Conservative leaders have joined hands for their country's weal and the common good. Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself may take the place in this country that Asquith has in the old land, criticising the Government and co-operating with it as the occasion requires.

West Peterborough now has an opportunity of rising to the national need. The present Conservative candidate was nominated before there was any thought of a Union Government. No Liberal candidate has yet been nominated. In my judgment there should now be a convention of both parties to nominate a straight win-the-war man representing everybody in this constituency who wants to see this war through with the greatest possible effort and the least possible waste. Such a man be he Grit or Tory should represent a united constituency. If Mr. Burnham received the nomination he would be entitled to hearty and unanimous support; if some other received the nomination, Mr. Burnham would no doubt prove himself a big enough man to accept the situation.

Peterborough has so far proved itself equal to every demand the war has made. I believe it is equal to the demand for united, co-operative national effort.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WEARING.

GREEK CABINET MEMBERS TO BE PROSECUTED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ATHENS, Monday — Prosecution before a high court of members of the cabinet of former Premier Skouloudis with the exception of Admiral Coundourietis, was recommended in the Chamber of Deputies to-day by an investigating committee.

CLASSING MEN FOR SERVICES

Those in First Class Under Military Service Act Are Placed in Grades.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18. — Only those men found physically fit for combatant service overseas by the medical boards will be included in the first quota called to the colours under the Military Service Act. All such men are now being placed by the examiners in Category A.

Men not in flawless physical condition are being classed as to their fitness for war service in non-combatant units, either in Canada or overseas according to the shape they are in. Such men may be called up later and re-examined or they may be called for non-combatant services. The immediate need, of course, is for men fit for active service.

Experience shows that the physical condition of men varies greatly, that is, a man may improve greatly in a few weeks or months. Some of those passed as fit by the medical boards recently had been rejected by the doctors when they had applied for enlistment in the volunteer forces. A-18.

A NAVAL BATTLE

Russian Battleship Slava Sunk in Fight With German Fleet

Canadian Press Despatch:

PETROGRAD, Oct. 18. — A naval battle has occured in the Gulf of Riga between Russian and German battleships, the War Office announces. The Russian battle ship Slava was sunk. The Slava sank as the result of being hit several times beneath the water line. Nearly all the members of the crew were saved by Russian torpedo boats. The Slava, built in 1903, was an old type battle ship of 13,516 tons, 397 feet in length. Her armament consisted of four 12-inch and twelve 6-inch guns, with twenty-four secondary battery guns and four torpedo tubes. She had a compliment of 825 men. Her men were involved in the disaffection of the Baltic fleet which followed the revolution, but later were restored to favour.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Chicago Wildly Welcomes Sox

Sweep Police Aside and Block Traffic When Champions Come Home.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17. — A cheering crowd of 5,000 White Sox rooters stormed the La Salle street station late to-day to welcome home the world's champions. The crowd broke through police lines when the train arrived at 4 p.m., and, accompanied by two brass bands, swarmed around the conquerors of the Giants.

The appearance of Clarence Rowland, manager of the Chicago team, was the start of a demonstration. Some of the fans hoisted Rowland to their shoulders and carried him into the street. Traffic was blocked for twenty minutes while the the crowd sought to shake hands with the players.

With the exception of Eddie Collins, Mel. Wolfgang, Urban Faber and John Collins, every member of the team was in the party. Eddie Collins went to his home in Philadelphia from New York, and Wolfgang and John Collins left the party at Albany. Faber returned yesterday, going on to his home in Cascade, Iowa, for a hunting trip.

Rowland carried with him a check for $91,733.15, the White Sox share of the series. Twenty-five players will divide the spoils, each receiving $3,666. Trainer Bruckner, Joe O'Neill, the club's travelling secretary, and Bob Hasbrook, who did not join the team until the middle of the season, will be presented a sum.

Giants Get Their Bit.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The last touches were put on the 1917 World's Series here to-day, when John Bruce, Treasurer of the National Commission, handed a check for $61,227.38, the losers share of the series, to Captain Charles Herzog and John Lobert of the New York club. Herzig and Lobert were delegated by their teammates to receive the money, and it was distributed to them by Herzog.

The National Commission decided to comply with the request of the players not to hold out any of their World Series money, after they had pledged themselves not to participate in any exhibition games.

GROCERS WIN TWO FROM THE PRINTERS

Last night the Printers and Grocers clashed in a Five Pin League match. The Grocers were on edge in the first game when they rolled an 888 total against 730 for the Printers, also winning the second game by a good margin. The Printers, playing only four men, stuck to their post, and won the third game by 44 pins. The pinnage was, Grocers 2,315, against Printers 2,159; the former being the record for the league. Fitzpatrick, for the Grocers, made a new three-game record with a 576 total, with Gillespie, also for the Grocers, a close second, wih 523. Everett was high man for the Printers with a three-game total of 494.

The scores were as follows:

Grocers—
Gillespie	212	153	158	523
R. Ross	114	119	148	381

ST. PETER'S PATRIOTIC SOCIETY HOLD WEEKLY TEA

The weekly tea of St. Peter's Patriotic Society was held yesterday afternoon in the T.A.S. rooms and was largely attended by the members and their friends. Miss Irene Doris and Miss Sue Kelly were hostesses and Mrs. Frank Hickey poured tea. Miss Gertrude McFadden and Miss Nell McAuley assisted in the tearoom. The tables were prettily decorated with shaded candles and yellow and white 'mums.

During the afternoon Miss Ollie Tangney and Miss Marion Gorman rendered several musical selections.

NO FEDERAL POLITICS IN THE U.S. TO-DAY

Mr. Robert Hicks Says Uncle Sam is in the War With Coat Off

The evidences of the nation's determination to throw all its resources against Germany, are everywhere apparent in the United States cities and towns visited by Mr. Robert Hicks, who returned last night from a ten days' business trip in the anthracite coal district. "From these signs and the unmistakable temper of the people," he said to-day, "Uncle Sam is in the war with his coat off. Everywhere there are indications of military activity, of Government control of the resources that will be needed at home, as well as by the allied nations, and of a united political spirit that is giving the President a whole-hearted support. I met one big business man who has always been an ardent Republican. To-day he is for Wilson and his administration to the limit and declares that the President is one of the most outstanding statesmen the war has produced. He also said that this feeling was general among the Republican party. I found that even business men were eager to discuss the war even during business transactions, and generally speaking our Canadian enthusiasm appeared to be a namby-pamby quality in comparison with theirs. On the cars, everywhere, the war is the principal subject of conversation and if there are any disloyal ones they are discreetly silent. It is also evident that whatever German sentiment exists is completely suppressed."

Referring to the coal situation, Mr. Hicks expressed the opinion that the future depended largely on the freight conditions. If with the closing of the lake transportation the rails coming into Canada were kept busy there should not be a local scarcity and no higher prices. But this was a rather uncertain element. The demand is extremely heavy, and soft coal is particularly scarce.

Gunner McLeish Is In Toronto

Mrs. A. McLeish, 162 Adeline Street, has received a letter from her son, Gunner R. McLeish, of the 6th Canadian Siege Battery, in which he states he has been ill in hospital. Mrs. McLeish has had no official word from Ottawa. Gunner McLeish says: "The trouble is I have been in hospital for pretty nearly three weeks now with rheumatic and trench fever but I am getting better now. I am in hospital down at the base and they certainly treat us well here: eggs for breakfast and eggs for supper and nice roast beef, potatoes and vegetables for dinner, and then before going to bed at night some hot cocoa, bread, butter and sandwiches.

FUNERAL OF ERIC M. BOYD

The funeral of the late Eric Mossom Boyd, whose body was recovered yesterday from Pigeon Lake, took place this afternoon at 2.30 from St. John's church to the Little Lake cemetery. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Barber, rector of Picton, and the rector of Bobcaygeon.

The late Mr. Boyd, who was 21 years of age, was the son of Mr. W. T. C. Boyd, who is at present residing in Peterborough, at the corner of Hunter and Rubidge streets. Another son of Mr. Boyd's, Pte. Thornton Boyd, was killed in action on June 9, 1916. He was serving with the Princess Patricia Regiment, while a third son, Lieut. Herbert Boyd, is at the front with a British regiment. His mother and three sisters, residing in Bobcaygeon, survive.

Vogan in Fine Shape After Taking Tanlac—Has Gained 12 Pounds

I appreciate Tanlac and recommend it because it has just about made me over into a new man," declared James B. Vogan, a valued employee of the Leggett & Plat Spring Bed Company, residing at 21 Marenette street, Windsor, recently.

Four bottles of Tanlac have increased my weight twelve pounds," Mr. Vogan continued, and I tell you it would make most anybody rejoice to get the wonderful relief I have. My stomach had been giving me trouble for more than six years, and although I dieted myself I still suffered. I had severe, gnawing pains after eating and was constantly belching up my food sour and undigested. My head ached terribly and I was so nervous I couldn't hold a cup of tea steady enough to drink without spilling it. I lost weight continually, and while I tried every kind of medicine I knew of, I got in such a bad fix I lost a great deal of time from my work. For three months on a stretch I couldn't work and, when I started on Tanlac I had been off for four weeks. I just felt tired, worn out and miserable all the time.

I read such high endorsements for Tanlac that I couldn't help believing it had merit and it certainly has proven its value in my case. I eat just any and everything I want now and never have any trouble afterwards. My nerves are calm and steady, my headaches gone and I sleep every night like a log. I'm putting in full time at my work every day and feel as fresh and strong as I used to before my trouble began, so I have the best of reasons for praising Tanlac. I know what it has done for me and I'm glad to make this statement for the benefit of others who are needing just such a medicine.

OMEMEE BOY WINS THE MILITARY MEDAL

OMEMEE, Oct. 16.—Mrs. Harry Fee has returned to her home in Toronto, after an extended visit with friends in this vicinity.

Mr. Hugh Murray was a visitor to Peterborough during the past week.

Mr. Clifford Robinson, of Midland, is the guest of his father, Mr. William Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Laidley, of Janetville, were the guests of their son, Mr. Clarence Laidley, on Sunday.

Mrs. Fallis, of Bethany, was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. W. Bradburn, over the week-end.

The stork called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest MacPherson on Friday last and left a fine baby girl.

Master William White has returned home after spending a few days in Toronto with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs.. A. Byers.

Mr. Richard Morton was in Peterborough on business Saturday.

Dr. Cameron, of Peterborough, made a professional visit to town last week.

Mrs. E. Choate, of Port Hope, has returned to her home, after a pleasant visit with friends here.

Mrs. (Dr.) Irvine, of Lindsay, motored to town on Tuesday.

Mrs. J. Carey, of Sharbot Lake, is the guest of her mother-in-law, Mrs. R. Carey.

Mr. A. Yelland is busy ploughing on his farm west of Lindsay.

Mrs. Shierer and sister, Miss Maye McCaffrey, of Buckhorn, motored to town on Sunday to be the guests of their father, Mr. Charles McCaffrey, for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Sonthworth have returned home after visiting the latter's father at Cannington.

Anniversary services were held in the Anglican Church on Sunday last. The church was suitably decorated for the occasion with grain, flowers and mountain-ash berries. The choir rendered special music, also a solo by the leader, Mr. W. G. Stephenson, was much enjoyed.

Rev. Archdeacon Warren, of Peterborough occupied the pulpit and delivered a splendid address.

Mrs. Harris, of Toronto, is the guest of Miss M. Davidson.

Miss Vera Thorne entertained a number of her girl friends on Friday evening last, in honour of her birthday.

Mr. D. McMann was in Lindsay on business Monday.

Mrs. L. Lucas and children, Misses Maye, Nora and Joy, of Beaverton, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Parsons, over the week-end.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Harry Lamb on Thursday afternoon last, with a goodly attendance present. The president, Mrs. H. Magee, occupied the chair, and after the usual opening exercises, the secretary, Mrs. R. Cornwall, read the minutes of the last meeting, which were adopted. Mrs. A. Scott read a paper on "Making the Most of Twenty-four hours," Mrs. W.. Cottingham and Mrs. (Dr.) Earle also gave short papers.

The president was appointed as delegate to the W. I. Convention in Toronto, the latter part of the month. Miss Lila Parsons sang in a very pleasing voice "Why Can't a Girl Be a Soldier?" Other business transacted was the buying of two dozen yards of towelling for the Red Cross, which will be hemmed at the November meeting in order to have them ready for the next bail packed.

The meeting closed by ringing the National Anthem, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Harry Lamb and Mrs. Charles Ivory. The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. Cottingham.

Mr. J. Deyell, of Lindsay, was a visitor in town during the past week

A baby boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Cottingham on Tuesday, October 16. Congratulations.

A committee of members of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church, are busy packing Christmas boxes for our soldiers overseas.

The annual anniversary services of the Presbyterian Church will be held on Sunday and Monday, October 28th and 29th. The Rev. Dr. McKay will occupy the pulpit at the services on Sunday. There will be a tea on Monday evening. More particulars later.

Mr. Ernest MacPherson was a visitor to Lindsay last week.

The annual Rural School Fair took place at Omemee on Wednesday afternoon last. A large number of country children with their parents and friends, and most of the citizens of town were in attendance. While looking over the products which the children had brought in for exhibit one would scarcely think that food stuff could be scarce around this vicinity for another year, at least.

Several sports were run off in the early part of the afternoon, such as races of different kinds, long jump, high jump, etc. Ice cream and candies were sold on the grounds, and the children all seemed to be having a jolly time. The following is a list of the prizes given:

GRAIN MARKETS HELD STEADY

Cash Prices Unchanged Except in Oats—Snow Has Fallen in the West—Cattle Markets

Markets were steady with a firm tone, fractional changes being made in the options. Cash prices unchanged except in oats, C. W.'s quoting 1-2c higher. Corn markets firm. Considerable snow has fallen in the West in the last 24 hours, but the weather is clearing in Alberta. The cooler weather in the corn belt, it is expected, will rather help the marketing of the crop than retard it.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.31 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.20 1-2; store; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.11 1-2, including 2 1-2-cent tax, in store, Fort William.

American corn—Nominal, not quoted.

Barley—New, $1.16 to $1.18.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.72.

Manitoba flour — First patents, in jute bags, $11.50; second patents, $11; strong bakers, $10.60.

Ontario flour — Winter, according to sample, in bags, prompt shipment, $9.80 Montreal, $9.60 Toronto.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $42; bran, $35; feed flour, per bag, $3.25; middlings, $45 to $46.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 1, $12 to $13; No. 2, $11 to $11.50; mixed, $9 to $11; straw, car lots, per ton, $7 to $7.50.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards — Receipts, 39 cars, with 284 cattle, 100 calves, 1,433 hogs, and 582 sheep and lambs.

Market closed good and steady for cattle, but weak on hogs. Fresh receipts of cattle were light, but quite a few loads of held-overs made up a fairly good week-end market, and all offerings in the butcher class were readily cleaned up at good, steady prices. The stocker trade was a little dull, except for the best feeders and choice short-keep. Common light eastern stockers were a drag.

Butcher cows held steady to firm. Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs were weaker, the packers finally succeeding in getting prices down to $17.75, fed and watered, though among the early sales were a few lots at $18.
